BRANDS AIR RULE 'CRIMINAL'

G.O.P. SEES MEAL ON TIGER AS AL AND HEARST WAR

Tammany Steals Hylan Thunder.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—The choice of a mayor of greater New York City for the next four years has now become purely incidental to the determination whether Gov. Alfred E. Smith, with Tammany at his back, or William Randolph Hearst, with his newspaper following, is to rule the Democratic party in the dominating corner of the empire state.

GOV. AL SMITH. [Marceau Photo.]

With Gov. Smith and Mr. Hearst both violently erupting their opinions of each other and holding up to public view the seamy side of recent political history, the one in daily speeches, the other through his journals, the public almost has lost sight of the candidates for the Democratic nomination—State Senator James J. Walker, indorsed by Smith and Tammany, and Mayor Hylan, who seeks a third term under the Hearst banner.

Party Fate at Stake.

Aetna and Stromboli at their best had nothing on this pair of erupters one perceives from the effect of the explosion of each succeeding Smith speech and answering Hearst edition upon the political terrain hereabouts. The hardest boiled, most cynical viewers of political contests and machinations have never before witnessed the like of the crimination and recrimination, like Pelion on Ossa piled, in this bitterest and most desperate of struggles for control of a city and one can only wonder to what state it is likely to reduce the Democratic party.

No longer are the enrolled Democrats so much concerned as to whether their mayor is to be Walker or Hylan as they are whether Smith or Hearst is to be the power behind the throne. If Hylan is renominated, the governer of the state will be repudiated by his own party in his home town—than which no political repudiation can be more humiliating—and the Tammany tiger will be made to bite the dust in his first fight since Charles F. Murphy died and the Tammany leadership passed to Al Smith and George Olvany.

If Walker is nominated the governor will be vindicated and given a handsome indorsement of his leadership at home to add to other evidences of unparalleled popularity while Hearst will be impressively repudiated by the party in which he generally manages to keep at least one foot.

Three Republican Candidates.

If the public has almost lost sight of the Democratic candidates it is likewise true that it scarcely has had time between the onslaughts of Gov. Smith and Mr. Hearst upon each other and the daily bringing forth of more Democratic dirty linen to wash—it scarcely has had time to notice that there are three candidates for the Republican nomination, Frank D. Waterman, the millionaire manufacturer of fountain pens, indorsed by the Republican organization, and William M. Bennett and John J. Lyons, each of whom is challenging organization leadership.

The Republican contest, however, is merely a side show to the main performance under the Democratic big top. The Republicans are virtually marking time until it is seen whether their opponent, emerging from the primary balloting on Sept. 15, is Senator Walker or Mayor Hylan.

G. O. P. Plays Safe.

And in the current period of uncertainty as to the outcome of the Democratic contest the Republican candidates and managers are playing safe by attributing the authorship of the sad conditions from which they would rescue the city impartially to Hearst, Hylan, and Tammany. They are all guilty, say the Republicans, and the only sure cure for the city's ills is to turn the Democrats out and put in Republicans.

"Go it, Smith; go it, Hearst," is the tenor of the enthusiastic cries heard arising from the Republican sidelines. How on earth there will be anything more than a tuft of fur left in the Democratic ring after this fracas, Charles D. Hilles, Republican national committeeman; Sam Koenig, New York county chairman, and other G. O. P. leaders cannot imagine.

Hylan, with Tammany support, was defeated four years ago by the largest plurality on record, but with inter-

MITCHELL LAYS AIR DISASTERS TO WAR CHIEFS

Charges Negligence --Expects Arrest.

BULLETIN.

Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Representative Charles F. Curry of the Third California district announced here tonight that at the next session of congress he will introduce a bill to promote Col. Mitchell to the rank of major general.. Representative Curry is known as an advocate of a unified air service. He declared that every statement made by Col. Mitchell at San Antonio is true.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Defying the war and navy departments, Col. William Mitchell today dropped another bomb into air service circles. A statement issued by him contained such blunt language that he said he expected to be arrested for his remarks.

COL. WM. MITCHELL. [P. & A. Photo.]

In commenting on the fatal wreck of the Shenandoah and the failure of the Hawaiian flight with its possible loss of life, Col. Mitchell said:

"These accidents are the direct result of the incompetency, criminal negligence, and almost treasonable administration of national defense by these two departments."

Says Airmen Are Disgusted.

"As far as aviation is concerned," the statement adds, "the conduct by these departments has been so disgusting as to make any self-respecting person ashamed of the clothes he wears. Were it not for the great patriotism of our air officers and their hope for a change in condition, I doubt if a real man would remain with the colors under existing conditions."

All aviation policies, schemes, and systems are controlled and directed by nonfliers who know practically nothing about it, he said, and their errors lead to real perils and losses to the actual fliers.

Both navy and army departments maintain public propaganda agencies, he declared, and the airmen are "bluffed and bulldozed so that they dare not tell the truth in a majority of cases, knowing that if they do they will be deprived of their future career and sent to the most out of the way places."

Hawaii Not Captured.

In asking what the army and navy has done to show that existing obsolete systems should continue, Mitchell comments on the Pacific fleet manuevers, the Hawaiian flight, and the MacMillan arctic expedition.

Commenting on the heralded "capture" of the Hawaiian islands by navy craft despite the operations of the air forces, Mitchell declared that in warfare the fleet would have been bottled up in San Francisco harbor by mines planted by enemy submarines.

If surface vessels got through these the whole Pacific would be patroled by fleets of submarines, he said, and any vessel escaping the constant submarine attack by gunfire, under water torpedoes, gas and high explosives, would be met by aircraft hundreds of miles from shore and "sent to the bottom forthwith."

"What would the $50,000,000 to $80,000,00 spent on the Pacific maneuvers have meant if applied to the development of airplanes and submarines?" he asked. His proposal is for a defense ministry or department with three subsecretaries—for the army, the navy, and the air.

Charging that the Shenandoah was on a propaganda mission, to offset the publicity of the MacMillan Arctic and Pacific failures, Mitchell declared that the tour of the big ship meant little to the development of aviation.

After launching his attack, Mitchell left by airplane for a week-end fishing trip at Aransas Pass.

TEXT OF MITCHELL NOTE

Col. Mitchell's statement was as follows:

"I have been asked from all parts of the country to give my opinion about the reasons for the frightful aeronautical accidents and loss of life, equipment and treasure that has occurred during the last few days. This statement, therefore, is given out pub-

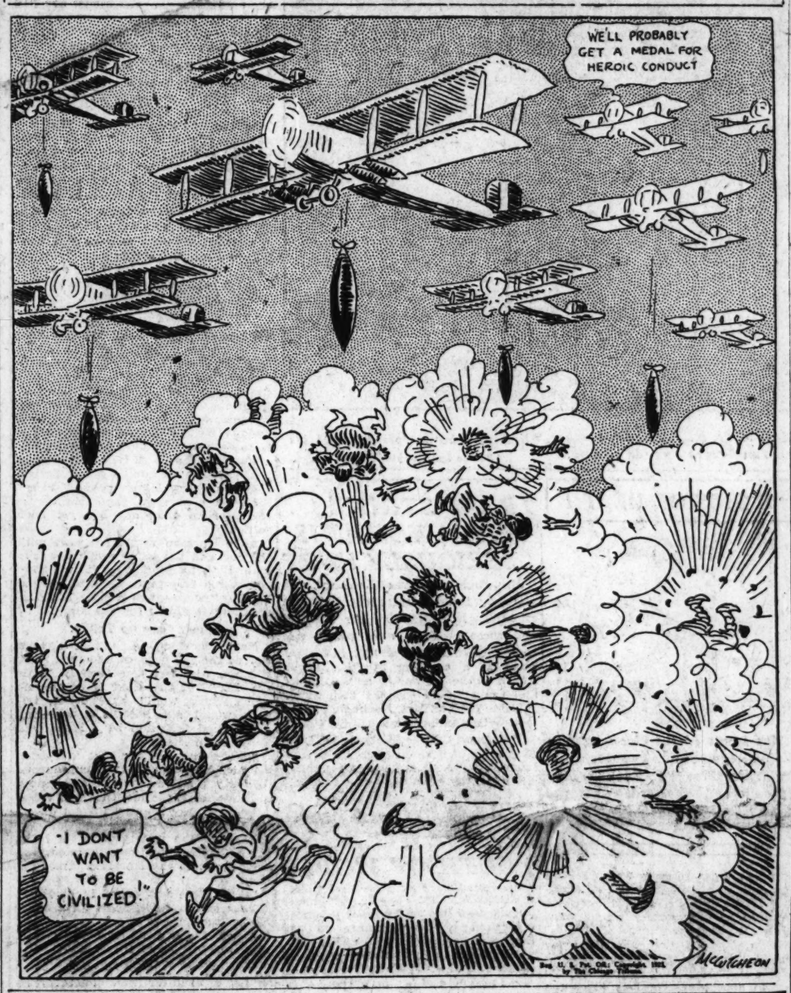
Grill Harvard Man in Kidnaping

TRYING TO CIVILIZE THE BARBAROUS RIFFIANS



OFFICIALS HINT DISCIPLINE FOR COL. MITCHELL

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Officials of the war and navy departments admitted astonishment over the statement, made by Col. William Mitchell, former chief of the army air service, charging them with stupidity, incompetence and criminal negligence and with direct responsibility for the disaster to the navy dirigible Shenandoah in Ohio Thursday.

Although incensed at this latest attack from the stormy petrel of American aviation, who has been knocking at the doors of congress to force establishment of a separate department of aviation, neither cabinet officials nor ranking officers of the air service, who are included in Col. Mitchell's blanket indictment, would discuss his unreserved allegations.

Wilbur Asks Report.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur asked that a copy of the Mitchell statement be given him as soon as possible. The same course was pursued at the war department, where Col. Mitchell was recently demoted from the rank of brigadier general and sent to San Antonio, Tex.

Whether action against Col. Mitchell would be taken could not be learned tonight. In some quarters it was stated that Col. Mitchell could not escape some punishment for his bitter charges against superior officers.

Col. Mitchell's defiance of his superiors not long ago reached the attention of President Coolidge. At that time he was ordered not to publish controversial matter regarding army subjects without first submitting his observations to the war department. He recently issued a book and in doing so disregarded this order.

Hasn't Read Statement.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Maj. Gen. Ernest Hinds, commander of the Eighth corps area, had not read Col. William Mitchell's statement tonight, he said.

"Col. Mitchell has issued many statements criticizing these departments, and unless he has gone much further than heretofore I do not expect any disciplinary action," Gen. Hinds said.

"Should there be a decision in Washington to take disciplinary action, or to investigate the authenticity of Col. Mitchell's purported statement, it is unlikely that I would receive orders before Sunday morning."

WOMAN'S STORY OF AUTO LINKS YOUTH TO CASE

Hunt for Girl Goes On Through Night.

Montclair, N. J., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Harrison Noel, 20, son of Dix W. Noel, New York attorney, and a former Harvard student, was taken to police headquarters here last night and questioned for eight hours in connection with the kidnaping of Mary Daly, 6 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David F. Daly of Montclair, at noon on Friday.

Noel, who at various times has been an inmate of sanitariums and the Essex county insane asylum, was found by detectives at the home of his father, 295 North Mountain avenue, Upper Montclair, one block from where the Daly child was snatched from her playmates. A crowd of a thousand persons gathered outside the police station when the news was spread that the youth, well known in the town, as being questioned. Noel had one year at Harvard and then suffered a nervous breakdown.

Mother Brought in by Police.

At 2:45 o'clock this morning his mother was brought to headquarters by two detectives. She was ushered into the room on the second floor where Chief of Police Edward S. Reilly and other police officials were examining her son. The police refused all information as to the result of the questioning.

Young Noel, who is six feet in height and of athletic build, accompanied the detectives to headquarters after a woman whose name was withheld telephoned Chief Reilly at 6 o'clock last night that she had observed a red automobile standing near Van Geysen's Gap. Noel has a red car. It was in front of his home last night.

Kidnaper's Car Found.

The woman's information at once impressed the police, who at noon yesterday had found the machine used by the abductor of Mary abandoned in a blind road leading off Van Geysen's Gap. The machine had come into possession of the kidnaper when he shot and killed Raymond Pierce, Negro taxicab driver, who vanished from a Verona, N. J., garage early on Thursday afternoon. Pierce's body was later found hidden in bushes on the bank of Peckham creek, near West Paterson.

The car, when found, gave evidence that Pierce had been shot dead as he sat at the wheel and had toppled over to the right. This was indicated by blood on the right side of the front cushions.

No trace of the missing girl nor of the slayer-kidnaper was found. But scores of fingerprints were noticed on the wheel and an exceptionally clear set of five finger tip marks was on the panel of the front door. The fingerprints were turned over to an expert for photographing. Copies of Pierce's fingerprints were obtained and the plan was to eliminate any of his marks found on the car.

Legion Asks to Join Hunt.

While Noel was being questioned, forty members of the Montclair post of the American Legion appeared and asked permission to search the fields near where the car was found. They said they wished to try to find the missing girl. The veterans wanted to go out in a body, carrying rifles.

Unable to reach Chief Reilly, the men sought out Henry M. Robinson, commissioner of public safety. Commissioner Robinson said that the men might go out and search but that no rifles could be taken along. The legionnaires remained at headquarters after Mrs. Noel arrived, but some of them were urging their comrades to arm and join in the search, with or without permission.

Bloodhounds Used in Hunt.

Immediately after the discovery yesterday of the automobile used by the abductor, the hunt was concentrated on the seven mile stretch of deserted woodland near the Gap, with state and county police, detectives, Boy Scouts, citizens, and bloodhounds covering every square foot of scrub ground. Chief Reilly announced that the search would be continued all night. The girl's father is in one posse.

The parents of the kidnaped child were doubly depressed last night when they learned all of the messages which came over the telephone to Mrs. Joseph A. Bower on Friday night. It

ICY SEPTEMBER HURRIES BRITISH INTO OVERCOATS

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—September has turned traitor to England, leaving thousands of vacationists, including many Americans, shivering from icy draughts, which have suddenly descended from the pole and have brought the bleakness of winter in on the heels of summer, placing overcoats and fires in great demand.

Frost, rain and in many northern places, snow, have not improved the drooping spirits of those Americans who have made England and Scotland the last lap in their European tour. The temperature went down as low as 36 and at the warmest spot the thermometer registered only 56. A fifty mile gale blew in the Irish channel and high seas swamped some coast resorts.

A party of Americans arriving from Italy, where it was 90 in the shade, suffered more than anybody else.

MRS. R. F. CARR IS NEAR DEATH OF PNEUMONIA

Mrs. Robert F. Carr, 229 Lake Shore drive, a leader in several Chicago philanthropic organizations, is seriously ill of pneumonia and not expected to recover, it was learned last night.

The Carr family had spent the summer in Estes Park, Colo., where Mrs. Carr had not been well. Upon their return to the city Wednesday her condition became worse. Last night she had been unconscious for forty-eight hours.

Mrs. Carr for many years has been director of the Woman's exchange, a trustee for the Home for Destitute Crippled Children, and connected with other charity enterprises. Her husband is president of the University club and a former president of the board of trustees of the University of Illinois.

CLOUDBURST AND TORNADO KILL 7; WRECK TOWN

Wenatchee, Wash., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Seven persons were killed, ten are unaccounted for and three were seriously injured in a cloudburst which struck Spring Valley, above Wenatchee, this afternoon.

The three story frame hotel and five houses were destroyed by the wind which struck the town along with the loudburst. The hotel was carried sixty feet by the wind and most of those killed were in it.

Rain to Break Dry Era; Heat Wave Cracks

A break came in the September hot wave late yesterday afternoon. A Chicago temperature of 95 at 4 p. m. dropped to 82 within an hour and at midnight the unofficial reading was 76.

The weather bureau promises showers. If the needed rains come a dry spell of 23 days in Chicago will be broken. Since Aug 13 practically not a drop of rain has fallen in this region.

Heat Not a Record.

Blistering though it was, the heat did not set a record for Sept. 5 in Chicago. Three years ago the mercury mounted to 96 and there have been several other years when 95 degrees was surpassed.

While the midsummer weather was oppressing thousands in Chicago, residents of the city had much to be thankful for when they learned that Harrisburg, Ill., was sweltering under a sun that shot the thermometer to 108 degrees.

Similar severe temperatures were reported from many points throughout the middle west. Several deaths were reported as due to heat in the middle west.

Corn and Hay Crops Suffer.

The prolonged spell of dry and hot weather has had a bad effect on the corn and hay crops in this area, even near to Chicago. What had promised to be a banner crop year may turn out not so good. Corn has shriveled to a considerable extent, hay and pasture lands have been drying up, and streams and wells have been affected.

In the city trees and the shrubbery have lost much of their verdant color. Leaves have been falling as they usually do in early October.

There were scattered rains yesterday in the northwest, which were said to be a forerunner of a general break in the heat and dry spell.

DROUGHT GRIPS EGYPT.

Herrin, Ill., Sept. 5.—(AP)—A "sponge bath" water ration faces southern Illinois because of prolonged drought.

Herrin long ago gave up even its Saturday wash and is buying water by the jugful at 5 cents a gallon. The water wagons call at Herrin homes each morning to leave the jugs in the same manner that milk is distributed. Families who can afford it have large tanks filled for $4.

Nine water wagons are hauling the water from Marion, ten miles away. Many persons have mounted tanks on their autos and haul water from Marion for their own use.

Some water is being drawn from abandoned mine pits for industrial use, but the large industries are hit hard. It is costing the Franklin County Coal company $3,000 a month to ship trainloads of water from the Ohio river, 50 miles away.

Real estate news will be found on page 24, Want Ad section.

THE WEATHER.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1925.

Sunrise, 6:20. Sunset, 7:16. Moon rises at 9:50 p. m. today. Venus is the evening star.

Chicago and vicinity—Showers and probably thunderstorms and cooler Sunday; Monday partly overcast and continued cooler. Moderate to fresh shifting winds.

Illinois—Partly overcast Sunday and Monday; probably showers and thunderstorms in north and central portions; cooler.

Parents Forbid Wedding; Girl Takes Poison; Dies

Miss Mary Besata, 23 years old, 1348 East Forty-eighth street, a maid, died at the Michael Reese hospital yesterday afternoon from the effects of poison which she swallowed Aug. 29 following the receipt of a letter from her parents in Czecho-Slovakia forbidding her to marry Joseph Koutny, 35 years old, 921 West 71st street, a railroad employe.

Hammond Farmer, Gored by Bull, Dies of Injuries

Gary, Ind., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Injured fatally when an enraged bull attacked him, Martin Krsack, a farmer living southwest of Hammond, died in St. Margaret's hospital, Hammond, today. The bull turned on Krsack while the man was driving him down the Lincoln highway to a neighbor's pasture.

HOPE FOR LOST FLYERS WANES; SEARCH GOES ON

HONOLULU, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Concentrated and augmented forces searching for the missing navy seaplane PN-9, No. 1, today approached the hundredth hour of their fruitless operations. The PN-9 No. 1 disappeared Tuesday afternoon being being forced down during a storm on an attempted flight from San Francisco to Honolulu.

Several navy ships put in at Pearl Harbor today for fresh supplies and fuel. The waters of the Pacific ocean within a wide radius of the point the seaplane probably landed are being systematically gone over for any sign that will indicate the fact of the five aviators who made up the crew of the plane.

Hope Failing at Frisco.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 5.—(AP)—The analysis of Capt. Stanford E. Moses, commanding the Hawaiian flight, which gave rise to hopes that the PN-9 No. 1 would be found, was based on the situation as it existed yesterday, it was stated at the office of the flight commander here.

Failure of the searching planes and vessels to find trace of the missing plane after so long a search of the vicinity where the mines sweeper Whip-poor-will reported seeing flares has served to dampen hopes of flight officials here.

E. Phillips Oppenheim

writes . . . THE SMALL TRAGEDY OF MR. TIDD

"MY dear," Mr. Tidd told his daughter bitterly, "we are among the martyrs of the earth. We are genteel paupers shivering on the verge of insolvency!" It was ghastly, this always having to live beyond one's income. After twenty years it began to tell on poor old Tidd. No wonder he succumbed to the get rich quick temptation. No wonder he eventually became a criminal in the eyes of the law. . . . An unusually fine Blue Ribbon short story in was from the Bower lawn that Mary was taken as she played happily with children of her own age. This message said:

"If the money isn't put through, the child will be dead by dawn tomorrow."

This was a part, not revealed at first, of the conversation demanding that $4,000 ransom be deposited immediately in an unnamed bank which would be open late at night in the theatrical district of New York City.

Mrs. Bower stayed close to the telephone all day yesterday hoping that another call would come. Her daughter, Phyllis, 20 years old, told of the suave and cultivated accents of the man who telephoned. He first asked her mother if she was interested in the kidnaped girl.

"Indeed I am," Mrs. Bower replied in an even tone.

Her demeanor was so calm that the man seemed caught off his guard and his tone changed at once, Mrs. Bower declared.

This episode has given the police foundation for a theory that the child is being held for ransom. They are working on the assumption that she may have been mistaken for Dorothy Coates, a niece of the Bowers, who had been staying with them for the last two weeks. Her home is in Detroit, and her relatives are wealthy. She is about the same height and age as Mary. The Dalys are in moderate circumstances, and are not likely subjects for a ransom plot.

Glove Seen as Clew.

Another possible clew was furnished by Phillip Goodwin, a Boy Scout, when he gave the police a white cotton glove and a piece of heavy flannel-like material, which he said he had found in the woods at Cedar Grove, N. J., near the spot where the abandoned car was found earlier in the day.

There were stains on both the piece of cloth and on the glove, which is of the type commonly worn by workmen, and Dr. Maurice Cohen, police surgeon, was of the opinion that the stains were of human blood.

On the theory that the stains were blood and that the piece of cloth may have been torn from the dress worn by the Daly girl, two police dogs were taken to the woods where the articles were found and put on the scent.

Started Knapp Rumor.

A description of the kidnaper, first though to be a Negro, has been obtained from two witnesses of the crime. He is a tall and athletic looking, clean shaven with blond hair, a description which quickly started the rumor that Philip Knapp who, it is charged, recently killed a chauffeur for a thrill, was working again. Young Noel, however, also is tall.

"I don't know what to think, I don't know what to think"—his eyes bloodshot, his hands trembling—Mary's father stood near the spot where the car was found and looked with a dazed and haggard air at the surrounding country.

Yesterday morning he and his brother-in-law, Walter Brannagan, had gone out by themselves in the woods, wandering about. They had shared in a hunt which had lasted all through the night before.

"If I don't get my little girl back my life will be ruined," Mr. Daly said. "I will go to any expense and will do anything to bring about her return.

Would Shoot Him Himself.

"The child scarcely knows her A B C's. Why, she doesn't even know her home address. If I see him before your men get him, chief, I'll shoot him myself."

Officer John Perrin of the motorcycle police found the discarded sedan used in the kidnaping in an unused road that runs off Bedford avenue, near Van Geysen's gap. The road ends in a quarry and is so inconspicuous the police believe the man who drove in there must have known the country thoroughly. They were told by a resident of the vicinity that he had seen the sedan, or a car like it, parked near the same spot at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning and again at 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The sedan, when Perrin found it, was 500 feet off Bradford avenue and facing it, but the tire marks indicated that it had been run in and then turned to face the main road. The windshield was spattered with mud, as if the vehicle had traveled over bad roads.

Believe Blood Stains Negro's

Capt. James Mason of the county prosecutor's office, said he believed the blood in the car to be that of Pierce.

The man who had apparently hired him must have sat in the back seat. The bullet, of .25 caliber, passed through the skull, entering at the back. The car was taken immediately to the Valley road garage and finger-print experts were summonded to go over it.

During the day Gov. George S. Silzer promised to direct the work of the troopers on the case. He made this pledge over the telephone to the father of the abducted child.

A second autopsy was performed yesterday on the body of Pierce. When his body, a bullet wound through the back of the head, was found on the banks of Peckham creek, the police announced that he had been killed at 11 a. m. Friday, only two hours before Mary was kidnaped. Later they fixed the time of his death at between 3 and 4 o'clock on Friday morning.

NEW DRY CHIEF TO BEGIN DUTIES HERE TUESDAY

Yellowley Is Ready to Apply Mop.

E. C. Yellowley, newly appointed prohibition administrator for the Illinois-Wisconsin-Indiana district, will arrive in Chicago on Tuesday to take up his new duties, according to Washington dispatches.

Reports on Friday stated Mr. Yellowley was ill at his home at the capital and that it might be two weeks before he could come to Chicago. His condition was greatly improved yesterday, however, and he announced his intention to leave Washington tomorrow.

Kennedy to Be Assistant.

As a further shock to big time bootleggers familiar with the personnel of the prohibition forces, it became known that Mr. Yellowley will bring with him as one of his chief assistants W. H. Kennedy, who was his right hand man during the three and a half years the new administrator was chief of the nation's general dry agents.

The announcement that Kennedy was to be brought on here was taken as a further verification of Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews' expressed intention to eliminate politics from the Volstead situation.

If Kennedy is made assistant administrator in charge of enforcement, and the Rev. B. E. Ewing is made assistant administrator in charge of the permit division, Illinois will be without a representative among the three controlling offices.

New Chief from South.

Yellowley is from Mississippi, Kennedy formerly was from Tell City, Ind., although he hasn't lived there in recent years, and Ewing hails from former Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes' home town—Hillsboro, O.

Like the new administrator, Kennedy was in the revenue service before the advent of prohibition, having been a storekeeper's gauger in Evansville, Ind., when the making of fine bourbon was a legitimate art.

Organized Enforcers.

With the beginning of the Volstead era, he was assigned to organize enforcement units in various sections of the country. T. E. Howard, also an old-time gauger, recently was placed in charge of the industrial alcohol situation here. Jerry Green, likewise a graduate of the gauger school, was made his chief assistant.

It is expected that Mr. Yellowley and Mr. Kennedy will direct their first efforts to the selection of agents who are to succeed themselves after the blanket dismissal Oct. 1.

CHARGE PLOT TO RUIN COMPANY; ASK $500,000

Plotting by seven men to ruin the O-Cedar corporation and its founder, Charles A. Channell, was charged in a suit filed yesterday in the Circuit court by Attorney Weymouth Kirkland. The suit is for $500,000 damages.

The defendants attempted to undermine the credit of the corporation, the bill asserts. When Channel was in England in 1923 and 1924, banking houses and credit agencies were told that he had stolen $1,600,000 from the company, it is charged.

As a result, according to the bill, some banks withdrew their credits. The damage to the company totals half a million dollars, it was said.

Those named defendants are John R. Collins, Southern Coal company, 307 North Michigan avenue; John Glover, Wizard Products company, 444 West 37th street; James R. Brown, First National Bank building; J. L. Kieflin, Fisher building; Charles P. Davis, 6 North Michigan avenue; L. Roy Curtis, and Harold F. Roberts.

TRAIN STRIKES AUTO; WOMAN IS SERIOUSLY HURT

Mrs. Arthur Hecht of Lombard, was seriously injured last night when an automible in which she, her husband and three children were riding was struck by an Aurora and Elgin freight train at a crossing in Glen Ellyn. Although the car was destroyed, Hecht and the children escaped with minor cuts and bruises. Mrs. Hecht was taken to a Wheaton hospital.

Policemen George Michaels, of Lake Forest, and Charles Rafferty, of Highland Park, were injured when they were thrown from their motorcycles.

NOW THEY WANT LEAGUE TO BOSS YOUTH OF WORLD

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

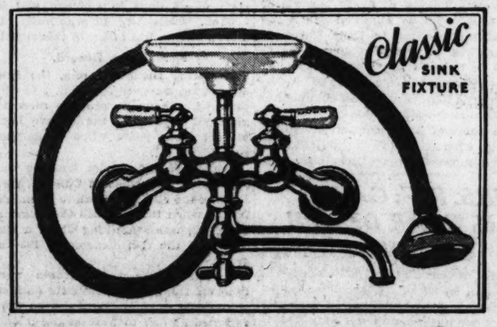
VIENNA, Sept. 5.—Dr. Siegmund Muenz, well known Austrian publicist, submitted a memorandum to the league of nations today proposing the establishment of a commission to draw up an ethical guide for the use of youth of all nations and for the purpose of instilling a spirit of international good will and friendship and combatting aggressive nationalism. The commission would supervise history textbooks, the games of student organizations and motion pictures, with a view to eliminating propaganda making for international and interclass war, but not interfering with legitimate nationalism. The supervision of newspapers along similar lines was also suggested.

SHOOTS TO SCARE; FINED $200.

In future John Duncan, who owns a barber shop at 206 East 35th street, will use his fists when he fights. He fired a shot in the air to scare Harry Merrell, 4133 Prairie avenue, out of his shop—and the gun wouldn't stop firing until all six chambers had been emptied and Merrell wounded twice. Yesterday Judge L. P. Harris sent Duncan to the Bridewell for 60 days and imposed a fine of $200.

Evanston Building in 1925 Nears Total for All 1924

Permits for buildings that will cost a total of $9,616,420 have been issued in Evanston since Jan. 1, according to official figures made public yesterday. During the entire year 1924 permits were issued for construction to cost $10,219,604. Two permits are now pending for apartment buildings to cost a total of $750,000.



Where Every Day Is Labor Day

The kitchen sink is one machine that operates 365 days a year—several hours a day. No wonder most women hate the very sight of it.

The real beauty of the Classic is that it shortens those hours, makes all that work that pivots around the kitchen sink easier and more pleasant.

You'll notice a big difference in your attitude towards kitchen work the day you add the Classic to your collection of household conveniences. It costs less than most of them, helps more than any of them and there's nothing to pay for maintenance and service.

Your plumber can install one in a jiffy without any muss or bother. Tell him you want a Classic. Price, $15.00.

Race Death to Take Bolt from Lung of Boy, 11

Rockford, Ill., Sept. 5.—(AP)—A race across the country against death starts here at dawn tomorrow. With the best surgical talent here unable to remove a two and a half inch carriage bolt imbedded in the lung of Roy Kruger, 11, who swallowed it several days ago, he is being rushed to a Philadelphia specialist and hospital.

Weather has been an ally of death in the youngster's fight to live. It was the extreme heat of the last few days which brought on a crisis, and it is a forecast of violent thunderstorms which made physicians and his parents cancel a plan to leave here by airplane tonight.

Instead they will go by train.

POLICE BAFFLED BY PROBLEM OF TRILBY, A DOG

Her Owner Sent to Home; Won't Leave Her.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

When "Fat Harry" Harmon picked up and left home a year or so ago it got to be pretty hard sledding for his 65-year-old mother, Mrs. Alice Harmon, and her Boston bulldog, Trilby.

But it was when the old building in which she lived at 18th and Wabash caught fire four months ago that the shoe really began to pinch.

All her belongings were destroyed. She couldn't go back to the old burned out building. "Fat Harry" was gone—he had never come back. Alice Harmon was old, she was alone, she had no home, she had no relatives and no friends. Only one friend—Trilby, the dog. But no means whatever.

No Friends, No Home.

The old lady became a pathetic derelict. Just a homeless wanderer out on the south side, a familiar, gray, shuffling figure, silver haired and rather tottering and weak, never enough to eat at all, and never a place to call her own to lay her head.

And always the dog, "Trilby," was with her. Sort of a Mary's lamb proposition—where ever old Alice Harmon went the dog was sure to go.

Well, about once a week she used to wander into the Harrison street police station at night with her dog and ask for lodging. And thus she became eventually a police problem.

Sentenced to Infirmary.

Lieut. William Bush decided that she could not much longer wander and shuffle about; that she must be committed "over the hill." So when she came again for lodging last Tuesday night she was "booked" for disorderly conduct and on Wednesday morning Judge Howard Hayes sentenced her to the county infirmary at Oak Forest.

Now all who go to Oak Forest must pass through the county jail and when they took Alice Harmon and "Trilby" there on Wednesday night there rose the problem that has not yet been settled.

Alice Harmon would not part with the dog and the jailor would not take it in. Both were adamant. There were hot words and in the end Alice and "Trilby" were taken back to the Harrison street annex for the night.

Won't Give up Trilby.

Next morning a kindly keeper waived the jail passage and took Alice Harmon and the dog directly "over the hill." But there the same trouble arose. They would have Alice, but they would not have the dog—and Alice stood firm and so did the Oak Forest authorities.

"'Twas her barking that awakened me and kept me from being burned to death up there on the third floor in the Wabash avenue fire," said Alice. "She saved my life and I'll not desert her now."

Back to the county jail, and the same argument, no dogs allowed; and back again to the Harrison street annex.

"What'll we do?" asked Lieut. Bush. A case of too much heart all around. No policeman had the heart to take the dog. Neither had any of the matrons. At last some one said:

What Will Be Result?

"Let us send for the dog catcher; he has no heart; he'll do it."

Well, there you are. There sits Alice Harmon in the Harrison street annex with "Trilby" on her lap.

What will the dog catcher do when he gets there? And what will Alice Harmon do when he does it?

HOW ROADHOUSES FOIL INJUNCTIONS REVEALED IN BILL

How roadhouses evade court injunctions closing them for a year was revealed yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Frank Peska, who filed a second bill for an injunction against the Harlem Inn, notorious resort of Stickney, Ill.

An injunction against the inn was obtained some months ago. The proprietors merely moved from 4207 Harlem avenue a few doors away to 4225 Harlem avenue, Mr. Peska explained. Evidence that the house was being used for immoral purposes was obtained in a raid by Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman and made the basis for the second injunction suit.

"If I get an injunction against this second place, the Harlem Inn will probably take up a new address," said the prosecutor. "If roadhouses keep up this practice, half the houses in outlying suburbs will be plastered with injunctions."

PHOENIX POLICE CHIEF ADDS GUN TO BANDIT'S LOOT

Chief of Police John Sarnowski of the village of Phoenix saw four men, each carrying two revolvers, dash into the soft drink parlor of Walter Bober, 560 East 155th street, last night. The chief drew his own weapon and followed, but one of the bandits had him covered when he entered.

The four escaped with the chief's revolver and $800 and two watches taken from Bober and six patrons who were lined up with the chief.

ALLIED FOREIGN CHIEFS PREPARE TO MEET GERMAN

Security Pact Parley May Be Held in Italy.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GENEVA, Sept. 5.—While the league of nations council today dealt with the endless problem of Hungarian minorities in Roumania and the financial control of Austria, Austen Chamberlain of Great Britain, Aristide Briand of France, Sig. Sciajola of Italy, and M. Vandervelde of Belgium discussed the security question.

The report was current this afternoon that the allies had agreed on the principle of a meeting with Foreign Minister Stresemann to work out the security question. The date and place of the conference was not set, but it was rumored that one of the resorts on the Italian lakes will be picked in the hope that Premier Mussolini will attend. The meeting will probably be held in October.

The legal experts arrive from London Monday with their draft of the security pact, which the allies will examine and then transmit to Berlin for Herr Stresemann's opinion.

A most conciliatory atmosphere surrounds the conversations on the security pacts. The allied foreign ministers say the draft of the treaty now being prepared will be subject to any moderate changes which Germany may propose.

Loosen Austria's Financial Control.

After hearing the reports of the French economist, Charles Rist, and the Briton, T. W. Layton, who have been investigating the situation in Austria, the league council decided to grant the Vienna government's request to loosen up the financial dictatorship, which the Rotterdam burgomaster, Alfred Zimmerman, the league's high commissioner, has been exercising and allow the Austrian government more latitude in the handling of its finances.

Dr. Zimmerman, whom the Austrians want ousted, will be offered another post. It is likely that an American will be named to supersede him following the excellent results of Jeremiah Smith's operations as league commissioner in Hungary.

Roumania Offers to Settle.

The Roumanian government today offered the council a proposition to settle with 2,285 Hungarians for 720,000 acres of land expropriated in Transylvania for 720,000 gold francs ($144,000). The council urged Hungary to accept the offer otherwise the whole row about the mistreatment of the Magyar minorities in Roumania's newly acquired province will be submitted to The Hague court.

Senator Capper of Kansas and many other Americans were interested spectators of the league's work today.

ONE OF A SERIES OF THE MOST POWERFUL ADVERTISEMENTS EVER PRINTED FOR ANY CAR

Stutz value is built on satisfactory service

THE CAR THAT MADE STUTZ GOOD IN A DAY

"Words Cannot Express It!"

Compare this statement of fact with the "super-superlatives" of the ordinary automobile advertisements. Words are inadequate to express the satisfaction of Mr. James McGuinness of Philadelphia. Here is what experience has taught him about Stutz value:

"Words cannot express my satisfaction and today I would not exchange my Stutz for a new medium priced car. The performance of my car has been remarkable. It has made several trips to Nova Scotia from Philadelphia, and return without delay, due to the perfect construction of the car. The car has not been in the repair shop in three years and is very easy on rubber."

Multiply this owner's statement by that of thousands of Stutz owners. Add the fact that four out of five cars ever built by this factory are still in service at proved lower upkeep costs. Then with these FACTS in mind—try STUTZ for yourself. The proof awaits you—here and NOW!

ARGONNE MOVIE THRILLS VETS OF 5TH DIVISION

"Greatest Hero" Talks of Pershing Tribute.

Ghosts who made an immortal record on the battlefields of France last night wandered themselves fighting in the great Argonne-Meuse offensives that ended the war, at St. Die and St. Mihiel and in other drives, in motion pictures taken from the archives of the war department for the fourth annual reunion of the Society of the Fifth Division, which opened yesterday at the Hotel Sherman.

Strange fighting with bayonet and rifle and pistol, hand to hand struggles to the death, men going over the top, men being obliterated by bursting shells, men charging and suddenly giving a jerk and tumbling in grotesque fashion down on the ground—all these sights they had seen so often back in '17-'18—these again greeted the veterans who went through "over there."

Sighs for Buddies Gone West.

And many a sigh there was for a buddie gone, and many an exclamation of "I was there," or "That looks like Jimmy Wilson gone west," or of "There's where Sam Woodfill did his stuff."

For verily Sam Woodfill was there in the room—the outstanding hero of the war, so designated by Gen. John J. Pershing, after he had, as lieutenant of the 60th infantry, company M, in a single day and single handed, captured three machine gun nests in the Argonne forest, killed twenty-one of the men in them, and taken the remaining three prisoners.

Although the business sessions of the reunion do not start until tomorrow, some three hundred odd of the veterans were registered from every state in the Union last night.

All Outfits Represented.

And there were men from every sort of outfit. In the division were the 6th, 11th, 60th, and 61st. infantry regiments; the 19th, 20th, and 21st field artillery; the 13th, 14th and 15th machine gun battalions; the 7th engineers; the 9th signal corps batallion, and the 5th sanitary, ammunition and supply trains.

The motion pictures were the feature of yesterday's proceedings. They were shown by a special man sent here from Washington with them by the war department for the veterans and they consisted of the choicest battle scenes, three reels culled from fifteen original reels.

Sergt. Woodfill arrived in the city early in the morning and spent a busy day visiting points of interest about the city.

A typical army man this "outstanding hero." Big and husky and tight lipped and grim, two fisted and man to deal with; yet with a merry twinkle in the sinister, cold blue eye, and a smile seeming to be trembling to be let out all the time.

Comments on Pershing Tribute.

What was it, he was asked, that caused Pershing to designate him the outstanding hero? He thinks it's a matter of the pure destruction of men, the fact that he was able to shoot so straight and kill so many in the tight places. And he tells modestly of the three machine gun nests that day.

What qualities does a man have to have to do things like that? Must he have the courage literally to walk into the face of the fire?

"No," said Sergt. Woodfill, "that isn't it. No man could walk into the face of machine gun fire and live. It's army training and a knowledge of woodcraft, the ability to handle the arms of war; knowing the art of approach on the fortified post of the enemy and being able to use a gun or revolver with deadly and lightningliike precision.

Tells Use of Experience.

"I had the advantage of my men, that's why I went in myself. I had thirty years in the army. They were mostly green men. It was my knowledge of military tactics that enabled me to do it. The Argonne was a virgin forest, large trees and heavy underbrush—that's where my knowledge of woodcraft came in."

The veterans will go on theater, automobile and cabaret parties today and tonight. The reunion will close with a banquet tomorrow night.

URGES SPEEDY ENROLLMENT IN OPENING SCHOOLS

McAndrew Wants Pupils at Work.

Chicago school children—nearly half a million of them—today and tomorrow are celebrating the last remaining days of vacation.

At nine o'clock Tuesday morning, the doors of twenty-five high, five junior high, and 180 elementary schools, manned by 11,000 teachers, will swing open to receive the throng, expected this year to exceed by nearly 20,000 any previous opening enrollment.

Urges Speedy Registration.

Final plans for handling the annual invasion were completed yesterday by Supt. William McAndrew, in a special conference with his staff and assistant superintendents. Speed in registration, it was announced, will be the chief objective.

"Get down to a working basis as soon as possible," ordered the superintendent in a bulletin to principals following the meeting. "Segregate pupils needing special attention; get the others organized in classes at once and instruct teachers to be ready with new and interesting oral instruction for them. An atmosphere of business and work should be secured from the very start."

Warning against loafing during the registration period for pupils entering high school, thereby allowing them to return and disrupt the work of their former grade schools, was especially stressed.

"Parents can help expedite registration by bringing birth certificates for children entering school for the first time," said the superintendent. Birth records may be obtained in the city hall, room 707.

Plenty of Teachers.

Despite the heavy increase expected in enrollment, there will be an overabundance of teachers this year, it was announced. Instructors with temporary certificates will not be used to fill vacancies in the teaching staff until all holders of regular certificates have been placed.

Buildings and equipment have never been in better condition, according to John E. Byrnes, business manager of the board. Fifteen new buildings and additions have been completed during the summer, reducing the seat shortage from 75,000 to 30,000.

GET FOUR MORE JURORS TO TRY DRAKE OUTLAWS

Four jurors were accepted yesterday to try the Drake hotel bandits in the court of Chief Justice Hopkins. For three days not a juror had been selected. Eight jurors now have been chosen to try the two, Jack Wilson and Joseph Holmes, for the murder of Frank B. Rodkey, a cashier.

Judge Hopkins, whose term as chief justice of the Criminal courts, ends on Labor day, announced that he will hold court on that day in an effort to select the remaining four jurors. The fifth call for 100 more veniremen was issued yesterday.

So far 220 veniremen have been examined since the trial openel last Monday.

EX-POLICEMAN LANDS IN CELL ON RUM CHARGE

The little notebook carried by Patrick F. Sullivan, former New City policeman but of late said to be teamed up with Joe Saltis in beer running enterprises, landed him in a federal cell charged with prohibition law violation Friday night. He had been arrested Thursday as a suspect in the murder of William Dickman, a beer runner.

That same notebook yesterday helped Detective Lieutenant Michael La Valle to intercept a delivery of 20 barrels of real New York beer to Sullivan's saloon at 5445 South Robey street. The beer was caught on a truck in the rear of the saloon.

Sam Ragan, 532 West 47th street, and Henry Peterson, 304 West 47th street, who were piloting the load of beer, were arrested, but protested vigorously that they thought they were conveying a consignment of one-half of one per cent beverage.

Husband, Cleaning Gun, Drops It; Wife Wounded

While cleaning his revolver in the living room at his home late yesterday, Michael Tenerilli, 532 South Halsted street, dropped the weapon and it was discharged on striking the floor, the bullet wounding his wife, Mrs. Katherine Tenerilli, 23 years old, in her right shoulder.

Autoist Dies at Wheel; Car Crashes Into Home

Waterloo, Ia., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Wm. P. J. O'Connell, 66, dead at the wheel of his automobile, the machine crashed over the curbing and into a residence, wrecking the car and damaging the building. O'Connell died from a heart attack, physicians state.

Sergt. Samuel Woodfill and Mrs. Woodfill arrive in Chicago to attend convention of Fifth division.

CHICAGO SUBWAY PURCHASE PLAN IS HELD ILLEGAL

The Chicago Municipal Subway company's proposal to acquire existing transit facilities and to construct a comprehensive subway system, with the $40,000,000 traction fund placed in trust as their guarantee of repayment, is held illegal in an opinion given Ald. J. B. McDonough, chairman of the council trnasportation committee, by Corporation Counsel F. X. Busch yesterday.

The scheme, providing that the traction fund with its interest accumulations and other accretions be held in trust for at least 60 years to secure $300,000,000 of purchase and construction bonds to be issued by the subway company, is a violation of constitutional provisions limiting the city's indebtness, according to Mr. Busch.

Summarized, the plan offered by the subway company, composed of Edwin D. Wheelock, Frederick Short and James W. Hedinberg, retired realty dealers, contempaltes unification of existing facilities with about 118 miles of single track subway, on a cost plus ten per cent profit basis.

AMERICAN BORN CHINESE MEET IN CHICAGO SEPT. 15

More than 1,000 American born citizens of Chinese descent are expected to attend the tenth annual convention of the United Parlors of the Chinese-American Citizens alliance, to be held in Chicago beginning on Sept. 15.

The main issue to be discussed by the delegates will be the restriction placed on Chinese immigration, and it is probable that resolutions of protest will be passed.

The principal object of the alliance, according to its officers, is to foster American ideals and make better citizens of its members. William P. Lee, of the Chicago parlor, is in charge of arrangements for the convention.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE.

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Steven Krendrick of Peoria, Ill., is held under $10,000 bond for manslaughter. Miss Josephine Weeks, a stenographer, was run down by Krendrick's truck.

TEN YEARS' LABOR ON NEW LEXICON CUTS LIFE SHORT

George E. Schubert, one of the oldest of the government's immigration inspectors in point of service, died at his home, 3227 West 62d place, late Friday.

Linguist, art connoisseur and literary authority, his death is attributed to overwork on his unfinished dictionary of the English and Serbo-Croat languages. His friends believe that his life was shortened fully ten years by his constant writing and study at nights on this work. it was his oft-expressed hope that he would be able to finish the dictionary, which he believed would make it much easier for Serbs and Croats to learn the language and thereby speed the process of Americanization.

Mr. Schubert was born at Sibenik, Jugo-Slavia, in 1858. At the age of 15 years he worked his way to America and settled in New York. He came to Chicago a year later, learned English and organized the first night classes at the old Jones school, where he taught English to newly arrived immigrants of his race.

A deep student of criminology and a master of nearly all European tongues, Mr. Schubert traveled extensively for the immigration service. On many occasions he was called on as a translator of foreign documents.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at the family residence.

2 Dead, 1 Wounded, Toll of Battle with Squatter

Santa Cruz, Cal., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Under Sheriff R. H. Roundtree and Paul H. Woodside, a squatter at Aptos Beach, near here, are dead, and Sheriff Howard V. Trafton was probably mortally wounded in a shooting affray following an attempt to arrest Woodside on a charge of threatening persons approaching his property.

GIRL IS OVERCOME BY GAS.

Miss Elizabeth Riley, 25 years old, was taken to the county hospital last night after she had been overcome by gas in her home at 2014 North Clark street. Her friends told the police she had been in ill health for several months and turned on the gas while despondent. At the hospital it was said she will recover.

Pope Grants Audience to Frank Comerford, Chicago

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Sept. 5.—Frank Comerford, Chicago attorney, today received a private audience with the pope, who remembered meeting Mr. Comerford in 1919. The pope was then in Warsaw on a diplomatic mission for the Vatican. Mr. Comerford was gathering information regarding the bolsheviki plans for an international revolution. He later wrote a series of articles for THE TRIBUNE, and also used his information in obtaining a conviction of red conspirators in Chicago.

Earthquake Recorded on Cleveland Seismograph

Cleveland, O., Sept. 5.—(AP)—An earth tremor, beginning about 11:11 a. m. and lasting almost an hour, was recorded on the seismograph of John Carroll university late today.

"Prophet" Also Notes Quake.

FAENZA, Italy, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The seismograph at the observatory of Raphael Bendandi, Italy's earthquake prophet, recorded a violent seismic disturbance this morning. The indications were that the shock was about 124 miles distant.

COP, WOUNDED, HELPS SEIZE 2; WINS $100 AWARD

Tribune Rewards Hero of Bandit Battle.

Policeman Edward J. O'Brien of the Marquette district, who, although seriously wounded in a desperate encounter with two armed taxicab bandits, helped capture the pair, will receive THE TRIBUNE'S $100 prize for the most conspicuous act of bravery in the police department during August.

Other policemen, including Sergt. John Rank and Policeman Samuel Black of the Stanton avenue district, and Sergt. John Hardy of the Town Hall command, with Policeman John Afair, Harry Wheadon, John Steib, and Frank Grady, members of a detective bureau squad, whose heroism under fire merits honorable mention, will probably receive extra compensation for the remainder of the year from Chief of Police Collins.

Attracted by Frantic Signal.

Early in the morning of Aug. 8, Policeman O'Brien, guarding a building at 1136 South Western avenue, was attracted by the frantic signaling of a taxicab chauffeur, as the latter's automobile ground to a sudden stop at Grenshaw street and Western avenue.

Suspecting a holdup, O'Brien advanced toward the cab, ordering its two occupants to alight with their hands up. Moving as if to comply, the men both drew revolvers and, as they stepped to the ground, fired a volley at O'Brien. One of the slugs tore into O'Brien's right arm, but, undaunted, the policeman grappled with the men, in an attempt to disarm or at least hold them until aid could be summoned.

In the mêlée the men rained savage blows on O'Brien with their guns, finally beating him to the ground. As they were kicking him to finish the job, O'Brien recovered his own revolver and with his first shot brought down one of the bandits. The other turned and fled, but was captured a few blocks away by a detective squad.

Both Held In Huge Bonds.

At the Bridewell hospital, the men were identified as Ben Wagner, 1210 South Peoria street, and Thomas Collier, 745 Sebor street, thugs with long criminal records. Wagner, who was shot through the right lung and shoulder by O'Brien, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $2,100,000 on twenty-one charges of robbery by Municipal Judge John H. Lyle. Collier was bound oved in bonds of $1,100,000 on eleven charges of robbery.

"Sol Alexander, 28 South Kedzie avenue, the chauffeur who directed O'Brien's attention to the two men, asserted that as soon as they entered his cab, he suspected they were the same pair who had been preying on taxicabs in the neighborhood for several weeks.

Sergt. Rank and Policeman Black were standing at 338 East 35th street on the morning of Aug. 10 when they heard a series of shots. Dashing toward South Park avenue and 35th street, they encountered a colored man armed with a revolver. Then only a few feet away the colored man fired at the policemen, neither of whom was harmed, however. Rank and Black returned the fire and killed the man, who later was identified as Robert Wesby, a nescaped convict, sentenced to Joliet in February for two robberies.

Battle Pair of Auto Bandits.

Sergt. Hardy, with Policemen Adair, Wheadon, Steib and Grady, engaged in a gun battle with a pair of automobile bandits, who, after stealing a car from the Schach garage at 4637 Ravenswood avenue on Aug. 31, made a quick tour of nearby restaurants and oil filling stations, holding them all up. One of the victims noted the description and license number of the automobile and the policemen set out to find it.

Sighting the car at Leland and Ravenswood avenues, the policemen gave chase, until the bandits' car skidded into the curb at Berteau and Ashland avenues. Continuing the pursuit on foot, the policemen cornered one of bandits in a garage and the other escaped. Sergt. Hardy and Adair entered the garage and, after locating their man, crouched behind a barrel, exchanged shots with him until he surrendered.

Heroism Rewarded

THOUSANDS FLEE TO COUNTRY FOR LABOR DAY REST

No Official Celebrations Planned Here.

Although no official program has been arranged by leaders of Chicago labor, Labor day will be celebrated tomorrow by thousands of Chicagoans, who began an exodus from the city yesterday to fields of recreation in the country.

In other years the loop district has been the scene of a great parade, a demonstration which was stopped when certain labor officials were charged with bartering with politicians on the numerical strength of the parade for their individual benefit.

Roads Are Jammed.

Shortly after noon yesterday the highways leading from the city to the west, north, and south sides were jammed with automobiles, the congestion being so great that the machines were forced to crawl along. It is believed that similar congestion will mark the return of the Labor day vacationists.

Railroads were compelled to add extra trains to handle the rush of the Labor day business. The Chicago and Northwestern increased its service by forty-eight trains. Other railroads also put on extra trains.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis will deliver an address tomorrow morning at Mooseheart. The labor secretary, in addition to occupying the federal position, is mayor of Mooseheart. A large delegation of Chicago members of the Loyal Order of Moose will make the trip to Mooseheart to hear Secretary Davis' speech.

No Deliveries of Mail.

Arthur C. Lueder, postmaster, announced that no mail deliveries will be made by carriers on Labor day and that the main postoffice will be closed all day. The postmaster said that special delivery service will be maintained all day and that a retail stamp window at the main office will be open until midnight. The general delivery window, he said, will be opened from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m.

As a Labor day greeting, Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, composed a Labor day Idyll. The Idyll in part follows:

"The dignity of labor is a wonderful blossom which flowers only on the thorny stem of willing effort, rooted deep in the knowledge of life. It is the essential joy of existence, for it is the consciousness of achievement. At its coming the barriers between the artisan and artist vanish as the mists of the night before the rays of the morning sun."

SEEKS DAUGHTER AFTER 13 YEARS.

Mrs. Bertha Moses Thamatos, 1137 South Homan avenue, yesterday appealed to Assistant State's Attorney Marie O. Anderson for aid in finding Mrs. Thamatos' daughter, now aged 14 years, who was left in the Jewish Foundling hospital for adoption 13 years ago. Mrs. Thamatos was only 14 years old when the baby was born.

CIVIC LEADERS JOIN FIGHT FOR REDISTRICTING

Will Meet Sept. 14 for Campaign.

City officials, heads of practically every local business, civic, and social organization, labor leaders and newspaper publishers, as well as the mayors and presidents of all nearby suburbs, named by Mayor Dever recently to lead the fight for fair representation for Chicago and Cook county in the state legislature, will meet for the first time in the city council chamber Sept. 14.

The call for the organization meeting is being issued by Ald. John Toman (23d), who sponsored the council resolution creating the commission, which is composed of 150 of the county's leading citizens.

Fight for Constitution.

The commission, it is expected, will make a campaign to arouse sentiment to demand reapportionment of the state in accordance with the Illinois constitution.

The resolution adopted by the council recommends the preparation of plans for the secession of Cook county from the rest of the state if the next legislature fails to act on the redistricting plan.

"It is hoped that this attempt to secure Chicago and Cook county's rights in the legislature will be the most completely nonpartisan effort ever made to accomplish anything," declared Ald. Toman yesterday. "If we can show downstate that every interest in the county is as one in this demand for just representation, we cannot fail. With that in mind, this commission will be as free from politics as it is possible to make it.

Movement Is Nonpartisan.

"Representatives of every political party and faction in the county are invited to participate, of course, but our aim is to subordinate personal ambitions and politics to the selection of the most able business men in the county to lead this movement."

Here's Prize Candidate for Absent Minded Title

Los Angeles, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Elmer F. Fields was taken to the hospital today, suffering from a self inflicted wound which surgeons say may prove fatal. He had just arrived from Enid, Okla., and after waiting for hours for his wife, Naomi, to meet him, had tried to end his life. Hospital attaches, in undressing him, found in his pocket the postcard addressed to his wife asking her to meet him. He had forgotten to mail it.

GANGSTERS SLAY AND CREMATE FOE IN FLAMING AUTO

Vengeance Ends Another New York Gun Feud.

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—New York gangsters wrote another page of their record today. In front of a house at 338 East 81st street, a closed automobile, soaked in gasoline, burned to a skeleton, and when firemen put out the flames they found sitting bolt upright in the coach, his hands tied behind him, the charred body of a man. He later was identified as Morris Grossman, 29. Four bullets were in his body.

Fingers Clew to His Identity.

Grossman, a gangster, was known over the east side as Mike Clancy. Two fingers of the man gave prints that coincided with those of Grossman in police headquarters. Grossman was tried and acquitted of the murder of a rival gangster, Charlie Rossenhouse, on May 27.

The murder was as deliberate and ingenious as any the police have encountered in years.

The car itself was stolen early in July. It was the property of George Murren, Newark, N. J.

Under Police Eye for Years.

Grossman, the police said, had been under surveillance for several years and thely believe his murder was only another chapter in the long history of gang wars. The theory is that rival gangsters riddled his body with bullets, tied his hands behind him and burned him up in the gasoline soaked auto, hoping to remove all trace of the crime.

TIRES WITH 500 NAIL HOLES LEAK NO AIR.

A new puncture-proof inner tube has been invented by a Mr. M. E. Milburn of Chicago. In actual test it was punctured 500 times without the loss of air. This wonderful new tube increases mileage from 10,000 to 12,000 miles and eliminates changing tires. It costs no more than the ordinary tube. Mr. M. E. Milburn of the Milburn Puncture Proof Tube Co., 336-338 West 47th St., Chicago, is making a special offer to car owners to introduce these wonderful tubes. Write or call today.—Adv.

MITCHELL LAYS AIR DISASTERS TO WAR CHIEFS

Calls Air Rule Criminal; Expects Arrest.

licly by me after mature deliberation and after a sufficient time has elapsed since the terrible accidents to our naval aircraft, to find out something about what happened.

"My opinion is as follows:

"These accidents are the direct result of the incompetence, criminal negligence and almost treasonable administration of the national defense by the navy and war departments.

"In their attempts to keep down the development of aviation into an independent department, separate from the army and navy, and handled by aeronautical experts, and to maintain the existing systems, they have gone to the utmost lengths to carry their point.

Dictated by Non-Fliers.

"All aviation policies, schemes, and systems are dictated by the non-flying officers of the army and navy, who know practically nothing about it. The lives of the airmen are being used as pawns in their hands.

"The great congress of the United States, that makes laws for the organization and use of our air, land and water forces, is treated by these two departments as if it were an organization created for their benefit, to which evidence of any kind, whether true or not, can be given without restraint.

"Officers and agents sent by the war and navy departments to congress have almost always given incomplete, misleading or false information about aeronautics, which either they knew to be false when given or was the result of such gross ignorance of the question that they should not be allowed to appear before a legislative body.

Air Force Kept Muzzled.

"The airmen themselves are bluffed and bulldozed so that they dare not tell the truth in the majority of cases, knowing that if they do, they will be deprived of their future career, sent to the most out of the way places to prevent their telling the truth and deprived of any chance for advancement unless they subscribe to the dictates of their non-flying bureaucratic superiors. These either distort facts or openly tell falsehoods about aviation to the people and to the congress.

"Both the war and navy departments maintain public propaganda agencies, which are supposed to publish truthful facts about our national defense to the American people. These departments, remember, are supported by the taxes of the people and were created for the purpose of protecting us from invasion from abroad and from domestic disturbances from within.

"What has actually happened in these departments is that they have formed a sort of union to perpetuate their own existence, largely irrespective of the public welfare—and acting, as we might say about a commercial organization that had entire control of a public necessity, 'as an illegal combination in restraint of trade.'

Ashamed of the Uniform.

"The conduct of affairs by these two departments, as far as aviation is concerned, has been so disgusting in the last few years as to make any self-respecting officer ashamed of the uniform he wears.

"Were it not for the patriotism of our air officers and their absolute confidence in the institutions of the United States, knowing that sooner or later existing conditions would be changed, I doubt if one of them would remain with the colors—certainly not if he were a real man.

"The story is a long one, beginning practically with the inception of aviation in this country, so I shall mention only a few things in connection with the disgraceful performances which have occurred this summer.

"Seeing no progress in our efforts, which had been continued for years, to convince or even seriously interest the governing bodies of the war and navy departments to better our aeronautical condition, we were stirred to further action by the killing of Lieut. Pierson and Capt. Skeel in the dilapidated racing airplanes during last Octobers' air meet.

"This was caused by an arrangement between the navy and army that the navy should take the racers one year and the army should take them the next year, thereby equalizing propaganda, not service.

"Instead of building new airplanes, our men were given the old crates to fly at those terrific speeds. Of course, they came to pieces, as they were designed for only one race two years before. This was done in spite of the fact that we had sufficient money to build new ships according to entirely advanced patterns and new safety factors.

Issue Forced on Congress.

"We in the air fraternity, then and there decided to put the issue squarely up to congress and the people. We received an immediate response from the people and congress, because they saw the right of our proposition, which was to make a single department of national defense with sub-secretaries for the land, the air and the water, each to have an equal voice in our national defense system.

"The general scheme, by the way, has been adopted by practically every civilized country in the world. Had this measure reached the floor of the house of representatives last winter, it probably would have passed by a large majority.

"Congress also provided that not less than $50,000 out of moneys already appropriated could be spent for the aerial bombardment of battleships and shipping board vessels while under their own steam and moving, so as to set at rest any doubt of aircraft's ability to destroy and sink any sea craft which floats on the water.

"EFFORT TO FOOL PEOPLE"

"It was evident then that the American people were awakening to the necessity for a change and that if this change were to be prevented by the war and navy departments, that they must act at once. What was the result? The test was gotten up by the navy on the one hand to disprove and deprecates the value of air power and show the value of the surface vessels and battleships, and on the part of the army to fool the public as to the value of anti-aircraft cannon and machine guns.

"Any operations by the air service to sink the ships, as provided for by the law of the land, was stopped.

"Now what have the army and navy done to show that the existing obsolete systems should be maintained? First, the great Pacific naval maneuvers—the main features of these were the assembling of a fleet of some 148 surface vessels in the Pacific, the parade up our Pacific coast and entrance into San Francisco harbor and then the trip to Honolulu.

"Press representatives and congressinal committees galore were handled, fed and entertained according to the good old navy's propaganda system. It was heralded that the navy had taken the Hawaiian islands.

"Had There Been a War."

"Now, let us see what actually would have happened had there been war. Suppose that we had been at war with a Pacific power and this fleet of surface vessels had been in San Francisco harbor. Instantly the Pacific power's submarines would have planted all entrances to the harbor with mines.

"If the surface vessels ever got through these, the whole Pacific ocean would be districted off into squares and to each of these districts submarines would be assigned for the purpose of tracking the surface ships and attacking them.

"These ships would be under constant attack of gun fire from submarines that can carry any size cannon and use projectiles containing gas, high explosives or armor piercing, they use under water torpedoes which not only hit the side of the ships but will hit their bottoms, and can produce gas clouds which will completely envelop any fleet.

"If any vessels of the fleet survived the submarine attacks, crossed the sea and came within hundreds of miles of the hostile coast, they would be sent to the bottom forthwith by aircraft.

Foes Prove Aircraft Value.

"If the Pacific maneuver showed anything conclusively, it was that aircraft acting from land bases can destroy a surface fleet coming within its radius of operations. This already had been amply proved by our bombardment tests in 1921.

"As far as Honolulu is concerned, it is not a position of decisive influence in the control of the Pacific. Its value consists in being an excellent submarine base to act against hostile surface seacraft and submarines. The control position of the Pacific is our own territory of Alaska and the peninsula of Kamchatka, opposite.

"It is reported that from fifty to eighty million dollars has been spent just for this Pacific parade of our navy—more properly, the vessels belonging to the United States, because, in fact, it is no navy in the modern conception of the term. What would this amount, applied to development and improvement of airplanes and submarines, have meant?

FLIGHT TO HAWAII

"Next, to get publicity and make a noise about what it was doing with aircraft, this so-called Hawaiian flight was arranged. Even if it had been successfully made to Honolulu, it would have meant little, either commercially or strategically, compared with a flight to Europe or Asia would.

"Three airplanes were built to participate in it. These showed nothing novel in design and were untried for this kind of work. One never got away from the Pacific coast, another flew a few miles out and was forced to land in the water, and one was lost on account of being out of gas somewhere on the high seas.

"Patrol vessels were stationed every 200 miles, a distance entirely too far apart for experimental flight of this kind, with such primitive flying machines as the PN-9s are. Double or triple this number of vessels should have been there. In fact the whole Pacific fleet should have been stationed there instead of joy riding around the Antipodes.

"As it was, when these slow moving airplanes, going about 75 miles an hour, were first sighted from the destroyers, the destroyers should have steamed out full speed in the direction the airplane was going. This would not only indicate the proper course to the plane but would place the destroyer closer to it in case of accident.

"Why, if they expected to run short of fuel, as indeed they might, did they not make arrangements for refueling the airplane while it was in the air, by another airplane, as we have repeatedly done? Why did they carry a crew of five when the weight of two men and fuel might have carried the ship through?

"What happened to this really good-for-nothing, big, lumbering flying boat, when its brave navigators began to run short of gas, over a heavy sea? The probability is that they held her up as long as they could. As they neared the water, caught by a sudden gust, she might have been thrown into a stall and gone down straight under the waves.

"Let us hope that some passing fisherman may have picked them up, as our Lieut. Wade was picked up in the North sea. Our navy did not find him either; all they did was to smash his plane when it was turned over to them by the fisherman. After all, the Hawaiian islands are not a vital area with our present methods of national defense.

DISASTER TO SHENANDOAH

"Then the disaster to the Shenandoah—killing Capt. Lansdowne, the last of our really experienced airship captains, a splendid man, with his companions, following in the wake of Capt. Mabry and Capt. Maxfield, our airship commanders who have gone before.

"I do not know exactly what happened to the poor Shenandoah. She was an experimental ship, built in this country. I believe she was about fifty per cent overweight in her structure. She had broken away from her mooring mast—an inefficient way of handling airships, anyway—last spring and her whole structure was badly strained.

"I believe that the number of valves in the gas bags containing the helium had been diminished so as to save helium gas, which is expensive in money, but which made the ship more dangerous to the crew.

"The Shenandoah was going west on a propaganda mission for the navy department to offset the adverse publicity caused by the failures in the Pacific and the Arctic. Propaganda, and not service, is the keynote in these undertakings.

No Weather Forecast Given.

"What business has the navy over the mountains, anyway? Their mission is out in the water, not only out in the water, but under the water, out of sight, away from the land—that is why we have the navy.

"No accurate meteorological arrangements are available for aircraft in this country. The weather bureau is under the department of agriculture and primarily organized to turn out weather reports affecting onions, cabbages and other crops. While this is very necessary, it is a complete failure as far as the air service is concerned. I say this after having flown across mountains and bucked their storms hundreds of times.

"The Shenandoah, fifty per cent overweight in her structure, her members strained last spring, possibly some of them disintegrated from the action of the nonfreezing compound in the radiators of her engines, wherever this liquid dropped on them, and with the valves in her helium gas bags reduced, strikes a storm.

"She is caught in an up-current of air. Due to her excessive weight, her reserve buoyancy is low. She is carried high up by this current and her gas bags begin to expand, due to the altitude. The crew valves her in an attempt to allow the gas to escape, but the automatic valves reduced in number do not allow the escape fast enough; the pressure of the expanding gas on the structure tears the ship to pieces.

"Some of her crew go to eternity. Those that do not, escape by miraculously good fortune.

"No notice of the storm was received in time to avoid it. Her survivors are muzzled by the navy department, pending a whitewash board.

"Are these things so, or are they not? I am down here in Texas and have not all the data at hand, but I am sure the facts are practically as stated.

Result Has Proved Nothing.

"What results? The navy department announces that this shows that America cannot be reached by hostile aircraft. What has that to do with it? The way that America will be reached from Asia is by way of Alaska. The water that has to be crossed is scarcely wider than the English channel. The route from Europe is by the same course that the round the world fliers took, to Iceland, Greenland, and North America, whenever a country gets powerful enough to undertake the operation. What has the loss of a seaplane near Honolulu and an airship over the mountain to do with it?

"The impression is given to the public at large that the Shenandoah was a modern ship, properly constructed, properly operated, and completely equipped. This was not the case. It shakes the faith of the people in airship transportation because they are not given the exact facts on the subject.

"This is not an argument necessarily for the maintenace of many airships by the government, but it is a demand for the facts in the case, so that we will not be hindered in the commercial development of this splendid aircraft on account of the accident to an airship due to incompetence in the navy department and the criminal negligence in the ordering of this trip.

"If we took the safety valve of a locomotive off to save water in the desert and it blew up, killing the engineer and passengers, would we say that railways were no good in deserts and go back to camels?

SECRET BLOCKING OF WORK

"An interesting sidelight might be thrown on the development of airships in this country. When I came back from the war in 1919, I attempted to get airships for the purpose of making them airplane carriers.

"That is, having airplanes take off from them and land on them, so that they could get out in the middle of the ocean if necessary and attack hostile vessels, in case of war. I obtained permission immediately from the then chief of staff, Gen. March, and the then secretary of war, Secretary Baker. I sent Maj. Hensley to Europe with money to get the ships. We had even gone so far as to order the gasoline to Germany for the voyage of the ship to this country.

"Mysteriously the order was rescinded—all work was stopped—it was said at the time that it was against the provision of the treaty, which I do not believe was the case.

"Work had been begun on the frame of an airship by the Germans. This was the ZR-2, rechristened the Los Angeles, which the navy obtained recently, six years after I ordered it. What has it been used for? Nothing but parading around the country. It is evident that whenever a airship is developed as an airplane carrier, the necessity for any naval surface airplane carrier may be done away with. Is this the reason the navy has the Los Angeles?

"The Germans are the only people who have had real experience with airships. They had many a disaster before they learned how to handle them. I have seen German Zeppelins years ago in terrific storms. A storm has little effect on an airship properly constructed and ably handled.

M'MILLAN TRIP FAILS

"What other thing has the navy done this summer? After borrowing some airplanes from the army, that were entirely inadequate to the work in hand, they went on the MacMillan trip to the Arctic. More propaganda! As far as can be learned, from a distance, they had a cat and dog fight all the way up and back, between MacMillan, the pilots and the navy department, and of course got nowhere and did nothing. Is there an airman who does not know that, with the little jitneys they took up there, the pole could not be reached? Another example, says the navy department, of the incapacity of aircraft.

"At the last great anti-aircraft tests took place. A battleship goes out into the sea. She takes the airship Shenandoah and had her tow a target at 35 miles an hour, at a known altitude, in broad daylight and on a certain course. Some officers have told me that the dirigible was heading into the wind of an intensity of many miles an hour and that therefore the target really was almost standing still in the air. The ship shot at it all day long in this position and hits it a few times and publishes to the people of the United States the wonderful results obtained to impress them with the fact that battleships can be protected by anti-aircraft guns, which is absolutely and entirely false.

"What is our navy for? Presumably it is to control lines of sea communication on the high seas. What is it actually? It is entirely and completely outpointed by Great Britain in the Atlantic. What can it do across the Pacific as at present organized? Nothing—against an insular Asiatic power, whom you all know.

WASTE IN NAVY YARDS

"The navy has about one billion, five hundred million dollars invested in navy yards. The upkeep and depreciation of these amounts to about one hundred and fifty million dollars a year. How many of these are useless and how many of them are of any profit? Probably not many. Suppose we took fifty million of this and applied it to the development of aircraft and submarines under competent airmen and submarine men? What could we do with it?

"Every time a battleship is built, the ship itself, when it is completed, may cost from fifty million to seventy million dollars. It has to be protected by submarines, destroyers, cruisers and aircraft, the total cost of which is around or over one hundred million dollars, so that every time a battleship is built, the expenditure of one hundred million dollars is necessary.

Believes Battleship Useless.

"I believe a battleship today is a useless element in the national defensive armament of the United States. Suppose we had even one half of the cost of a battleship to use in the development of our aircraft and submarines. These are only a few of the things which must be brought up before the people and the coming congress.

"The navy, to maintain its position, keeps asking for more aircraft, which it cannot use legally, because the defense of the land is entrusted to armies. In spite of the legal restrictions, however, but to keep control of aviation and not let it get away, the navy department continually gets more money from congress by its Washington lobby so as to keep the political support of the aircraft manufacturers and, possibly, some others interested in them.

"This year, the navy's estimate for the aircraft amounts to $37,360,348. They only have one aircraft carrier, the Langley, which can go about half as fast as a battleship, and which is an obsolete collier. It can hold 36 small airplanes. They are building two aircraft carriers which can hold 60 to 70 planes. These are practically obsolete before they are completed.

"Where is the $37,000,000 for aircraft going? It is going into land aircraft which have nothing to do with the navy's operations on the seas and which will be used as a political lever for the maintenance of their existing system.

"The war department that is now entrusted by law with the aerial defense over the land areas of the United States and its possessions, including the protection of navy yards, asks for $24,532,000.

"Consider how foolish this is. The navy, an organization charged with going to sea and which must operate from surface vessels, which as a matter of fact are practically obsolete now, and which will afford no real protection to the country in case of an air attack, asking for one-third more than the army does, which acts from land bases and is specifically charged with the defense of the land areas.

"The amount alotted to the navy for new aircraft is three times as much as the army.

GUNNERY FAILURES

"Now let us turn to the war department. The war department has done nothing this summer to develop air power and has undertaken to prove by tests that anti-aircraft guns can protect cities, which is known everywhere to be false.

"They have fixed up a scheme to give constructive hits when the guns firing do not hit the targets at all. The firing has been at targets towed at a constant altitude, over courses which have now been flown hundreds of times, at greatly reduced speeds and never in excess of 75 miles an hour.

Calls Results Laughable.

"This was under ideal weather conditions. In spite of all this preparation, the results have been laughable.

"As an example of one of these performances, the war department has taken the lid off for publicity in the 2d corps area—that means around New York—with the result that the coast artillery tells the papers the story in greatly exaggerated terms, whereas the chief of air service has been completely muzzled.

"An interesting example of some of the anti-aircraft target practice was the testing of the listening device for aircraft at Camp Dix, July 27. The umpire had told Capt. Hall, commanding the airplane bombers at Mitchell field, that in the next anti-aircraft test he was at liberty to fly under conditions which would be used in war.

Artillery Outwitted.

"Capt. Hall informed the umpire ahead of time that he would glide into the target. Before this, the coast artillery had had all their practice with planes that had flown over at a fairly constant altitude and with their motors open.

"The night of the test the planes got their proper altitude, played around a little just out of range of the searchlights and just within range of the listening devices on the ground. The artillery thought that this was easy because they picked up the planes far off and plotted their course absolutely; but all of a sudden sounds from the airplanes stopped. Five or ten minutes later, the bombers dropped their bombs directly on the target. All around not a sound had been heard before this.

Ground Officers Angry.

"The fury of the ground officers, artillery officers, and others was tremendous. The air service had not acted fairly and had fooled them—all of which a kind enemy, of course, in war would never do! Discussion even went so far that it had to be pointed out that it was provided in our bombardment manual to attack a place in this fashion.

"This is only one instance of the ridiculous performance.

"So far, practically the only bombardment airplanes we have in this country have been used up towing these targets for ground shooting which other airplanes could just as well have done. The actual cost out of air service funds appropriated will be approximately $200,000 by the time they are completed this fall.

"Why are things done this way? The coast artillery sees that it is bound to be greatly reduced on account of the fact that aircraft are a positive coast protection. The coast artillery now has about ninety-two stations.

"For the ten years prior to 1920 about two billion dollars were spent on coast defense—not two millions, but two billions. What good are these coast defenses? None—except those in the immediate vicinity of large cities where a submarine might emerge at close range and plant a few shells in the city.

"What could the saving do, on these useless expenditures, if used by the troops of the mobile army stationed in Texas and other frontier points, living in shacks, unequipped with modern conveniences, cut down on every activity and rendered almost incapable, in case the constitution is menaced, of putting down insurrections or executing the laws when all other means fail, and patrolling our frontiers and holding our insular possessions? What would only a small part of this tremendous expenditure mean in the development of aircraft?

Bombing Crews Cut Down.

"Not one heavy bomb has been dropped by the air service line units in target practice for two years. Only about four or five modern sights are on hand with the bombing groups; and today, I, who know our personnel better than any living man, can only put my hand on two perfectly capable bombardment crews to handle our aircraft in case we are attacked.

"The other thing that the war department has done this summer is to study how the fliers' pay could be reduced or taken away from them.

"Think of it, the whole effort of the war department during the summer has been to fool the people into thinking that anti-aircraft cannon are a protection and to keep the rightful flying pay away from the pilots.

Airmen Are Disgusted.

"To make a long story short, we are utterly disgusted with the conduct of our military affairs applying to aviation. Our pilots know they are going to be killed if they stay in the service, on account of the methods employed, in the old flaming coffins that we are still flying. Those that still remain have held on so long that if they got out they would starve. They don't dare open their mouths and tell the truth, because they and their families might be booted out to some obscure place. No finer body ever existed in the makeup of our country than these men.

"There are many able men in the army—these should be developing the ground army in accordance with the needs of the nation. There are many able men in the navy—but the bureaucracies that both of these national services maintain in Washington have passed all bounds of national decency. They are deluding the public, sacrificing our national defense and not only wasting the money of our citizens but the lives of its ablest men, our flying officers.

"This condition must be remedied. It is not in the field of partisan politics, it concerns us all. The American people must know the facts and with their unfailing common sense and ability, they will surely remedy it.

"As far as I am concerned, I am looking for no advancement in any service. I have had the finest career that any man could have in the armed service of our United States. I have had the great pleasure of serving in all our campaigns from the Spanish war to the present and of commanding the greatest air forces ever brought together on the planet.

Says Public Is Deluded.

"I owe the government everything—the government owes me nothing. As a patriotic American citizen, I can stand by no longer and see these disgusting performances by the navy and war departments, at the expense of the lives of our people, and the delusion of the American public.

"The bodies of my former companions in the air moulder under the soil in America, and Asia, Europe and Africa, many, yes, a great many, sent there directly by official stupidity. We all may make mistakes, but the criminal mistakes made by armies and navies, whenever they have been allowed to handle aeronautics, shoot their incompetence. We would not be keeping our trust with our departed comrades were we longer to conceal these facts.

"This, then, is what I have to say on this subject and I hope that every American will hear it."

Heat—With Rotary

A prominent consulting oil engineer, former oil burner expert for the government, recently said: "They haven't as yet produced an oil burner that can beat ROTARY."

"The successful oil burner"

The original oil burner using moistened air

More Rotarys Installed Than Any Other Home Oil Heater

The principles of ROTARY were proved over 16 years ago. ROTARY'S success naturally makes imitators. Has no electric motor, delicate electric controls or other complicated devices to break down at frequent intervals—yet it burns oil more efficiently and economically than burners double its cost.

With ROTARY you are assured of heat when electric wires are down or fuse burns out. Only one moving unit, automatically lubricated, eliminating costly repairs and service necessary on complicated machines. An 8-year old child can render all the service required.

ROTARY thoroughly atomizes and vaporizes fuel oil, mixing same with moistened air at point of combustion, producing intense heat. Water cost is guaranteed considerably less than electric current. ROTARY produces a white incandescent heat which blacksmiths and welders have proved far superior to an orange flame.

LANSDOWNE HAD MAPPED NEEDS OF DIRIGIBLES

Lack of Weather Service Seen as Menace.

BY CLIFFORD A. TINKER.
[Lieutenant Commander U. S. N. Formerly of the Bureau of Aeronautics, U. S. N.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Threading her way proudly westward between earth and sky, on the day before her second anniversary in the service, the Shenandoah, Leviathan of the air, struck an "uncharted air rock" in the shape of a line squall and was done to death with fourteen of her crew. Among them was her gallant captain, Zachary Lansdowne.

Curiously, it was on the day of the twentieth anniversary of Lansdowne's entry into the naval service. Moreover, in his case, the tragedy was augmented by the fact that he was under orders to leave the air service for duty at sea on Sept. 15. This was to cover the law requiring two years sea duty in each grade as a qualification for promotion to higher rank.

Ten days before the flight Lansdowne came to Washington and visited the navy department to secure these orders of detachment. At that time he and I had a long talk on the subject of airships in general and the ill fated trip to the middle west in particular.

Closest of Friends.

Lansdowne and I had served together for years. We were the closest of friends. Consequently there was no verbal sparring between us. We got down to fundamentals and discussed the present state and probable future development of rigid airships.

Commander Lansdowne declared that the type of storm which sent the Shenandoah spinning to her doom is about the only fear that an airship pilot knows. Just as the uncharted rocks, treacherously hidden by even the calmest waters, are the most dreaded hazard in ocean navigation, so unheralded local storms over the land, some of which reach tremendous air speeds, are the bane of airship navigation.

"You might call these sudden and violent storms and squalls, encountered without previous warning, the 'uncharted rocks of the air,'" he said. "Big storms are so long in gathering that we always receive warning. The bigger the storm the longer time we have to prepare for it and utilize it for our speed advantage. However, the airship has progressed in dependability far in advance of the navigational safeguards necessary for the wide use of such ships in commerce.

Safeguards at Sea.

"Take the case of surface ships," he continued. "We find that centuries of effort have been contributing to the safety of ships that ply the seas. Storm warnings, radio compass direction, lighthouses, buoys, beacons, dredged channels, breakwaters, soundings on charts, even the drift of ocean currents and icebergs are closely watched for the aid of surface navigators.

"This is not the case when it comes to rigid airships. Our weather reports have been on the basis of agricultural needs ashore, morning and afternoon broadcasts. The United States weather bureau has done wonders with small appropriations, but they cannot stretch their service to meet the hourly demands of an airship line across the country."

Howbeit, it simply wouldn't do to have anything go wrong on such a mission, so while we will leave morbidity out of the case, it is true that Lansdowne felt the weight of a great responsibility, and the attendant anxiety which goes with leadership in the fields of early pioneering in novel departures from standard practice.

And rigid airships, in this country at least, are a novelty indeed to almost the entire population.

Foresaw Storm Danger.

Lansdowne knew what he was likely to encounter in the way of weather, for he stated:

"Electric storms are the airship's greatest danger. There is not a very serious danger from lightning as on at least two occasions German airships have been struck without causing serious damage. The chief dangers from electric storms lies in the very serious bumps and eddies that accompany them; these can be extremely violent and very seriously stress the structure of the airship.

"Now then electric storms are generally confined to 'certain areas' and certain periods of the year and it is known that such storms follow a very definite track, while there are many places where thunderstorms are unknown. Experience shows that thunderstorms may pass within a few miles of a particular spot but never over it.

"It should, therefore, be possible to chart the disturbed areas and tracks of these storms, showing the areas immune. If we had such a chart available, and reasonable warnings were given, it would be extremely bad pilotage for the captain of an airship to allow his ship to be overtaken by a thunderstorm.

Experience of the R-3.

"Of course, there is very little doubt that extremely violent thunderstorms take place at high altitudes of which there is no indication on the ground. The R-3, a British rigid airship, encountered such a storm, and neither the wireless nor meteorological at Howden air station, her home base, near which she was flying, gave any indication of the disturbance. This shows the great need of an instrument for detecting the direction and probable distance of thunderstorms—on some such principle as a seismograph detects distant earth tremors.

"This would be of the greatest value to an airship pilot, because for many years to come it will be necessary to fly over regions only partly charted, or lacking weather report facilities, and the fact of knowing from which direction the dangerous atmospherics are coming will enable the pilot to avoid trouble."

"The area west of the Alleghenies and just south of the lakes is especially dangerous in mid-summer, because it is constantly subject to violent electrical and wind storms of a local character. They just seem to come from nowhere in a minute. And they often reach tornado speed. Something has got to be done to give us complete, hourly weather reports before this area is really safe to fly over on schedule."

Weather Service Lacking.

Everybody knows that no such weather report service is at present available anywhere in the country. Fairly frequent reports can be had of the weather locals in the east along the Atlantic coast, the maritime reports largely accounting for the frequency. So it will be readily seen that the Shenandoah was pushing out into a relatively "unchärted sea," insofar as local storms were concerned.

It should be remembered that the Shenandoah had already been out to St. Louis and back in the autumn of 1923, and had made an 8,000 mile trip across the continent and up the Pacific coast and back in October, 1924. But she had been obliged to abandon a trip to Milwaukee and Minneapolis last spring and her fatal flight had been postponed until Wednesday, last, to avoid summer storm conditions at their worst.

As Lansdowne and I went over the weather hazards that might be expected on the forthcoming flight, and knowing that he was about to go to sea, I expressed the hope that he would be in command of the Shenandoah on the venture, and not trust her to less experienced hands. He quickly assured me that he would pilot the ship on this trip, but that it would be his last for two years at least.

Now, there was nothing morbid about "Zach" Lansdown. Neither one of us had any premonitions or dreads about this affair, which was to be a long flight for purposes of showing the people of the central states just what a rigid airship looked like; frankly it was a "publicity" trip to "sell" rigid airships to the taxpayer and the possible user of such craft for commercial purposes.

Impossible to Save Ship.

It was humanly impossible to save the Shenandoah against such odds as it encountered; utterly out of the question after her control car had fallen and she was caught in the vortex of the storm. Moreover, it is doubtful if an airship can ever be designed and constructed with sufficient strength to cope with such devastating wind velocities when eddying and surging in cross and up and down currents.

I believe that had Lansdowne survived the catastrophe he would admit this statement to be sound. And this is not condemning rigid airships. The enormous Titanic was the finest specimen of surface ship that naval architecture and marine engineering could produce. She was unsinkable—that is, until she rammed an iceberg.

It naturally remains to determine what steps may be taken in the construction of rigid airships in the future to make them stronger, if possible, than the Shenandoah, and also to determine what navigational facilities must be provided to assist in the safe employment of rigid airships in overland flying, for it certainly is not going to be said of the people of this country that Commander Lansdowne and his comrades sacrificed their lives for the advancement of a utility, pertinent to the national defense and to the development of commerce, to no purpose.

Whether shocked by the suddenness and gravity of the disaster to the point of discouragement, or skeptical of the utility of rigid airships generally, our government should not abandon all that has been done by Lansdowne and his associates, superior and subordinate, in the development of the art of building and operating rigid airships. If, for a time, we neglect them, we will be forced by circumstances to turn to them in haste at some inopportune time and under adverse conditions.

Had Faith in Rigid Airships.

Zachary Lansdowne was a brave, resourceful, and skillful naval officer. He was a delightful companion, an inspiring leader, and was the personification of truthfulness. A man with these attributes and characteristics would be honest with himself and with his fellows in his official duties. Mental honesty and a trained intelligence would not permit him to engage in a service enterprise which had no promise of present or ultimate usefulness as a factor in the defense of the country. Thus, if we find him dedicating his life to the advancement of the rigid airship as a naval vessel and as a vehicle for long distance commercial air traffic, rest assured that the layman, in official position or not, has little to substantiate his skepticism and nothing to warrant his abandonment of such aeronautical enterprises.

Beliefs of Lansdowne.

In our years together Lansdowne and I have discussed these ships as factors in the building up of our naval air force and in the creation of a commercial reserve to bolster up the air organization in time of war. He believed—and common sense will back up his belief—that the government should provide facilities for navigating the air in safety in the same measure that it supports ocean going traffic. Aerial lighthouses, audible signals for fog flying, radio communication for directional flight, weather reports of hourly frequency, and charts of meteorological conditions are required.

We do all these things for the air mail across the continent, and the mail planes fly on schedule in safety. What we do for that narrow single line must be spread over the country as demanded for commercial air lines and for the exigencies of the military air services. Had such a service been available last Thursday Lansdowne would be alive today and his ship would be the toast of the country.

May Show Design Weakness.

Perhaps a designer's weakness in the Shenandoah was indicated by the fact that the control car was torn from her framework. The control car of the Los Angeles is built as a part of her hull structure and not suspended below it by struts and braces, as was the case with the Shenandoah.

Continued study and experimentation in the building and operating of rigid airships must go on under a definite program until the ships themselves are as nearly foolproof as science and experience can make them. For, as Lansdowne said, "You can't tell, Tinker, but that some day in the future the observations of a single rigid airship, communicated by radio to the commander in chief of our fleet during battle, may save this country and civilization."

Telling the Secretary of the Navy of Disaster

Lieut. W. L. Richardson (at right) explains to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur how the crash of the Shenandoah occurred. Lieut. Richardson was the first survivor of the disaster to arrive at the capital.

Carry On for New Shenandoah, Plea at Navy Quiz on Wreck

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[United Press.]—Secretary of Navy Wilbur today announced that he had requested the naval board of aeronautics to arrange with Attorney General Sargent to proceed against vandals who stripped the Shenandoah of valuable instruments and records as souvenirs.

Caldwell, O., Sept. 5.—(AP)—"Carry on" was the tenor of the official statement of the board of investigation into the causes of the wreck of the navy dirigible Shenandoah, issued tonight by Capt. George Washington Steele Jr., commandant of the Lakehurst [N. J.] naval air station.

"The navy department will need the support of the country and the press to carry on at Lakehurst," said the statement. "Lansdowne and his officers and men gave their lives for the cause. Let the country give its support to the navy department that the sacrifice of these men may not be in vain.

Urges New Shenandoah.

"It would be pusillanimous for this country to give up this important development at this time. The construction of a new Shenandoah twice the size of the one wrecked should be begun without delay."

Capt. Steele characterized the Shenandoah's battle with the elements as "an epic in the annals of aviation."

"I am sure that everything was done that could have been done by officers and crew," he said. "That she met disaster I believe was no fault of her construction or of her operators."

"The cause of the disaster is very apparently due to the effect of forces which the airship was unable to withstand. I have sailed with Lieutenant Commander Lansdowne and I know how careful a navigator he was. This storm, the approach of which was not heralded, came suddenly on the ship and flanked it up on three sides.

Ship Helpless in Winds.

The opposing winds from the fourth side were so strong that despite full speed on the engines the ship was unable to drive her way clear before the storm closed in and engulfed it."

There was an enforced reaction today to the vandalism that has pervaded the region of the disaster since early Thursday morning. Pressure of public opinion and the presence of two federal department of justice officials investigating the looting under orders from Washington, caused souvenir takers to return their loot to the investigators today.

The much-sought-for baragraph was returned, as were parts of the seven separate logs of the ill-starred ship. Valves measuring three feet across, binoculars belonging to officers, graph-charts, clothing and papers were returned. Still there were thousands of pieces of aluminum framework and dozens of instruments missing.

Lansdowne's Cap on Sale.

The navy men were incensed when they received reports that the cap worn by the late Commander Lansdowne was on display in the window of a Wheeling, W. Va., store, where souvenirs from the wrecked ship are being sold at 25 cents each.

The finding of the baragraph contributed little of importance to the inquiry. Capt. Steele said the charts showed there were rapid ascensions and falls and then blurs, indicating that the rises and falls came too quickly to be recorded on the delicate mechanism.

Hear Witnesses to Disaster.

The testimony of witnesses to the disaster was taken today by the Lakehurst officials. In an old fashioned country parlor, the captain and commanders in gold braid and bright colored insignia listened to the stories of Ava townsmen and farmers.

They told how they witnessed the coming of the airship, how they watched it shift course, swerve, careen, swoop upward and finally buckle amidships and break in two.

The last survivors of the wreck left Caldwell today for Lakehurst to join their comrades who left two days previously. During the morning the last of the bodies of the victims were en route either to the keeping of their families or to Arlington national cemetery.

Arlington to Receive Four Bodies.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Bodies of Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne, Lieut. J. B. Lawrence and Lieut. E. W. Sheppard, three of the victims of the Shenandoah disaster, arrived in Washington today and were placed in the receiving vault at Arlington cemetery to await burial on Tuesday.

The three bodies which arrived today were taken to the cemetery in war department hearses without any ceremony. They were sent by train from Ohio without escort.

The four will be interred side by side in the Dewey section of the cemetery.

Plan Memorial for Dead.

Lakehurst, N. J., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Flags remained at half staff throughout Ocean county today while plans were made for memorial services to be held for the Shenandoah dead. Commander F. R. McCord said that most of the officers of the station planned to be at Arlington cemetery at the services for the dead there Tuesday. At the same hour memorial services will be held within the hangar in the section where the Shenandoah was housed at Lakehurst.

NAVY FLYER DEFENDS HAWAIIAN FLIGHT AGAINST MITCHELL

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Lieutenant Commander James Strong, commander of the naval seaplane PB-1, issued today the following statement in reply to Col. William Mitchell's charges relating to the army and navy air services:

"The flight (the San Francisco-Honolulu nonstop project) was perfectly planned. Any one of the three planes could make it. The PN-9 No. 1 had already made a 28½ hour flight, which is sufficient to reach Honolulu. We can't say what went wrong with the PN-9 No. 1. The engines and planes are far superior to any we have ever had. Plane guard vessels were not too far apart for radio compass work or for safety.

"Naval aviation has developed rapidly in the last few years, and along progressie, farsighted lines. Attempts such as this which require maximum performance assist to a great degree in developing aircraft and engines."

Similar comments were made by Lieut. Allen Snody, commander of the PN-9 No. 3, which was forced down and was towed back after making 300 miles of the Hawaiian flight.

KILLED ON TRACKS BY TRAIN.

Walking on the Grand Trunk railroad tracks near 147th street, Harvey, yesterday, Walter Lopowski, 50 years old, 513, 154th place, Phoenix, was struck by a train and died instantly.

Lorgnettes Came Before Noseglasses

Most people think the lorgnette is a distinctly modern convenience.

As a matter of fact, they came before noseglasses, as shown by European collections.

Methods of keeping spectacles on were crude and faulty at first. So someone fixed them on a handle, and the lorgnette was born.

Noseglasses appeared early in the seventeenth century. Noseglass devices have been appearing ever since.

Some are firm, but unsightly. Some are both steady and becoming, but displace the lenses. But some hold the glasses securely in the proper place and are good looking as well.

Eyeglasses must be selected with regard to the wearer. Almer Coe Eyeglass Service is distinguished for care and skill in doing this.

OPEN 7 A. M. to MIDNIGHT—SUNDAYS AND HOLIDAYS, TOO

OPPORTUNITY

A leading organization, exporting automobiles, requires a number of men for immediate sales work in overseas territories.

The men wanted are now operating retail sales departments or wholesale sales departments. They are experiencd in automobiles and sales management and well-founded in the business.

To such men we can offer a substantial proposition and a field for rapid promotion as fast as each can develop.

We are not interested in receiving applications unless present responsibilities warrant consideration.

Correspondence will be treated confidentially.

INCOME TAX REVEALS BOOZE KINGS FILED RETURNS UNDER FALSE NAME

USE OF ALIASES THWARTS AIM OF LAW'S PUBLICITY

Officials Tell of Tricks Employed by Some.

Further evidence that publicity of income tax returns serves no useful purpose to the government or the public in general was disclosed, it is contended, at the federal building yesterday.

The first week in the gold fish bowl is over, but it has been discovered that there are still plenty of places to hide from searching eyes. It has been revealed also that the size of the tax paid by the fellow across the street necessarily doesn't mean that he cleaned up or had a disastrous year.

Chicago bootleggers, gamblers, gangsters, in fact the underworld in general found the hiding places in the gold fish bowl.

What Did They Pay?

How much did Chicago bootleggers really pay Uncle Sam in the shape of income taxes? Their names have been conspicuously absent from the lists during the last week.

Many of the king pins of gangland filed income tax returns, but they did it under aliases that even the police never heard. Try to find those schedules! Officials in the internal revenue office won't tell any more than the lists show.

A Chicago gambler hit on the idea of using a fictitious name, but before he tried it he made a few inquiries. He admitted that he had experienced a good year and had a fat account in a loop bank, but didn't want to be a goldfish. So he dropped in at the federal building with his proposition and laid it before Charles W. Arndt, chief of the income tax division.

Now Mr. Arndt's business is to get the money, and not to tell "Scarface Al" Capone, for instance, that his name is Archibald Askins. For the purpose of collecting an income tax Uncle Sam is not much concerned what name a taxpayer uses if he kicks in.

Gambler Is Warned.

This gambler, as well as others who followed—for the scheme was passed on—was warned that it was he who was taking the chances, and that he must be prepared under any circumstances that might arise in any investigation to prove that he is the same person who filed the schedule under the fictitious name.

A few of the boys used the names by which they are best known. Take, for instance, Johnny Torrio. He paid $764.40, and it's up to the revenue department to discover whether he held out anything or not.

Johnny just adopted the New York plan and used his right name. But he did more than that. He engaged the services of a man who formerly had been in the internal revenue department for a long time and who knew how to make out a return to reach a minimum tax.

Nontaxable Return Reasons.

Another disclosure yesterday revealed information concerning taxpayers who filed more than one schedule. It was noted that a number of prominent citizens filed nontaxable returns or schedules that resulted in small taxes and later filed amended returns and paid substantial amounts.

Some perhaps filed erroneous returns and, being unable to withdraw them, filed amended schedules. In some instances it was a case of a stricken conscience; in others, fear of getting caught, in still others, credits not permissible were taken, while some of the cases were just plain errors.

No Purpose Served.

Through it all officials of the revenue department here agree with Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, the coRector, that no good purpose is served by publication of amounts paid by individual taxpayers. The figures, it has been shown, provide no authentic basis for speculation or for the satisfaction of idle curiosity.

Here Is List of Chicagoans Who Pay More than $60,000 in Taxes

The first week of authorized prying into the federal income tax returns for 1924 reveals the fact that approximately 90 citizens of Chicago and this tax district had taxable incomes of $200,000 or more in 1924. There doubtless are others in the exempt income class. Following is a list of individuals who paid $60,000 or more to the government this year:

PARLIAMENT OF CANADA ENDED TO FORCE REFORMS

New Elections Will Be Held on Oct. 29.

Richmond Hill, Ont., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Premier Mackenzie King, addressing his constituents here today, announced the dissolution of Canada's fourteenth parliament and the decision of the liberal government to seek a fresh mandate from the electorate to strengthen its hand for solution of four major problems, transportation, immigration, taxation and the status of the senate. The order of dissolution was signed by Lord Byng, the governor general, this afternoon, Mr. King announced. The general elections will be held Oct. 29.

MACKENZIE KING.

The major points of policy involved were of such importance, the premier asserted, that they could be handled only by a house of commons newly elected. None of the four issues, he said, could be handled by any government "which is not supported by a substantial majority in the house."

Cabinet Is Reorganized.

Mr. King announced several cabinet changes: J. A. Robb, minister of immigration, will become minister of finance in place of W. S. Fielding; G. N. Gordon, deputy speaker of the house, will assume the immigration portfolio, and Charles Murphy is named as postmaster general.

The premier outlined his administration's accomplishments and policies relating to the issues of the coming election. He said his government had changed deficits in the national finances to surpluses, while taxation had been reduced. He said a further reduction in income and sales taxes should accompany reduction of the national belt. He said the government was appointing an advisory board on taxes, which would include women.

Opposes Transportation Monopoly.

"No monopoly on land or sea" was the governments' policy in regard to transportation, Mr. King said, announcing opposition to the amalgamation of the Canadian National and Candian Pacific railways. He believed, however, there were measures for sharing expenses which would be to the advantage of both systems. He said his administration had shown operating surpluses for the Canadian National railways, in place of an operating deficit under its predecessors.

Sir Henry Thornton has been reengaged as president and chairman of the Canadian National railways at an annual salary of $65,000. This is an increase of $15,000. The new contract runs for a period of three years.

A vigorous immigration policy was required, the premier continued and recently an arrangement had been made between the department of immigration and the railway companies whereby their agencies abroad would coöperate more effectively.

A WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY FOR CONGRESS

HANGS HIMSELF WHEN HIS WIFE GOES TO RIVAL

Despondence caused by the belief that his wife had deserted him and their 15 months old daughter to go to the "other man" led Charles J. Stratton, 35, a locomotive engineer, 954 Ridgecomb place, to hang himself yesterday. That is the explanation Ned Stratton, brother of the victim, gave at a coroner's inquest.

Mrs. Stratton recently visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hamilton, at Eldon, Mo. After a month's stay she returned to Chicago a changed woman, indifferent to her husband and even to the baby, the brother added.

Finally, he said, she confessed to her husband an infatuation for Charles Hunter of Eldon.

Friday evening Mrs. Stratton took the baby and a suit case to Ned Stratton's home at 1010 Winona avenue. She asked permission to leave both until she returned from downtown. She didn't come back. When the husband opened the suit case it contained all Betty Jane's clothing and a note saying:

"Dear Charlie: I paid the rent and the milkman. Am going away. My heart is in Eldon."

Three Hurt When Elevator Falls to Basement

Three young women were slightly hurt and ten other passengers frightened when an elevator car, released by defective brakes, plunged from the third floor to the basement of the Board of Education building, 650 South State street, shortly after noon yesterday. Those hurt were Winifred English of 5304 Belle Plaine avenue, Faleska Adam of 3000 Palmer square, and Aileen Rimer of 901 West 51st street.

Tries to Kill Greek Bank Head, Then Takes Own Life

ATHENS, Sept. 5.—(AP)—An attempt to assassinate M. Eliasco, governor of the Bank of Athens, was made today by a youth named Moschos, who, when his attempt failed, committed suicide. The youth rushed at M. Eliasco with a drawn revolver, which the governor seized before it was discharged.

Prince of Wales Leaves Argentina for Chile

SAN PATRICIO, Argentina, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The prince of Wales and his suite left by special train at noon today for the thirty-eight hour transcontinental journey to Chile. The prince spent three days at hunting, riding and polo on the ranch of Jack Nelson, the famous polo player, near here

GASOLINE BLAST KILLS YOUTH AND EVANSTON BOY

Explosion of a gasoline tank on a farm at Rozellville, Wis., early yesterday killed Howard Wigginton, 14 years old, son of a wealthy Evanston contractor, and Albert Spindler, 23 years old, with whom Howard was spending a vacation.

The two boys were attempting to start the motor of a gasoline lighting plant when the explosion occurred. It was thought that a spark from the motor ignited the gasoline fumes.

Howard was a son of James D. Wigginton Jr., 1115 Oak avenue, Evanston, construction contractor. He attended Evanston high school. His death is the fifth in the Wigginton family since June, his grandmother, a great uncle, a great aunt, and a cousin having died in the last three months.

Salesman's $100 Fraud Case Set for Sept. 10

Arthur W. Hermstorf, a salesman, 6842 Merrill avenue, won a continuance to Sept. 10 when arraigned before Municipal Judge James J. O'Toole, in Grand Crossing court, following his arrest on Friday night on a charge involving a $100 payment on an automobile. Hermstorf is at liberty on a recognizance bond given by William J. Biggs, 6241 Cottage Grove avenue, and approved by Judge John H. Lyle.

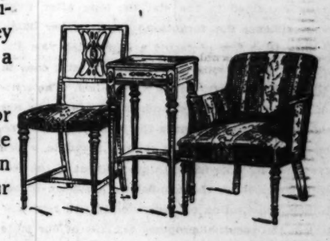
OF course there will not be very much furniture buying done Labor Day; but we're telling you about this store, and the wonderful goods in it just the same. There are other days, when you'll be wanting furniture.

There's a larger idea here than merely selling furniture. We know, and you know, that the important thing for you, when you buy furniture, or anything else, is—First, to know certainly that you're getting the sort of quality you ought to have. Second, that you are secure in your continued satisfaction with what you buy.

It's worth a good deal to be sure of quality; you can't tell anything about it merely by looking at furniture; inferiority is so easy to hide under varnish or upholstery. You can't always be sure that what you buy is going to be exactly what you want.

We set a high standard for "Scholle quality," and you can judge how high a standard it is when you know that we attach to it a positive guaranty of "satisfaction or your money back." Poor stuff wouldn't stand such a guaranty.

The prices during our sale are very low for such quality; you'll see some very remarkable bargains. We can often deliver to out-of-town customers in our own trucks, direct to your home.



We Add a List of Special Bargains

Look it over; there may be something that appeals. But remember we have only one of each.

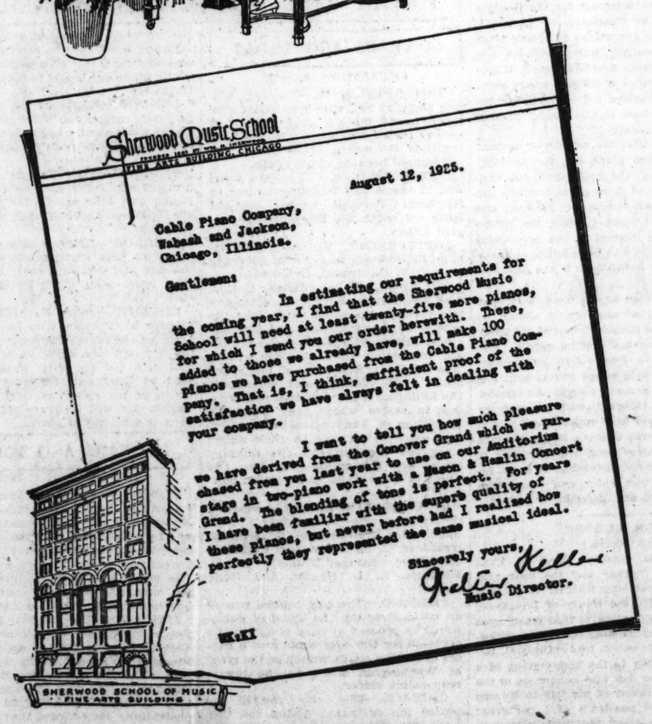
"Sufficient Proof of Piano Satisfaction"

Sherwood Music School—

THE Sherwood Music School was founded 1895 by the world famous Pianist, Wm. H. Sherwood.



Sherwood Music School
FINE ARTS BUILDING, CHICAGO
August 12, 1925.
Cable Piano Company,
Wabash and Jackson,
Chicago, Illinois.
Gentlemen:
In estimating our requirements for the coming year, I find that the Sherwood Music School will need at least twenty-five more pianos, for which I send you our order herewith. These, added to those we already have, will make 100 pianos we have purchased from the Cable Piano Company. That is, I think, sufficient proof of the satisfaction we have always felt in dealing with your company.
I want to tell you how much pleasure we have derived from the Conover Grand which we purchased from you last year to use on our Auditorium stage in two-piano work with a Mason & Hamlin Concert Grand. The blending of tone is perfect. For years I have been familiar with the superb quality of these pianos, but never before had I realized how perfectly they represented the same musical ideal.
Sincerely yours,
Music Director.

Wanted—Responsible Sales Representatives for Florida Syndicate

Large well-financed Florida syndicate is organizing exclusive sales agencies in principal Middle Western cities for intensive three year campaign.

Florida today presents unprecedented opportunity to home seekers, investors, real estate salesmen.

Like all new territory the ultimate stability, permanency, and profit will be made in those sections having the greatest combined agricultural, industrial and recreational facilities.

Such features give the property owned by this syndicate unusual advantages.

Unit No. 1 will be publicly offered October 1. A strong metropolitan newspaper campaign, supported by local newspaper advertising, beautifully illustrated literature, selling talks, and special features will back up each sales organization.

Exclusive territorial rights are now being authorized—size of territory dependent upon the responsibility of territorial representatives.

Real estate operators and salesmen with organization ability are invited to get in immediate communication with us.

References regarding our financial standing, title to land, extent of operations and integrity will be supplied. Suitable references will be demanded of each representative selected.

We are seeking only high-grade business men and will not consider promoters or floating salesmen.

You may open negotiations through your attorney or in any other manner you choose. If your letter indicates you have qualifications equal to our standards, a personal interview will be arranged immediately.

LAWS AND THEIR ENFORCEMENT.

Law in the technical sense is embodied in the constitution, statutes, and treaties of the federal government, and in the constitution, statutes, charters, and ordinances of the states and lesser divisions of government. This is the written law. Some of it is enforced, a good deal of it is not enforced.

There is also what might be called unwritten law, that is, policies or practices which have the same force as any formal enactment. One of these unwritten laws is that presidential electors shall vote not according to their own preferences but according to party instruction. Any elector, so far as the written law is concerned, can vote as he chooses, but the unwritten law binds him as effectually as a statute could.

Written law is often nullified by what may be called unwritten law, or in other words, by common consent that a written law shall not be enforced. Many examples of this are found in our history, especially in the field of moralistic and disciplinary legislation. The old blue laws died of nonenforcement as well as by formal repeal. Many remained in the statutes long after their very existence was forgotten. On the other hand, an unwritten law protected a segregated vice district for generations in Chicago, and still does in other cities, contrary to the written law. The written law, which closed saloons on Sunday, was not enforced for years because the opinion of the community set up virtually a counter mandate, which overruled it. The fifteenth amendment of the federal constitution, the mandatory provision of the Illinois constitution on redistricting and representation, the personal property tax law of our state and others, are all conspicuous examples of written laws ignored or not strictly enforced because of unwritten dictates which, if not laws in the lawyer's definition, are expressions of public will which have the effect of enactments.

To state these facts is not to argue for or against any one of them. A familiar type of zealot holds that to state a fact which he does not like is to create it, and to ignore it is somehow to abolish it. But facts remain facts in spite of theorists, and those we have referred to above are basic in our political and social system. The central truth is that law is not words but will. Written law is an explicit expression in words of the will of the community. It remains law in fact and retains life so long as it has the community's preponderant will to support it, and no longer. It may be phrased in the most imperative terms, like the mandate for redistricting in the Illinois constitution, which has been ignored so many years. It may be carved in letters of brass, but it is dead in any practical sense as law, or at least asleep, if the public will does not press steadily for enforcement.

Now, this is the fact, whether in any particular instance it is approved by this individual or group of individuals or not, and the fact is not anarchy. It is a condition not to be confused with individual law breaking. Laws should be enforced while they are laws, and formally repealed when it is the will of the community that they should not be enforced. But in practice this theoretic orderliness and explicitness is not, and evidently cannot be, attained. Therefore, laws are by common consent allowed to die, or at least to become inoperative for a time or in a district, and this familiar phenomenon is nullification, not law breaking. The individual who robs or kills breaks the law as an individual. The smuggler, the bootlegger, the moonshiner, and their patrons are law breakers. They are subject to punishment as individuals. So long as the public will informs the statutes they break, they are liable to its penalty, and when public opinion, that is, the preponderant will of the community, fails to support the statute, penalties will not be applied. Whether constitutional provision or statute, it may stand in the blackest of ink on the pages of the law, but no force will proceed therefrom.

To state this characteristic of organized society is not to justify the breaking of law by individuals. We are dealing with a condition of law enforcement, not a theory. If laws were perfect and men and women also, or if lawmakers were infallible, all laws would be enforced. But in such case no laws would be enacted that ought not, and, therefore, could not be enforced.

It is futile to rage about the nonenforcement of unenforceable laws. The reason why many of our laws are not enforced is that they are laws which should not have been enacted. When laws are put into constitutions or statutes under pressure of passing mood or of special groups, they are usually foredoomed to nonenforcement. But the evil is not primarily in their nonenforcement, but in their enactment.

MAKING THE EAGLE A CROW.

H. L. Mencken, in a recent TRIBUNE article, said that Europe was afraid of being Americanized. The Germans have recognized a danger to their culture and the British to their traditions and habits. The latter, or some of them, think the American movies are affecting British childhood and the adults are yielding to American habits, principally jazz. Mr. Mencken sympathizes with the European fears. Americanism in its pressure against cultured, intellectual, urbane life being "a Philistine uprising against the free spirit of man, a conspiracy of dull, unimaginative men fortuitously made powerful, against all the ideas and ideals that seem sound to their betters."

We'll soon begin to regard America as some uncouth monster in the family of civilized peoples, physically repulsive, obnoxious to the intellect and dangerous to freedom. It's a depressing idea and not so good.

Our outstanding offenses seem to be prohibition; fundamentalism, 100 per centing, go getting and Main streeting—making the world flat, dry, blatant and incapable of thought.

The American democracy is the most articulate in the world. It is on the air with about everything it has in its system. It has a lawmaking system which offers almost any one a chance to get an opinion transferred to a statute book. Forty-eight state legislatures annually or biennially are making laws out of ideas that some people think good or important and a great deal of nonsense is likely to get through. With all the adults and many of the adolescents of a populous country freely expressive in every direction there are bound to be some oddities of opinion.

A great part of Europe is docile. It has been and is submissive. What we hear from Europe is the voice of its intelligence except when it is the voice of its military men. We do not think that is intelligent much of the time. English labor, when it is vociferous, is as bad mannered and sometimes as idiotic as any collection of individuals to be found anywhere. It is the same with the French and German. We have not had any large body of American labor so nearly affected by the demonstrated insanity of Russia as European labor has been. That is a good test of intelligence.

The Tennessee farmers who tried Scopes would be found, we think, to be superior in native intelligence to a group of Yorkshire, Norman, Polish, Saxon, Bavarian or Hanover farmers.

Any one who ever saw a few sour faced, black coated Englishmen herd several thousand unhappy children from the city out on a stretch of sea beach and keep them regimented while they were being done good by exhortation, nose singing and indigestible food and kept away from every amusement they wanted will not think there is anything particularly American in the joy killer or the bigot.

Mr. Bryan amused Europe at the Dayton trial. He had the same ideas that William E. Gladstone had and it does not particularly mark the United States that it three times declined to have as President a man who on fundamentalism was as one with a man who is still regarded as one of the great prime ministers of the British empire.

The American people are characterized by amiability, an idealism that is sometimes foolish and sometimes effective, and a shrewdness in political affairs which is sufficient to keep a democracy running even if it has defects. They are not always wise enough to limit their opinions to fields in which they have experience and knowledge. They are showing just now too much disposition to apply restraints where there should be freedom, but there have been such periods in the life of every nation. When the early English came here they were less tolerant than their posterity is here now.

We have a struggle with noisy and domineering groups. We have a good deal of self-criticism, which is healthier for the present time than the old eagle screaming, but before we yield to the opinion that the United States is an intellectual mendicant tracking mud into Europe's parlor and causing the ladies to swoon; we'll turn the old bird loose and let her yap.

THE RIVERWAY GROWS LONGER.

The first water turbine generating 30,000 horsepower has been placed in service at Muscle Shoals. Eventually 800,000 horsepower will be developed at Wilson dam and lesser works which have already been completed or planned. The southern Appalachian region is started on an area of industrial development.

Improved river transport comes as a by-product of the power plants. Navigation on the Tennessee river will be assured above Muscle Shoals. Once past the shoals and the river is again suitable for navigation all the way up to Nashville. Earlier efforts were made to build canals around the shoals but they proved inadequate. Now the government dams have solved the problem.

Eventually the assurance of water transport into Alabama may become of considerable importance to Chicago. This city's prosperity is to no small extent dependent upon the steel industry. That is true of all the industrial lake cities, including Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, Milwaukee, Buffalo, and the rest. They have become great largely because they were able to get high grade iron ores from Lake Superior at low freight rates. Sooner or later —some students believe in less than fifty years—the best of the Superior ores will have been exhausted. It may then be more economical to ship high grade ore from Alabama to Chicago by river than to employ the low-grade ores from the north.

In any event, the shoals dams are adding several hundreds of miles to the Mississippi riverway system. Every additional mile which can be reached by barge from Chicago is another reason for speeding to completion the Illinois waterway.

INHERITANCE TAXATION AND CONCENTRATION OF WEALTH.

Scrutator says the mid-westerners of the corn and cow belt want the federal inheritance tax retained because the great fortunes are in the east. We think they ought to give that proposition a little more examination. It is a branch of the policy of soak-the-rich, a policy which has a strong attraction for all of us who are not rich but which seems to be rather disappointing in practice. Many a lusty blow leveled at the obese gentleman who figures in the cartoons as Capital or Big Business goes astray and sometimes they land on our own shins.

Theoretically the inheritance tax is the most plausible of taxes. It has been approved in many editorials of THE TRIBUNE because THE TRIBUNE is opposed to undue concentration of wealth. But there are effects of taxing inheritances which do not square with that object and one has recently been pointed out by a man who knows a good deal about the concentration of wealth and presumably profits by it as head of a great banking house. One of the serious results of high inheritance taxation, he reminds us, is to concentrate great fortunes in the great trust companies, and this banker, Mr. J. P. Morgan, is farsighted enough to see that this is not a good thing. It put too much power in the hands of a few, and it loads these few with responsibilities they are not always able to meet. Mr. Morgan wisely realizes that this process will produce an unhealthy condition, economically, financially, and socially. Certainly it is not the condition sought by inheritance taxation, which is a healthy distribution of wealth.

This is something worth thinking over and also a certain generalization that we are all likely to forget at times—namely: that excessive exactions or measures of reform almost invariably defeat themselves.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The wood thrush, which have been silent in the depths of the foliage, are back in the thinning brush where leaves are yellowing in the heat and dropping and where the berries are turning red. The flutter of the speckled breasts and brown bodies in the thickets is a touch of the coming prospect, as are the scattered leaves, the flashes of crimson alongside the wild sun flowers and the goldenrod. Brilliant days fill the calendar, but quickening change rides with the clip along the rim of the ticket. Not far from frost and leaves flying in the wind, early dusk and wine in the air, the flight of birds, and no voice left in the woods but that of the harvest fly.

SAYING IT WITH SKYSCRAPERS.

Oscar E. Konkle of New York intends to spend $14,000,000 in erecting the tallest building in Manhattan. Most of its 800 feet of height will be devoted to hotel purposes, he says, and the rest of it will be divided between an interdenominational church and a huge dining room. The building is to stand as a memorial to Mr. Konkle's gratitude upon the recovery of his son from a serious illness.

The thank offering is probably as old as religion. A man in whom the feeling of gratitude surges wants to express it in some way. Simple folks say it with flowers. Others want the world to know about their gratitude and they build memorials. In the middle ages they built chapels and sometimes cathedrals. Queen Victoria and her devoted people wanted to show how much they missed the prince consort and they put up a column in his memory. The column tried to express the grief not only of a widow but of a widowed empire. That did not make for architectural unity but it seemed to satisfy those most directly concerned.

In America of late we have tried to express our sentiments with skyscrapers. Great business establishments have not been alone in building them. There is a skyscraper church in Chicago and another is projected for New York. Pittsburgh is to have a skyscraper university. The tower of the Rockefeller chapel at the University of Chicago will be the tallest structure for miles around.

Mr. Konkle's intention of building the highest building in New York as a visible symbol of his gratitude is therefore in the new tradition which has sprung up in American. The existence of that tradition suggests that those who believe the skyscraper is wasteful economically will have to do a lot of talking to convince men that they should not build any more of them. Skyscrapers are erected not only for the money to be made out of them but also to express the emotions of the men building them. If Mr. Konkle feels a skyscraper is the fitting symbol of his gratitude, he will build it whether he makes a great deal of money from it or not.

Editorial of the Day

LONG RANGE AUTHORITY.

[Daily Oklahoman.]

Chicago is complaining bitterly because an Ohio reformer has been brought from an Ohio village and placed in charge of prohibition enforcement in the Windy City. Atlanta is indignant because the headquarters for prohibition enforcement for the Georgia sector has been located at Charlotte, up in North Carolina. Senator Watson threatened to secede from the union, figuratively speaking, unless Indiana was relieved from the prohibition overlordship of Michigan and given a headquarters of Indiana's very own.

Oklahoma is neither surprised nor complaining because prohibition enforcement in this young state is to be directed from a Texas city.

Most of the complaints thus far registered against the Andrews reorganization plans are due to local pride, local prejudice, and the politicians' lust for political patronage. None of these protests prove the weakness of the Andrews tactics or forecast the failure of his ambitious scheme. Hence the public generally will show little interest in the grievances of disaffected municipalities and prohibition enthusiasts will have no cause for losing faith in the Andrews offensive.

Possibly the Andrews plan is the very best that could have been devised; at any rate it should be given a thorough trial and should command the sympathy and support of every law abiding citizen. But unquestionably it gives to long range government a still longer range, and long range government has never been an eminent success among Americans. No law has ever been enforced with satisfactory thoroughness when it lacked local support and a local enforcing agency. A striking example is the fifteenth amendment, which is ignored totally or partially in twelve American states, notwithstanding it is an integral part of a constitution which every American official is sworn to uphold and defend.

HOME FROM EUROPE.

[New York World.]

Returning from Europe, Senator King of Utah reports that he went to Turkey and the near east "for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the United States should ratify the treaty of Lausanne, and whether or not my opposition to that treaty was justified." As readers of these lines may guess, Senator King found that his opposition was entirely O. K.

We look forward hopefully to the homecoming of a United States senator some day who announces to the ship reporters that as a result of his trip to Europe he has changed his mind one-tenth of 1 per cent: "You know, I was wrong about that little matter in Silesia. I found that I really did not know quite so much about it as I thought I did, and that human beings sometimes make mistakes."

Such things do not happen. The merits of Mr. King's estimate of the treaty of Lausanne aside, it can be stated as an axiom of senatorial travel that senators go abroad not for the purpose of discovering whether they are right or wrong but for the purpose of proving they are right. They do not collect facts, they collect corroborations. Therein, of course, their interest does not differ greatly from the interest of the average traveler. But the average traveler does not vote on treaties.

Who needs a peep behind the curtain of the future to tell him what Senator Borah would discover about the evils of the world court if he should spend a summer in The Hague, or what Senator Reed would learn of the ability of France to pay to "the last red cent" if Senator Reed should spend a week in Paris? Steamships may dock and steamships may sail, senators may come and senators may go; their theories run on forever.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

DRINKING HARD WATER.

MANY write, asking about the harmful effects of hard water. Most of these letters to me ask about harm to health. I cannot find evidence that drinking hard water is harmful to health. An old notion, one advocated more by veterinarians than by physicians, is that prolonged drinking of hard water causes stones in the bladder and kidneys. This theory is found in most of the veterinary textbooks and in some of the textbooks which treat of human diseases.

Dr. J. T. Myers of Omaha has recently studied this question experimentally. He induced the formation of stone in the bladder in several varieties of laboratory animals. While under experiment some of the animals were supplied with hard water, some with distilled water, and some with medium hard water. He found no difference in the rate of formation of stones between any of these groups. His conclusion was that whatever might be the cause of stone in the bladder, the drinking of hard water was not a factor for or against. Stones formed as fast among the animals drinking distilled water as they did among those in the other groups.

For a long time it was held that goiter resulted from drinking water that was hard because of an excess of magnesium salts. Rather strangely, another theory coming from somewhat the same region was that goiter resulted from the drinking of snow water because such water is very soft and low in magnesium and other minerals. The prevailing opinion now is that there are several causes of goitre. One is a lack of iodine in the water. Neither the theory that goiter is due to drinking hard water rich in magnesium, nor the one that it is due to drinking magnesium-free water is now credited.

The Harrington Richardson textbook on hygiene says: "When one changes suddenly from the use of a soft water to another that is quite hard there follows a temporary disturbance of the functions of the digestive apparatus. The most marked effect is alternating constipation and diarrhea." But this is the result of change rather than of the harmful qualities of hard water, for the textbook next says: "Change from hard to soft water is quite as likely to cause unaccustomed looseness of the bowels."

All in all, no harm to health from habitual drinking of hard water has been noted though it is barely possible that a water containing more than 1,000 parts of hardness, one that is getting definitely into the alkali class, is harmful. In fact, low alkalinity or near acidity is now recognized as more of a menace to health than high acidity, provided the water passes through lead pipes anywhere. The colored, soft waters of New England and of eastern Virginia and North Carolina, and of certain districts in England, are dangerous when lead pipes are used, for this reason. In Panama, lime is added to the water to protect against this danger. Hard waters are wasteful of soap and they cause scale in boilers and kettles. Some vegetables do not cook well in hard water.

The hardness of waters is classified as follows:

Under 75 parts—soft.
75 to 200 parts—moderately hard.
Over 200 parts—very hard.

Houston's "Rural Water Supplies and Their Purification" gives simple methods of purifying waters that can be carried out in the home provided the householder has a little help from a chemist.

EYES CAUSED NAUSEA.

Mrs. M. L. writes: For many months I found travel by automobile impracticable for the same reason that Mrs. R. E. L. couldn't take her little girl comfortably. A ride of only a few miles produced nausea, which was persistent if the ride was prolonged. At last I was fitted to distance glasses and the trouble was over. This may not help others, but in my case the trouble was eyestrain. The changing focus in an automobile is more of a tax than in a train, where the eyes can be rested by looking at objects close at hand. Others could try this plan.

TO REDUCE—DIET.

Newark writes: 1. Can I reduce weight by puttfng epsom salts in the bath?

2. If this is no sure method of reducing, what is a good, quick way?

REPLY.

1. No.

2. Dieting is the only way. The less you eat, the quicker you lose. You can safely go two weeks without eating any food. If you do that you will lose weight rapidly. If you are not in that much of a hurry, you can fast a shorter while or you can eat lightly.

A BAD LOT, ANYWAY.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—[Friend of the People.]—I live in the 3700 block of Roosevelt road, and the lot has not been cleaned for almost a year. This is a vacant lot which has accumulated all kinds of garbage, cans, and other rubbish. It is unpleasant to have my windows open. A. S.

This is not a vacant lot, but a fenced-in rear of store. The matter has been referred to the sanitary bureau of the board of health.
THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

SEE LOCAL ORDINANCE.

Freeport, Ill., Sept. 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Has this state passed a zoning law for cities which would cover this case? Can a majority of property owners on a certain residence street petition and have a zoning law passed which will prohibit the erection and operation of store or garage buildings or other places of business on their streets? A. P. R.

Depends on your local ordinances, to which we do not have access.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

INSANE SPOUSE.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can a wife sell her property if her husband is insane? I have been told that a law permitted it, but some say I cannot. MRS. J. L.

Legal proceedings would be necessary.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SLOCUM STREET PAVING.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—[Friend of the People.]—I am living in the 5700 block of Slocum street, which is only two blocks long, and one block is paved. The realtor from whom we bought said that petition had been filed for paving the other block. It looks as though nothing will be done this summer. Please advise if you know anything about it. H. L. A.

We have an ordinance passed for paving a system of streets, including Slocum street, between Major and Menard avenues, etc. Notices will be sent to property owners when the assessment roll is filed in court. We cannot state at this time if the assessment will be confirmed in time to make the improvement this year.

Board of Local Improvements.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 6, 1865.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Thomas Wilson, 16 years old, who was under sentence to be hanged next Friday at Quincy for bushwhacking, has had his sentence commuted to 25 years' imprisonment because of his youth.

NEWBERN, N. C.—There is a great lack of hotels and boarding houses in Newbern. Portable houses brought from the north are bringing extravagant prices.

MONTPELIER, Vt.—Paul Dillingham, Republican, was elected governor over C. N. Davenport, Democrat.

RALEIGH, N. C.—Judge Carter, who has returned from an extensive trip through the south, says that the cruelty to the freedmen and the frequent killing of them by the whites are increasing to a terrible extent. The Southern Sun says of the situation: "If the Yankees are alarmed at the killing of a few hundred niggers a day in states where they have the protection of Yankee troops to a certain extent what will be their alarm after the departure of the military forces and the readmission into the Union of these states as sovereign powers?"

CHICAGO.—The Indiana association elected these officers: President, C. P. J. Arion; vice president, S. B. Gookins; treasurer, C. M. Culbertson; executive committee, Samuel Dunlap, D. D. Michaels, L. L. Nelson, and Isaac Meyer.

CHICAGO.—The city council passed an order directing the board of public works to proceed at once to award the contract for the construction of a tunnel under the south branch of the river at Washington street to the lowest responsible bidder.

CHICAGO.—The city council repealed the ordinance giving the Chicago City Railway company the right to charge a fare of 10 cents to the state fair which is now being held in Chicago. The preamble to the repealer stated that the right to make such a charge was granted on the express understanding that the company would lay a track in State street and that it failed to do so.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 6, 1900.

CHICAGO.—Ex-Ald. Frank H. Follansbee, real estate dealer, hopelessly ill with consumption, killed himself in his home, 2301 Calumet avenue, by shooting himself twice in the head. He was 50 years old and the son of Charles Follansbee, the banker.

LONDON.—George Bressau, alias George d'Essauer, was sentenced to three months in jail for obtaining credit under false pretenses. He has been sought in connection with the Northwestern Gas Light and Coke company bond swindle in Chicago. He was charged there with placing $50,000 worth of forged bonds to secure a loan of $27,500.

LONDON.—England's reply to Russia's note asking the withdrawal of all troops was to order the Fourth brigade of Indian troops to go to China immediately.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Fannie A. Eager brought suit for $50,000 against G. E. Eager and Miss A. E. Dressen, who she charges alienated her husband's affections.

CHICAGO.—Railway officials do not object to men wearing shirtwaists in coaches and sleeping cars, but insist they must wear coats in the dining cars.

CHICAGO.—John E. McMahon, a pioneer in Chicago, who ran the first train on the Northwestern road out of the city and who built the first tunnel and crib for the city water works, died at Elmhurst, the summer residence of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Lynch. He was 72 years old and had been in Chicago 50 years.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 6, 1915.

LONDON.—The Allen line steamer Hesperian, bound from Liverpool to Montreal, with 650 persons aboard, was torpedoed by a German submarine seventy miles southwest of Fastnet. Latest reports are that all were saved. The vessel was badly crippled but did not sink, and is being convoyed to Queenstown by warships and patrols.

CHICAGO.—The national Friends of Peace convention in Medinah temple cheered for one minute an attack on President Wilson and the administration. The Rev. Theodore B. Roth of Greenville, Pa., was the speaker who tore the lid off and started the demonstration. He charged that the President is permitting the shipment of American made bullets and explosives to the European war zone to aid in the killing of countless thousands of human beings. The platform committee finished the draft of the resolutions which are captioned "The New Declaration of Independence." They will be presented to the convention today.

LENOX, Mass.—Dr. Constantin T. Dumba, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador to the United States, admits that James F. J. Archibald, the American correspondent seized at Falmouth, England, was a dispatch bearer to his government and that the letter written in regard to the proposal to tie up munitions plants in the United States by strike and other methods was a bona fide dispatch from him to Foreign Minister Burian in Vienna. He denies there was any plot, but says he warned his fellow countrymen working in munitions plants that they faced arrest if they continued there.

CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—In regard to Illinois house bill No. 617, which goes into effect Oct. 1, 1925, there have been some statements made to the effect that this bill provides for those who qualified receiving the degree of "Certified Public Accountant."

This is not so, as the bill is purely a licensing measure and provides that all who serve the business men of Illinois as professional accountants, must register at Springfield and provide themselves with certificates of registration the same as doctors, dentists, etc.

This last feature also brings to the attention of the business men of Illinois the fact that heretofore the protection and business insurance that was supposed to be embodied in the degree of "Certified Public Accountant," was more a fancy than a fact. Under present conditions, but not under the new law, anybody, whether qualified or not, could set up in business as a public accountant and serve the business public and it was not necessary to be a "Certified Public Accountant" to engage in the business of auditing the books of business concerns, preparing income tax returns, making examinations for financial purposes, etc.

Under the new law, however, there will be protection afforded the business men of Illinois in so far as any complaint against the competency or work done by a public accountant after Oct. 1, can be referred to the bureau of registration and education at Springfield, and if the evidence is sufficient, the certificate of license of the particular public accountant can be revoked.

This was not possible under the old act, although recourse could have been made to the University of Illinois who, up to the present have had authority to issue only certificates of "certified public accountants." HODGSON JOLLY.

THE BOY AND HIS BIKE.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Anyone who has driven a car knows the nervous strain he is under when a bicycle is in front of him, weaving back and forth across his path, leaning and wobbling from side to side and seeming every second that he is going to flop right in front of the car. Not all bike riders do this, but the majority of them seem to take pleasure in showing their supreme indifference to all motor traffic by pulling this stunt.

I think I voice the sentiment of thousands of fairminded men when I say that drastic measures should be taken with most of the bicycle riders to save them from the dangers of their own folly.
JOHN MCHUGH.

A NATION REBELS.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Is not Chris D. Hagerty's note which you head "A Nation Rebels," really the limit? The idea that grandchildren will be proud to say "my grandfather was a bootlegger" and that the murderous gangs of Chicago and elsewhere are compared to "Washington, Cromwell, Lee, et al," isn't that running the thing literally into the ground?
DUNCAN C. MILNER.

SO DO WE.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—An article by Raymond Fendrick stated that a Capt. Paul Rockwell had the distinction of being the first American to fly over the Riffian lines. Where does this claim to distinction lie? If the Riffs were possessors of a powerful air force the claim would have some weight. It appears to me that the captain is playing a perfectly safe game and not a very honorable one. After all, the Riffs are fighting precisely what we fought for—liberty—the right to govern themselves. I disapprove of any laudatory note in articles of that sort.
EDWARD B. TIERELL.

SOUTH WATER STREET.

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 1.—By what [illegible] do a few men assume the authority to blot out the fine and historic name of South Water street—a place-name rich in its associations of the early city and any in Chicago?

We have retained very few relics of the city's early history and do not sufficiently value the commonplace and homely names which, with time, become as picturesque and add zest to life. Admiring and imitating the historic place-names of Europe, we do nothing to preserve our own and even destroy the few which gain a foothold. Where is our Fleet Wheel boulevard or our Fair Grounds station for the south side suburban trains?

Will we stand idly by while a few political harpies and a handful of disparvenu rob hundreds of thousands of this fine heritage left to us by the founders of our city? GEORGE N. WIGHAM.

SOUTH WATER STREET, AGAIN.

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 1.—I have been a resident of Chicago and Evanston the last 40 years. The name of South Water street has always been synonymous in the millions who have seen it, of filth, dirt, stench of dead poultry, aged eggs, etc. Its passing should mean much toward the good name of Chicago—a good riddance to bad rubbish (as I and you like).

"Wacker drive" is not euphonious. It sounds like "walk or drive!" Some name would sound better than either of the above two. A. B. L.

ATHLETICS FOR GIRLS.

Wilmette, Ill., Sept. 1.—I wish to take exception to the letter of J. M. S. In the first place he (or she) says that competitive athletics sap the vitality. Competitive sports obtain all that is possible from one by means of highly specialized and intensive training. But instead of breaking down, they build up to the point of highest efficiency. That is, if done rightly, and they are more and more being done rightly. In most colleges the greatest athletes are not the best scholars, but the best scholars are athletes of some standing.

I believe that athletics are as helpful to girls as to fellows. The only reason that the troubles of which J. M. S. [illegible] occurred was that the older generation will not get used to it. I agree perfectly with your editorial on women's athletics, and, being one of the younger generation, and a male, might I not be considered one of a class who ought to be the ones to judge? C. L. SHARROW.

LIBERTY IN INDIANA.

Gary, Ind., Aug. 29.—Take up a collection to buy lumber to crate up the statue of liberty and turn the light of liberty over to the legislature of Indiana. Arrest all persons carrying a basket that could contain grapes to be used in making wine. J. W. WORTH.

THE SCOREBOARD DEFENDED.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—I, too, attended the White Sox-Detroit game of Aug. 31, but at all times, I knew the names of the pitchers. Mr. F. W. Russell does not need no number to inform him who the Sox pitchers are, but does he not know that the relieving pitcher's number is flashed under the "batter" section of the scoreboard as he enters the game?
C. V. BLAKE.

THE FOREIGN DEBTS.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Just a few words to express my approval of your attitude on foreign debts. If they haven't the money to pay, they have possessions in the western hemisphere, or elsewhere that we could use to very good advantage. The American tax payer should be considered. RAY VAN DORN.

60,000 CROWD IS EXPECTED AT G. O. P. PICNIC

Speakers and Games for All Tastes.

Between 50,000 and 60,000 people are expected at the annual Republican picnic of the north side wards at Riverview park tomorrow. More than 56,000 attended last year on a rainy day, but yesterday they ran out of tickets, although 118,000 had been printed. These picnics have been held for the last fourteen years and are usually the largest in Cook county of any political group.

More Than $1,000 Cash Prizes.

The affair this year is in charge of Thomas O. Wallace, clerk of the Circuit court, with Oscar Reumas, chairman of the general committee, and former Attorney General Brundage as chairman of the executive committee.

More than $1,000 in cash and much more in prizes are to be distributed for winners of races, games and other contests, baseball game and dancing. But every person attending will have three chances at $100 in real money. Each ticket has a numbered coupon. For the lucky first draw $100 will be given by the Aetna State bank, for the second number another $100 by Ald. Albert E. Lescher, and for the third number $100 donated by Mr. Wallace. Then Sheriff Hoffman and County Commissioner Tom Murray have donated another $100 to be distributed among the most active precinct committeemen. President Barrett of the board of review will give another $50 for the most popular politician" at the outing.

Waltz Prizes for Children.

John Passmore, clerk of the Criminal court, has given $25 in a waltz contest for children under 12 years of age. Assessor Gene G. Oliver has donated another $25 for another dancing contest, and Mr. Brundage $25 for the winner of a tug of war.

Then follow sundry cash prizes of $10 and $5, and cigars, electric toasters, six hams and sides of bacon, electric hair clipper, brisket of corned beef, camp stove, and other things.

For those who prefer words of wisdom to physical contests, the committee has enrolled 22 speakers, so that every one can listen as little or as much as he desires. On the list are State's Attorney Crowe, Ald. Loescher, Senator McKinley, U. S. District Attorney Olson, Ald. Nelson, John H. Passmore, Congressman Henry R. Rathbone, Assessor Charles Ringer, and County Commissioner Tom Murray.

SYDNEY I. W. W. FIGHT MOVE FOR DEPORTATIONS

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The Industrial Workers of the World have placarded the city urging the workers to organize a general strike to prevent the threatened deportation of leaders of the unofficial British seamen's strike.

The coal miners of New South Wales have decided to strike as soon as the deportation of any person connected with the seamen's strike is ordered. Tam Walsh and Johannsen, leaders of the strike in Australia, have been summoned before the deportation board at Sydney.)

Twelve white sailors and fourteen Negro firemen of the steamer Min, en route to Rabaul and London, have struck at New Castle. Since the Negroes are in the class of prohibited immigrants, the captain of the vessel must maintain them or pay a fine of £100 ($485) for each of the fourteen firemen if they are absent from their ship more than twenty-four hours.

Berengaria Sails on Time.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The unofficial strike of British seamen suffered another blow today when the big liner Berengaria, with a full crew, sailed for New York on scheduled time.

Klan Places Wreath on the Grave of Roosevelt

New York, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Ku Klux Klansmen placed a wreath on the grave of Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay last night with ceremonies attended by about 500 persons, it was learned today.

BEGS $19 AN HOUR

THOMAS MOLLETT.

SEIZE BEGGARS; FIDDLER TAKES IN $19 AN HOUR

A roundup of loop beggars last night by Detectives Howe and Lee of the central station caught a blind boy, Thomas Mollett, 22, who with his fiddle earned $19 an hour. With his wife, who also is sightless, he had been living at the Plaza hotel.

At the station he said he had been playing for the dollars to take them to Battle Creek, Mich. Shortly after his arrest Mrs. Mollett arrived in a taxicab, bringing him a chicken supper.

Another arrested was Arthur Prudhomme, 838 Eastwood avenue, an elevator man, who said he had begged for half an hour and got $9. He and his wife wanted money to go to Milwaukee for Labor day, he said.

While Jack Palmer, 50 years old, played a violin his 76 year old mother, Mrs. Virginia Palmer, 316 South State street, tried to sing. They didn't have a license, so they were also jailed for begging.

RUSHES TO RITES FOR VANDERBILT ON SPECIAL TRAIN

En route to New York City to attend the funeral of Reggie Vanderbilt, Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph company, arrived in Chicago last night on a special train from Yellowstone National park.

From St. Paul the train, which consisted of a baggage and Pullman, was hauled over the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy railroad. The trip from Yellowstone park was made in record time over the Northern Pacific. At the Chicago terminal the Mackay special train was switched from the "Q" to the New York Central, the latter completing the journey to New York City. While railroad officials were reluctant to discuss the expense of the special it was inferred that the trip will cost Mr. Mackay more than $10,000.

Funeral Held Tomorrow for Winfield S. Day

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Elmhurst, for Winfield Scott Day, member of the grain firm of Scott & Day, who died yesterday at the Oak Park hospital. Mr. Day was a member of the Elmhurst park board and belonged to the Union League and Chicago Athletic clubs and to the Elmhurst council of the Knights of Columbus. His widow, two sons and three daughters survive.

MRS. RALPH F. SKELTON, who died in London, Eng., on Aug. 24, from burns received in an explosion, will be buried today from the home of her father, Charles A. Brown, at Hinsdale, Ill. The Rev. Earl H. Merriam of Mount Eagle, Tenn., will officiate.

HOLD BOYS AS BURGLARS.

Three boys, William Dugan and his brother, Eugene, and Walter Kaslin, were held to the grand jury yesterday on charges of robbery and burglary. The Dugan boys live at 1834 North Karlov avenue.

REPORTS U. S. IN PINK OF HEALTH; DEATH RATE CUT

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Satisfaction with health conditions was expressed today by Surgeon General Cumming of the United States public health service.

"Health conditions in the United States have been generally good so far this year," he said.

"Preliminary figures indicate that the death rate for the first seven months of 1925 will be lower than the average for the last five years, in spite of the fact that the rate for the month of June was considerably higher than usual for that month. This was probably due in some measure to the heat waves which prevailed over a large part of the country."

Dr. Cumming said that reports from state and city health officers indicate that most of the more common communicable disease have been less destructive than usual this summer.

"For eight weeks since the first of July the states which report regularly to the public health service have recorded aproximately 6,400 cases of diphtheria," he said. "Last year, for the corresponding period, these same states reported nearly 8,100 cases. During the same period reports of measles indicated a decrease from last year of 27 per cent, while scarlet fever decreased 14 per cent."

SWISS WELCOME MRS. WILSON ON VISIT TO GENEVA

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, when she arrived in Geneva tonight, found on the table in the salon of the famous Chateau Bartholoni, which is to be her residence during her stay, two tokens of welcome from the republic of Switzerland. One was a bouquet of flowers, the other a letter from the government, extending greetings to her in the name of the citizens. The letter recalled the contribution of her husband to the cause of international peace. Two members of the Geneva state council will call on Mrs. Wilson Monday as a further manifestation of respect. Mrs. Wilson will attend the sessions of the league assembly opening next week.

PLAIN FIGURES

The confidence of a customer is established immediately when trading in a store where the merchandise is marked in plain figures.

A merchant who marks his goods in plain figures knows full well that comparisons will be made. He is also confident that his prices will bear comparison.

Wouldn't you prefer trading with a merchant who marks his goods in plain figures?

U. S. JOINS JAPAN AND BRITAIN IN SHANGHAI QUIZ

Peking Envoys Also Act to Clear Up Row.

BY RODERICK MATHESON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TOKIO, Sept. 5.—America, Japan and Great Britain have agreed to send judicil autorities fro mManila, Tokio, and Hongkong immediately to open a judicial inquiry into the responsibility for the Shanghai riots, it was announced here today.

The diplomats in Peking will open negotiations next week with the Chinese foreign office regarding the constitution of the Shanghai municipal council and the right of the Chinese taxpayers within the international settlement to representation. These questions will be settled before the customs conference convenes.

The customs conference probably will be divided into two sections, one considering customs autonomy and the other customs revision. They will sit simultaneously. This will obviate the possibility of the conference breaking up in the event of a refusal of autonomy. The agenda of the customs conference is being held in abeyance pending the arrival of Silas Strawn of Chicago in Tokio, where he will take up the question with Baron Shidehara prior to continuing to China.

Note on Wireless Stirs Japan.

The Japanese press today is frothing at the mouth at the idea of America prompting China to make a proposal to Japan respecting a combination of the Japanese and American wireless concessions. The foreign office states the press is under a misapprehension regarding the exact situation.

While China's proposal has been received, its phraseology is indefinite. The Japanese minister to Peking was instructed yesterday to ascertain the precise nature of the suggestion.

"Japan's position on wireless is the same as her position on every American and Chinese question—namely, it is ready to discuss in a friendly spirit any reasonable proposition."

Chinese Want Higher Duties.

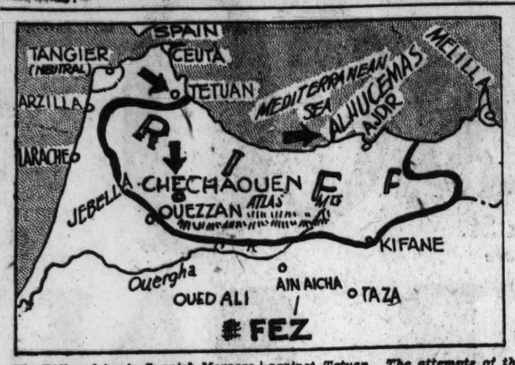
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, Sept. 4.—The identic notes of the powers to China on tariff revision and providing for a separate conference regarding extraterritoriality which were handed to China yesterday, indicate the powers' willingness to assist in a financial reorganization, but also show a determination to retain control of the customs until the debt question is settled. The notes have created a better feeling here.

Wang Cseng Tien, who heads the radical faction of China's commission, insists that the conference must be unhampered in working out the problems. Admiral Tsai Ting Kan, another member, said a complete revision of the tariffs is required, with increases vastly beyond the Washington pledges.

All the members of the Chinese commission emphasized that the powers do not control the export tariffs, and are therefore unable to prevent increases. They assert a 12 per cent import tariff, plus a luxury tax, combined with an increased export tariff, is necessary to net $50,000,000 to the government, above the requirements for the amortization of the present unsecured foreign loans, totaling $600,000,000 of foreign loans, totaling $600,000,000, of America, Great Britain, and France $50,000,000 each.

MOORS PERIL SPANISH CITY



The Riffian drive in Spanish Morocco has reached to within three miles of the important city of Tetuan. French air squadrons were rushed to bomb Chechaouen to relieve the pressure against Tetuan. The attempts of the Spaniards to launch a big attack in the Alhucemas bay have failed, the in the face of the Riffian fire, according to a Paris report.

MOORISH DRIVE PERILS TETUAN; TROOPS RUSHED

French Send Planes to Aid Spaniards.

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The Riffian attack against Tetuan, which began Friday, is making great headway.

The Riffians have reached Tahar blockhouse, three miles south of Tetuan, and Marshal Petain has become so alarmed that he sent six air squadrons, comprising seventy-two planes, to bombard the Riffian town of Chechaouen today to relieve the pressure on the Spanish front. American flyers took part in the air raid.

In the absence of Dictator Primo de Rivera, who has taken command at Tetuan, the Spanish directorate in Madrid has decided to send eighteen battalions of infantry and six regiments of artillery—15,000 of the best soldiers of the Spanish home army—to Tetuan immediately, to reinforce the defense. About 30,000 troops concentrated at Ceuta for landing on the Riff coast already have started for Tetuan. Fresh troops are embarking at Malaga tonight.

King Alfonso left San Sebastian in haste today to sit with the directorate.

Spaniards Face Disaster.

The great Spanish offensive against Abd-el Krim, the Riffian leader, in connection with Marshal Petain's offensive, has been smashed before it started, as all efforts to debark troops at Alhucemas early in the week failed and the Spanish western front is facing disaster. After bombarding Alhucemas four or five days, the Franco Spanish aerial and naval fleets have retired without effecting a single landing.

The Spaniards have enough arms and munitions at Tetuan to supply Krim for several years, should he capture the place.

Riffians Harass French.

FEZ, Sept. 5.—While preparations for the big offensive continue to be pushed, this front is unusually quiet, the only attacks being made by the Riffians themselves, and these are little more than skirmishes. They show, however, that the Riffians are still following their tactics of immediately resuming harassing guerilla inroads when the French cease advancing even for a day.

Two thousand enemy rifles are reported to be concentrated north of Issual and many shots are being fired on this post, which hitherto had been left undisturbed by the rebels. At the same time, on the eastern front Riffians are increasing the pressure on the Branes, who have submitted, some villages being burned, while to the east of Kifane they are working hard fortifying the region.

How desperately the rebels defended their mountain position south of the Ouergha river is shown by a report that eighty bodies of the enemy have been found among the rocky grottoes of this mountain, many of the tribesmen having been killed by grenades.

BULGAR PREMIER CALLS ENEMIES KILLERS OF 355

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Premier Zankoff in the Bulgarian parliament last night charged that the parties opposing his government are responsible for the killing of 355 government officials, army officers, soldiers and policeman who have died by assassination or in the political disorders since M. Zankoff came into power. The premier spoke in reply to an interpellation by an agriculturalist member who accused the government of arbitrary methods. Amid a storm of applause the premier added that the government intended to continue its present policy, believing that it was the only one that would save the country.

STRAWN TELLS PURPOSE BEHIND CHINESE MISSION

Chicagoan Off for Peking Latter Part of Month.

Silas H. Strawn, Chicago attorney whose services have been sought by President Coolidge several times, has accepted appointment as delegate of the United States to the special conference at Peking on Chinese customs affairs, and also as the American member of the Chinese extra-territoriality commission.

In view of the chaotic condition of Chinese affairs, the strike against the British, the insistent demands for the abolishment of special privileges for foreigners in China, this mission is regarded as the most delicate and important at the disposal of the President and secretary of state at this time.

Powers Plan Definite Move.

For the first time since the Washington conference of 1922 and in the face of increasing violence and threats by the Chinese, the United States and the other great powers are about to make a definite move toward settling the questions which are at the root of the unrest in the orient.

Mr. Strawn is sailing the latter part of the month. He returned from Detroit yesterday where he was prominent in the sessions of the American Bar association. John Van A. MacMurray, United States minister to China, would be the other American member to sit in at the tariff conference, he said. He explained the purpose of the conference as follows:

"The Chinese customs tariff conference is the result of the nine power treaty negotiated at the armament conference in Washington on Feb. 6, 1922. The parties to that treaty are: Great Britain, United States, Italy, France, Belgium, Portugal, the Netherlands, China, and Japan.

Cause of Delay.

"The ratification was completed on Aug. 5, 1925, and the conference has been called by the Chinese government to sit at Peking commencing Oct. 26, 1925. The delay in the ratification since 1922 resulted from the disagreement between China and France over the payment of the boxer indemnity by China to France, China insisting that she could pay in the depreciated French paper currency and France insisting that the payment should be made in gold francs. The controversy resulted in the agreement on the part of China to pay the amount in gold dollars.

"The purpose of the conference is to prepare the way for the speedy abolition of likin and for the fulfillment of the other conditions laid down in Article VIII. of the treaty of Sept. 5, 1902, between Great Britain and China and Articles IV. and V. of the treaty of Oct. 8, 1903, between the United States and China, and in Article I. of the supplementary treaty of Oct. 8, 1903, between Japan and China, with a view of levying the surtax provided in the articles. The special conference shall consider the interim provisions to be applied prior to the abolition of likin and the fulfillment of the other conditions laid down in the articles of the treaties above mentioned; and it shall authorize the levying of a surtax on dutiable imports from such date for such purposes and subject to such conditions as it may determine.

Text of Resolution.

At the armament conference there was adopted resolution No. 5, respecting extraterritoriality. This resolution referred to the treaties between China and Great Britain, dated Sept. 5, 1902; the treaty between the United States and China, dated Oct. 8, 1903, and the treaty between China and Japan, dated Oct. 8, 1903, and the resolution provided:

"'That the governments of the powers above named shall establish a commission (to which each of such governments shall appoint one member) to inquire into the present practice of extraterritorial jurisdiction in China and into the laws and the judicial systems and the methods of judicial administration of China, with a view to reporting to the governments of the several powers above named their findings of fact in regard to these matters and their recommendations as to such means as they may find suitable to improve the existing conditions of the administration of justice in China, and to assist and further the efforts of the Chinese government to effect such legislation and judicial reforms as would warrant the several powers in relinquishing, either progressively or otherwise, their respective rights of extraterritoriality.

"'That the commission herein contemplated shall be constituted within three months after the adjournment of the conference in accordance with detailed arrangements to be hereafter agreed upon by the governments of the powers above named, and shall be instructed to submit its report and recommendations within one year after the first meeting of the commission.

"'That each of the powers above named shall be deemed free to accept or reject all or any portion of the recommendations of the commission herein contemplated; but in no case shall any of the said powers make its acceptance of all or any portion of such recommendations, either directly or indirectly, dependent on the granting by China of any special concession, favor, benefit, or immunity, whether political or economic."

"There was an additional resolution which provided:

"That the nonsignatory powers, having by treaty extraterritorial rights in China, may accede to the resolution affecting extraterritoriality and the administration of justice in China by depositing within three months after the adjournment of the conference a written notice of accession with the government of the United States for communication by it to each of the signatory powers.'"

Mr. Strawn is a member of the old law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw and is a former president of the Chicago Bar association. He was asked to become special counsel for the government in the naval oil lease cases but withdrew when complaint was made that one of the banks for which his firm is attorney held deposits of an oil company.

A Symbol of Social Leadership

The Knabe Piano with The AMPICO re-enacting action

OUR LOCATION
Upper Michigan Boulevard
PHONE CENTRAL 1057

HUNDREDS of the names high in the social registers of America's metropolitan cities are names of KNABE-AMPICO owners. With each succeeding day this superb musical instrument becomes more firmly established as a symbol of social leadership.

With but few exceptions the KNABE with the AMPICO is purchased with but two requirements in mind—supremacy of musical expression, and excellence as a fine furnishing. Unlimited purchasing power demands these things before price. Yet the price of the KNABE-AMPICO is very moderate, except in the more elaborate models.

Perhaps in this very fact lies greater glory for the social attainments of this noble instrument.

The true superiority of the Knabe Piano is discovered in its ravishingly beautiful tone. Eighty-eight years ago the first Knabes were built by a man who had attained the ideal in piano tone perfection. William Knabe achieved for the piano what Stradivarius achieved for the violin. But, happily, the secret of building Knabe tone did not pass with William Knabe. Sons have succeeded fathers in the making of Knabe pianos, perpetuating for new generations the principles and ideals of Knabe craftsmanship.

To this master work is now added the magic of the AMPICO. By simply touching a button you call forth the genius of the world's greatest masters of music. Ampico re-enactments of recordings made by living virtuosi are so true to personality, theme and expression that Conservatories of Music use them in the instruction of their students.

If you will be satisfied with nothing less than the best the world produces, your choice of pianos is sure to be the Knabe with the Ampico. Beautiful period models are available, in your choice of woods and finishes. Or special models will be built to your individual order.

By calling at the Knabe-Ampico Studios, 300 North Michigan Boulevard, you may view an additional list of names of Knabe owners socially prominent in New York, Chicago, or elsewhere. We will inform you as to prices and terms, or on any matter requiring description or demonstration. THREE HUNDRED NORTH MICHIGAN BOULEVARD ~ CHICAGO

MINNESOTA GETS $485,173 PRISON PROFIT IN YEAR

Inmates Paid for Work; Almost None Flee.

(This is the third of a series of articles on present methods, tendencies, and experiments in penology in the middle west.)

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Stillwater, Minn., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Upon a sun baked plateau overlooking the winding St. Croix river, scene of many a bloody Indian battle, Minnesota has built a great plant for its criminals, a prison that is probably the best in the United States today in administration, industrial activity, and from the standpoint of reformation.

Here is the spiritual tone of yellow instead of the depressing gray of the ordinary prison. Here are great wings of wide, light cell homes radiating from an administration building that looks in part like a hotel lobby and in part like the general office of a big corporation. Glass and polished wood and busy clerks. But in the center is the great gate of steel and the key that locks out the world, and on the pleasant sunny walls sit quiet men with rifles.

Warden a Former Guard.

At a large flat desk near the entrance, facing the inner door and observing all that goes on, sits the warden, John J. Sullivan. He used to walk these walls with a gun on his shoulder. There is a strong resemblance between him and the men who run Waupun and Michigan City prisons. Prison trained, alert, firm.

On his desk is a row of buttons indicating secretary, shipping clerk, manager of twine department, etc. Samples of products are there. This is a business institution, self-supporting, a business of $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 a year. The last biennial report shows an excess of earnings over expenses of $485,173.

The telephone rings. The warden answers.

"No, madam, no visits on Sundays. Can't help it. No use arguing. That is the rule."

In the lobby outside, in deep leather chairs, sad faced women are waiting to spend a few precious minutes with sons or husbands, sitting knee to knee, with a guard close by. The look that comes to a boy's face as he meets his mother thus is not easily forgotten.

There is a strange hush about this place. Even the civilian employés have a look and step as if they were in the presence of death.

"We make twenty-three tons of bindery twine and 15,000 to 18,000 machines a year," says the warden. "And we sell it all on the open market. Business is good. We have night shifts working."

Only two men have escaped from this prison in twelve years. Both were captured within a few hours. Yet at least 100 convicts are permitted outside five or six miles away, with one guard, on farms and gardens.

What is the secret of this?

While in Michigan and Illinois the honor men do not live in the prison, here they are brought back to their cells every night.

"I select these men," says the warden.

One knows that selection is deep and careful. As the night follows the day so punishment follows violation of rules.

"Strict discipline makes for contentment," the warden says. "We give better cells and better food than in the old prison. I would not go back to the lockstep and the old ways. Men earn their privileges here. I am running this prison. No political influence comes in. No man can tell me that a prisoner is good and won't run away. I judge for myself. Friendship ceases when interference of this kind is attempted."

Dinner Conversation a Reward.

Down the long, sunny halls the khaki clad men are marching to dinner. Two and two they come, each group under a guard. Many young faces here. Not a word is heard except the monotonous checking of numbers from the guards to the deputy. They pass into the big hall and take seats at the clean tables. They fold their arms and wait. Not a word is spoken. A bell strikes. The men begin to eat in silence. White clad waiters pass about with hot food in pails. Substantial food and all they want. A dumb signal to the waiter brings another heaped plate. Another bell and they are through. On three noons a week, if they have been good, they are permitted to talk during the dinner period.

The average man gains nine pounds in weight while here, the prison physician says.

In the factories the same silence and order. A prisoner has cut his hand and the binding becomes misplaced. He signals to another prisoner to fix it. All talk is with the eyes and hands.

Prisoners sleep alone in their cells. The Illinois method of two in a cell is frowned upon in all these other prisons. The chance to talk and the communion in cells may lead to escape.

Prisoners Paid for Work.

Prisoners are paid for their labor, averaging 40 cents a day. They may help their families in this way. In addition the state is aiding families of prisoners to the extent of from $5 to $50 a month. The men may subscribe to periodicals, take special correspondence courses. The parole agents help them.

"Under these conditions," says the report of the parole agents, F. A. Whittier and J. E. Desautels, "with a discipline necessarily rigid and strict, many are quite cured of their criminal tendencies; others are improved, while a few are undoubtedly made worse."

During the years 1920-1922 there were a total of forty-seven violations of parole, and in 1922-'24 there were 106 violations. This is for all state institutions. An effort to analyse this and compare it with other states will be made later.

Violations Cost Privileges.

While the prisoners have a good time law, parole, merit privileges, schools, chautauqua courses, a weekly newspaper, a fine library, movies, a band and orchestra, they may lose all or part of their privileges by violation of any of the following rules:

"Altering clothing, bed not properly made, clothing not in proper order, communicating by signs, defacing property, dilatory, dirty cells or furnishings, disobedience, disturbance in cell house, fighting, hands in pocket, hands or face not clean, hair not combed, impertinence to visitors, insolence to officers, insolence to foreman, insolence to fellow inmates, inattentive to line, inattentive at work, inattentive in school, laughing and fooling, loud talk in cell, loud reading in cell, malicious mischief, not out of bed promptly, not at door for count, not wearing outside shirt, not promptly out of cell when brake is drawn, out of place in shop or line, profanity, quarreling, shirking, spitting on floor, staring at visitors, stealing, trading, talking in chapel, talking in line, talking in school, talking at work, talking from cell to cell, talking in corridor, throwing away food."

There is a whole book of rules besides these. There is a way out for the man who has lost his freedom, but he is not to be envied.

Analysis by Prison Paper.

The last issue of the prison paper, The Mirror, has this editorial:

"During the last eighteen months about 500 men have been discharged from this institution. In the majority of cases they are making good. A few men (eight or ten) have strayed from the straight and narrow and are in jail awaiting trial or serving out sentences in other penal institutions. We know nothing about the reason for these men again jeopardizing their liberty excepting that they took the risk of their own free will. The day these men left prison behind, changed to 'civies,' their intentions were good and they avowed never to break the law again; and that they would accept the most menial of honest work in preference to 'doing time.'

"Regardless of the inflated stories going the rounds of the press as to prisons being run a la country hotels and pleasure resorts, it is very doubtful if there are any men in prison who would not be willing and glad to leave at a moment's notice. But there are a few who are unable to stay out. The smell of hash and beans is too much for them. They want others to conform strictly to the law and make money and create good things for them to filch. Now right here is where the rub comes in. The people who obey the law and create the good things are going to see that the other fellow respects that same law, and they go out and get the filcher and have him locked up. It would have been much better had these men adhered to the resolutions made on the day of their discharge. The safest plan to follow and which will assure you staying out of prison is, stay away from other people's belongings."

OUR MAYOR IS SURROUNDED BY BEAUTY

Bathing beauties assembled in Chicago preparatory to leaving for the Atlantic City contest call on Mayor Dever. JEWISH HOLIDAY SERVICES TO BE HEARD ON RADIO

Observance of the Jewish holidays, Rosh Hashonah to Yom Kippur, Sept. 18 to 28, will be featured in Chicago this year by the broadcasting of the special holiday services from Medinah temple, Cass and Ohio streets, over W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE broadcasting station. Medinah temple has been secured for the period oy the Temple Sholom congregation.

More than a quarter of a million Jews are expected to participate in the services this year. Rabbi Abram Hirshberg of Temple Sholom congregation will conduct the Medinah temple services, which will be open to folk of any faith. Prof. Joseph Swickerath will conduct a large choir.

Rosh Hashonah, or the day of all creation, will this year mark the beginning of the year 5686, according to the Jewish calendar. It is regarded entirely as a religious ceremony, and has no civil significance contrary to the Jan. 1 of the modern calendar. From sundown on Rosh Hashonah until Yom Kippur, or the day of atonement, orthodox Jews will prepare themselves to ask forgiveness of past sins, and on the day itself they will fast.

Plan Carnival to Aid Church Building Fund

A carnival at the grounds of St. Timothy's church, Devon avenue and Washtenaw, will be held Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week to swell the building fund of the parish. The Rev. James Kiely, pastor, is erecting a four story school building at one end of the grounds and hopes next year to build a new church. Twenty booths have been erected for the sale of numerous articles, many of which were donated by loop merchants.

CONTEMPT ORDER ISSUED AGAINST BERWYN MAYOR

Warfare between officials of Berwyn and executives of the Chicago and West Towns Railway company over the alleged dangerous condition of street car tracks in the suburb was climaxed yesterday by an order from Superior Judge Jesse Holdom compelling Frank Janda, mayor of Berwyn; James Mickes, chief of police, and three policemen to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court.

The mayor and police are charged with violating an injunction restraining interference with the operation of street cars on Stanley avenue in Berwyn.

When company officials refused to listen to complaints a crowd of Berwyn citizens tore up part of the tracks. The company then obtained a court injunction restraining Berwyn officials from interference with the operation of cars. In spite of the court order, a second gang tore up some of the tracks.

Judge Holdom will hear the suburb officials' explanations Sept. 11.

ACCUSES FORD OF PIRATING HIS PAYMENT PLAN

New York, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Edward G. Moore today filed suit against the Ford Motor company, alleging that it was "deliberately and consciously infringing and unlawfully converting to its own use" his weekly payment plan for purchasing automobiles.

Moore alleged that the Ford company used his plan without authorization from him, and asked for an injunction to stop the unauthorized use of the scheme, as well as a full accounting of all profits received.

The plan was advertised throughout the world as "the Ford plan," or "the Ford weekly purchase plan," the complaint sets forth, and charges that such advertisements were "piratical publications to the public of the plaintiff's plan."

Heats Home for 25¢ a Week!

"I can run my Bulldog furnace for fourteen days in normal weather conditions on the actual cost of fifty cents." So writes F. R. Redetzke of Cleveland, North Dakota, and he adds: "Hard to believe is it? That's what some of my neighbors thought until I showed them! We have an unlimited amount of grain screenings in this country. That's the fuel I'm using." That's what the Bulldog does with about the lowest grade fuel you can think of! Here's what it does with coal:

2½ TONS HEATS FIVE ROOMS

"There is no heater to compare with the Bulldog. I burned 2½ tons of coal last winter and heated 5 rooms and bath"—Walter Geary, Gloucester, Mass.

Heats Seven Rooms Instead of One!

"Your letter received asking about the Bulldog Furnace. We have had ours in about six weeks and so far it does all Babson Bros claim for it. We have seven rooms, four on the first floor and three on the second, and it heats them fine. We find it takes a little more coal to heat the whole house, than it did to heat one room with a stove using chestnut coal." —J. B. Smith, 19 Elm St., Somerville N. J.

Cuts Coal Bill in Half!

"I had a hot air furnace in our seven-room house before I got the Bulldog and our house was always cold. With the Bulldog it only takes half as much coal and we had weather below zero, and the house was nice and warm in the morning when we got up. We never have the draft on more than half an hour at a time, and has the place red hot. Keeps fire all day in mild weather." —Jess T. Conrad, 1211 W. Arch St., Shamokin, Pa.

No Money Down!

Comes Completely Erected. Install It Yourself

The Bulldog is sent to you for free inspection. Then, if satisfied, you make only small monthly payments at our remarkably low price. Write today! Don't miss this chance to cut down your fuel bills! Install a Bulldog Furnace. It comes to you completely erected—goes through any door—fits any height of basement—and you install it yourself in less than two hours! In fact, H. B. Kester, of Libertyville, N. J., says he installed his Bulldog in 28 minutes. Don't put up with the old fashioned stove heat or some outworn furnace—when you can so easily get the greatest advance in scientific heating at an astonishingly low price. The Bulldog burns almost any kind of fuel, from hard coal to cheap screenings. Keeps a wood fire over night. We have factory connections in both east and west and ship from the nearest point.

Send for Free Book

Learn how to have all the heat you want—where you want it—and save money! Remember the Bulldog is different—and better! Complete combustion of gases save 25% of your fuel bill. Exclusive Gable-Top Radiator receives all the direct rays of the fire. Exclusive oblong fire-pot is not only ideal for coal but enables you to keep a wood fire over night. A Car Unequaled In Looks, Price and Results

Consider the Chrysler Four from any standpoint—of design, of craftsmanship and of performance—and you readily find the reason for the sweeping public demand for it.

Put the Chrysler Four through its paces. Drive it in the thickest of traffic and you will be delighted by its lightning-like, effortless acceleration. Chrysler hydraulic four-wheel brakes, now first offered on a car of this price at slight extra cost, complete the feeling of utmost safety and ease of handling.

Take the open road. Step the Chrysler Four up to your speed and keep it there. You discover a tremendous energy and stamina, coupled with extreme quietness of performance and marked absence of vibration.

You will find that the Chrysler Four gives and does what no other car at its price can equal in power, speed, fuel mileage, acceleration, smoothness, ease of riding and handling.

All this is the result of a new application to proven four-cylinder principles of the same scientific engineering, and the same precision of manufacture with the same prodigal use of fine alloy steels, so characteristic of its companion car, the Chrysler Six.

Come in—we are eager to have you get acquainted with this most remarkable value in the industry.

CHRYSLER FOUR—Touring Car, $895; Club Coupe, $995; Coach, $1045; Sedan, $1095. Hydraulic four-wheel brakes at slight extra cost.

CHRYSLER SIX—Phaeton, $1395; Coach, $1445; Roadster, $1625; Sedan, $1695; Royal Coupe, $1795; Brougham, $1865; Imperial, $1995; Crown-Imperial, $2095.

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.

Bodies by Fisher on all Chrysler enclosed models. All models equipped with balloon tires. We are pleased to extend the conveniences of time-payments. Ask about Chrysler's attractive plan. Chrysler dealers and superior Chrysler service everywhere.

CHRYSLER FOUR

NASH

Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value

The Conquest of Quality

"Above all, I value public respect for the car that bears my name."
C. W. NASH

In the heat of competitive effort there inevitably arises temptation to expedient and compromise.

But those who are truly great go resolutely forward; scorning inferiority; holding high-mindedly to high standards; knowing that for them their least must be their best.

These are the men who have won for the words "Made in America" an international celebrity and world-wide honor.

This is the way America has come to her glory as the greatest manufacturing nation of all the world.

And this is the Nash way. For C. W. Nash is not the man to countenance any deviation from the rugged principles of integrity that govern his manufacturing practice.

To him quality is one thing and only one. Anything less is something else; you may give it your own name.

And today in every American town and city, on every boulevard and highway, Nash is demonstrating anew the power and potency of quality.

Week by week, month by month, sales are rising steadily higher and higher.

Production, again and again, has been greatly increased, and still the magic attraction of quality keeps calling up new armies of buyers to take the place of those who have bought, and to swell next month's business above that of last month.

For twelve successive months Nash sales and production have swept far past the records set by the corresponding months a year ago.

Never has the nation witnessed a more brilliant success.

It is a heartening thing to see for every man and woman who believes in the principle and practice of business honesty.

It testifies eloquently to the inherent good judgment of the American automobile buying public.

And now with new models on display everywhere, offering an even greater measure of quality, the response on the part of purchasers is eclipsing everything that has gone before.

All because Nash is Quality and Quality is Nash, and the nation knows it.

CROWDED DESK AWAITS RETURN OF PRESIDENT

Many Important Policies Must Be Decided.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Important work of an administrative and legislative character awaits the arrival of President Coolidge at the White House this week.

With his return decks will be cleared for what is expected to be the liveliest session of congress in recent years. Nearly all of the members of the cabinet are back at their desks and all except Secretary of War Weeks will be in attendance when cabinet meetings are resumed on Friday.

Major Questions Await.

Major questions of policy, affecting domestic concern as well as international relations, will have immediate consideration at the hands of President Coolidge and his official advisers.

First in importance is the program for the settlement of the French and Italian war debts to the United States. Immediate action will be taken on the budget estimates that are to be submitted to congress on Dec. 1. Decision must be reached on the proposal for reductions in appropriations for the national defense and entwined with this is the question whether the administration will recommend the construction of a new dirigible to replace the lost Shenandoah.

Money for Dry Forces.

President Coolidge also will be required to decide whether largely increased appropriations are to be sought for prohibition enforcement.

Great care will be exercised by the President, acting with the Republican leaders, in the preparation of a legislative program. Tax reduction is to head the list of bills to be approved by the administration, which will also throw its support to the world court issue that will be taken up for debate in the senate on December 19.

Railroad legislation and reorganization of the executive departments are among other subjects that are expected to be touched upon in the President's annual message to congress.

FLORIDA BOUND FOLK GIVEN TIP BY THE MAIL MAN

Acting Postmaster General John H. Bartlett has given instructions to Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder to notify Chicagoans who propose to leave for winter resorts, particularly those in Florida, not to have their mail addressed to general delivery, but to some street and number, either in care of a friend or hotel or business office.

Experience has shown, according to Mr. Bartlett, not only in Florida, but elsewhere, that when thousands of strangers flock into a city, large or small, and have their mail sent to the general delivery, they will be obliged to stand in line sometimes for hours.

For this reason and for their own convenience and comfort, patrons are urged to provide a definite address other than the general delivery.

JAILS MATE

MRS. MARIE N. FLYNN.

CHARGE CAFE MANAGER WITH BEING BIGAMIST

John Flynn, manager of a Thompson restaurant at 341 West Madison street, was telephoning in a drug store opposite the Chicago avenue police station yesterday afternoon when Sergts. Baynes and Kragerud walked in and informed him that Mrs. Flynn No. 2 had sworn to a warrant charging him with bigamy.

The complainant, whose name was Marie Nelson before she was married to Flynn at Crown Point, Ind., is a former school teacher. She lives at 6525 Kimbark avenue. The other wife, Mrs. Edith Flynn, was said to reside at 811 North La Salle street. Flynn himself has a room at 661 North Dearborn street. He went there, according to Mrs. Marie Flynn, because it was inconvenient to travel so far from her south side flat.

The second wife stated that she learned of Flynn's other marriage through a letter written to him in endearing terms by wife No. 1. She enlisted the services of Thomas White of the Burns Detective agency and the warrant was sworn to after Flynn's first mate had been located.

John A. Carroll, Banker, Insures Life for $1,000,000

John A. Carroll, Chicago banker and real estate operator, has bought a $1,000,000 life insurance policy of the Reliance Life Insurance company of Pittsburgh, he announced yesterday. Mr. Carroll, who is 50, obtained the policy without any advance in rating. He organized the Hyde Park State, the South Shore State, and the Jackson Park National banks. In 1923 he purchased for $1,000,000 a tract extending southward from 75th street on Yates avenue. Now there are 1,088 apartment buildings on it.

GOLFERS--ATTENTION

The Creation of an Ideal Suburb Located in the Heart of America's Golf Center

It is not unreasonable to assume that a judicious property investment made adjacent to six of America's leading golf clubs is bound to increase with the positive growth of the Chicago region. Golf memberships are also certain of a premium as the demand becomes greater.

Flossmoor Highlands, situated at a vital position with short access to the finest clubs in the country, has an assured future of sound worth. Here do we find the establishment of a superior suburb which combines all the elements that make for a vigorous prosperity.

Electrified transportation, excellent concrete roads, and an environment of exceptional beauty place Flossmoor as the Playground of Illinois—the Golf Center of America.

Investigate this opportunity. Flossmoor Highlands carries a vital message to the enthusiastic golfer—to the higher type of residential owner and investor.

ARCADIA GARDENS SALES OVER A MILLION AND A HALF DOLLARS

ARTHUR DUNAS

Invites You to Participate in the "Greatest Development Today" in FLORIDA

Florida itself is holding the attention of all America today because fortunes are being made with incredible speed in this magic state. Even the country's leading, conservative magazines tell astounding stories of actual happenings. For instance, this statement appeared in the Saturday Evening Post of August 22, 1925—

"Five or six years ago, for example, on a certain highway leading west from Tampa there were several old shacks tenanted by negroes. The land was worth little more than the price of general farm land. Today the last negro shack is occupied by a real estate dealer, and lots in that spot are valued up to $50,000, all because a far-sighted Northerner built the Gandy Bridge connecting Tampa with the Gulf-coast playground of the west, over which thousands of automobiles pass daily." And this is only one of the hundreds of stories of tremendous profits that have ACTUALLY been made, and are being made in Florida.

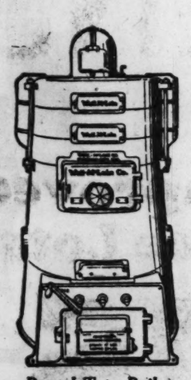
A more efficient boiler in every important essential

Weil-McLain heating surfaces are corrugated like this ~~~ instead of straight like this ———



Round Type Boiler
For steam, vapor, vacuum and hot water heating; made in sizes for bungalows, residences and small apartments.

Sizes for Oil Burners
The quick, intense heat produced by modern oil burners demands in a boiler a great amount of concentrated heat-absorbing surface and a long fire travel. You get all this in Weil-McLain Boilers. The "5 section" and the "6 section" sizes of round-type boilers and the longer sizes of square-type boilers are most suitable for use with oil burners.

The radical and far-reaching advancements achieved in Weil-McLain Boilers win the unqualified approval of both heating experts and home owners. No ordinary standards can measure and no words or pictures can describe what our engineers have contributed toward care-free, economical operation. Only an actual experience, in your own home, will reveal what these improvements mean to your coal pile and home comfort.

Two great savings

For several years we have made the unqualified claim, which we now repeat, that this boiler takes a long step forward in ending fuel waste.

It conquers the two greatest enemies of your coal pile and home comfort. By combating waste, both DOWN INTO THE ASH PIT and UP THE CHIMNEY, it sets up new standards of boiler economy.

How ash pit waste is ended

In designing this boiler our engineers were faced squarely with the fact that fuel prices are extremely high. So they built the Weil-McLain Boiler to meet, rather than avoid, this modern condition.

The result of their efforts is now known as Scientific Combustion—an achievement of perhaps as far-reaching effect upon modern home heating as is the effect of the automobile or radio upon other phases of modern life.

Scientific Combustion means complete burning of the fuel. It means a bright-burning fire that burns clean, and a long-lasting fire that does not require frequent attention. It means a fire that prevents most clinkers, and one that ends waste of valuable, unburned fuel DOWN into the ash pit.

Waste up the chimney is also conquered

But Weil-McLain engineers went further. They had the belief that in addition to this visible waste there were possibilities for further economy through conquering that invisible but perhaps even more costly waste of valuable heat units up the chimney.

To the solution of this problem they brought more than thirty years of boiler manufacturing experience and long months of research. They endeavored to embody in this boiler a degree of economy and efficiency never before attained in any boiler of this type.

They have succeeded. The Weil-McLain corrugated "double-surface" crown sheet section, directly above the fire, and the corrugation of all other vital heating surfaces, is an outstanding development.

The heating surfaces are corrugated like this ~~~, instead of straight like this ———, thus increasing the heating surface and resulting in more heat units being absorbed—fewer wasted up the chimney.

The corrugated design of the crown sheet section is of special value. The candle test shows that this surface, because directly above the fire, is the most valuable heating surface in any boiler.

Doubling the heating surface at this important point and corrugating the other vital heating surfaces in all sections, greatly increases heating efficiency and reduces chimney waste.

A second means of ending chimney waste

The final proof that Weil-McLain engineers have succeeded is the principle of long "back-and-forth" fire travel which they have applied in a new and better way.

This improvement is the fruit of long experience and the manufacture of many thousands of boilers. The illustration shows how, due to this feature, the hot gases are forced to travel backward and forward between the corrugated heating surfaces. Thus the hot gases are held longer in contact with the heating surfaces. Heat units which would otherwise be wasted up the chimney are sent to your radiators.

Home owners who have studied the question say they never before realized that such boiler results were possible.

Other Weil-McLain features

There are many other features which place the Weil-McLain Boiler clearly in a class by itself. Among them are:

—Triangular grates which crush out stubborn clinkers.
—Lower one-third of firepot smooth and non-clogging, so fire shakes down easily and clean.
—Large fire and slicing doors for your convenience.
—Handy front clean-out doors in each section.
—And more heat from less fuel with oil, or any other kind of fuel or any method of firing.

SICILIANS AGAIN CONVERSE WITH BULLETS; 1 SHOT

And Gunmen's Victim, as Usual, Is Silent.

Sicilian vengeance spoke yesterday in the usual language—bullets—to Joseph Adado, 29 years old, police character of Chicago and Philadelphia. He was struck in the abdomen and he made the usual answer of wounded Sicilians—silence.

Somehow the attempt on Adado's life, which may yet prove fatal, was attributed by the police to the recent slayings of Angelo Genna and Tony Genna. It was at best a guess, but it was the only guess made.

No Witnesses Found.

Adado was shot while standing or walking at Polk and Leavitt streets at 2 o'clock in the morning. There was the customary absence of witnesses.

Four other Sicilians said they were seated just around the corner and upon hearing the shots ran around to where Adado was found on the sidewalk, dangerously wounded. No one else was in sight, the four stated. They didn't even see or hear the disappearing automobile which ordinarily is just turning another corner.

As these four countrymen of Adado took him to the county hospital the police were unable to definitely ascertain whether or not Adado had been armed. The victim would not even tell what he was doing in that neighborhood, two miles from his home, at that hour of the morning.

Victim Tells False Story.

Adado sought to throw the detectives off the scent by saying he had just recently come to this country. Sergt. John Leyendecker of the Marquette police station learned the contrary. Adado had been held as a suspect in the murder of Angelo Genna and at that time he gave the name of Bruno Mashiski. He had been arrested also in Philadelphia under the name of Nick Ross.

OLD TIMER

John McGill, 89 years old, who claims the distinction of having been the first white boy born in Chicago, comes from his present home at Elkhorn, Wis., to visit his daughter at 6153 South Park avenue. He was born in a house on the site which the city hall now occupies.

Robber Who Stole $130 Gets 10 Yr. Prison Sentence

Ten years to life imprisonment was the punishment meted out yesterday to Robert Porter, colored, by a jury which deliberated all night in Judge Harry B. Miller's courtroom. He was prosecuted by Assistant State's Attorney Harold Levy and charged with robbing Mrs. Lena Blackberg, 4834 South Michigan avenue, of $130.

Shoot Without Warning, Then Retreat Under Fire

Lincoln park police sought two men yesterday who, apparently without cause, opened fire upon Patrolman W. J. Gruber when the officer approached their automobile at Roscoe street and Sheridan road. The car was drawn up into the bridle path. Gruber returned the fire from behind a tree as the car sped away.

The PRINCE OF WALES may never return to Chicago

Naturally we are proud to have been the only Chicago hotel permitted to extend its hospitality to the Prince of Wales. But remember, while international recognition is gratifying, it carries with it an implied leadership that must daily be maintained. And . . . though the Prince of Wales may never return to Chicago . . . Hotel Sovereign will nevertheless so serve its guests . . . so assume its penalty of leadership that The Sovereign will always be a fit abode for royalty.

But you are as welcome as the Prince of Wales. Our doors are open . . . but only to desirable guests. Our policy is one of protection for those who live here now . . . for those who may join us.

Our spirit to serve better . . . to give more . . . has brought us an ever-increasing patronage . . . a great measure of success. So . . . Hotel Sovereign can offer today accommodations which are setting a new standard, at rates astonishingly low. With all of Hotel Sovereign advantages, single rooms may be had at $80 per month, and up. And suites of one, two or three bedrooms with a living room [some with private dining room and kitchen] are priced, for example, in two-room units at $150 per month, and up.

A Famous Restaurant

The Sovereign restaurant . . . also open to non-resident guests . . . is one of the famous dining places of America . . . a restaurant with much the atmosphere of an ultra European cafe. A fine a la carte menu always, or club breakfasts at from 50c to 85c . . . daily luncheon at $1.00 . . . or table d'hote evenings at $1.50 and $2.50.

Weddings, banquets, dinners, luncheons are an assured success with Sovereign service and Sovereign supervision. Private dining rooms . . . the magnificent ballroom . . . are available for large or small gatherings or social functions.

To many . . . the 60-foot, white-tile swimming pool . . . free to resident guests . . . available to others at a nominal charge . . . is one of the leading Sovereign attractions. Here, too, are Turkish Baths.

For a stay of a day . . . or your home for the year, the Sovereign offers more than any other hotel.

SAME FINE BROUGHAM

at a new reduced price

INCREASED volume of sales—founded on Studebaker's policies of one-profit manufacture, and no yearly models—made it possible to reduce the price of this Special Six Brougham by $100.

Here is a car that will appeal to buyers who seek unusual distinction of appearance with economy.

Many of the superiorities of this one-profit Brougham are hidden until revealed by thousands of miles of usage. You can't see the fine workmanship and materials inside the engine and body which give excess mileage. But here are some things that you can check against competitive cars to satisfy yourself that this is a Studebaker of the same fine quality as before the price cut—a Studebaker more up to date than the newest yearly models.

The body is lacquered with satin-black top. Oval rear-quarter windows, smartly tilted, and black landau top braces, enhance its appearance. There are four wide doors and both seats are full width.

WOOL UPHOLSTERY—Durable.

INSTRUMENTS—Including 8-day clock, gasoline gauge, speedometer, oil pressure gauge and ammeter, in single grouping under glass, on beautiful silver-faced dial.

FULL-SIZE BALLOON TIRES—For which the steering gear, fenders and even the body lines are specially designed.

AUTOMATIC SPARK CONTROL—No spark lever on steering wheel, but:

SAFETY LIGHTING CONTROL—On the steering wheel, at the driver's finger tips.

IMPROVED ONE-PIECE WINDSHIELD—Automatic windshield cleaner, weatherproof visor, rear-view mirror, cowl lights, extension lamp, and cowl ventilator.

CO-INCIDENTAL LOCK—To ignition and steering wheel, which serves to reduce the theft insurance rates—single key operates this lock as well as that on the door and the clever device on the spare-tire carrier.

COMPLETELY MACHINED CRANKSHAFT—To obtain perfect engine balance and thus reduce vibration to a minimum.

There are only two cars manufactured on the one-profit basis: Studebaker in the fine car field, and the Ford in the low priced field. Only in these two cases does one company in its own plants make all bodies, all engines, all clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, gray iron castings and drop forgings.

Come in and see this Brougham. You will find it the same fine car as before the price reduction.

Looking out over the Atlantic from Hollywood's new $250,000 Bathing Casino, the pleasure mecca of the East Coast

HERE'S what they saw! Here's what they say— about HOLLYWOOD -by-the-Sea

Above: With its seven miles of bathing beaches, Hollywood offers many attractions.

"WONDERFUL vacation!" "I was never entertained so royally in my life!" "The best trip I ever had!" "I'm coming back here to live!"

You could hear such expressions of enthusiastic praise from the lips of thousands of vacationists, who have visited Hollywood-by-the-Sea during the present summer.

From conservative New England and from sophisticated New York, from quiet Philadelphia and from the energetic Central West they have come to enjoy the alluring beauty and the varied pleasure of this miracle city—and to know the true marvel of Florida. Almost half of these vacationists have been from the Central West.

Hollywood Proves Revelation

"I expected a lot," said one guest, "but this trip exceeded my greatest expectations, from the moment I stepped aboard the train, until I was home again."

The train itself proved a revelation of modern travel-luxury, with its continuous dining car service, its library-observation car, and Pullman service throughout.

Of course, they enjoyed the brilliant gayety of the Broad Walk, extending for two miles along the Atlantic. They were instantly attracted to the new $250,000 Bathing Casino, first opened to the public on July 4th of this year. With its great salt water pool, its spacious quarters and extensive galleries for spectators, it is the gathering place of thousands from "the back country."

They golfed by day on Hollywood's splendid "sporty" links; they danced by night in the patio of Hollywood's Country Club with its light-tinted glass dancing floor, and its folding roof which let in the full glory of Florida's star-studded night sky.

Happy Throngs on the Two Mile Broad Walk Hollywood-by-the-Sea

Here's what they say in New York

"What has been accomplished in Hollywood in four years is astonishing. That one man could conceive and consummate such a gigantic project is hard to believe. Those who come here to live, I envy. Good health, long life and prosperity seem assured." Clifford Standish, New York Times.

"Hollywood . . . with its interlocking development of harbor and city co-ordinated . . . seems destined to grow into one of the leading cities of Florida." J. S. Jourdan, Wall Street Journal.

"During one week, what I saw of Hollywood simply amazed me. It has been planned by far-sighted men, wise in the choice of a site for a great city. The development work is solid in character, beautiful in symmetry and substantial in its makeup." G. W. Beardsley, New York Commercial.

They spun in fast de luxe motor coaches up and down the coast drives of Florida—past palatial homes, belonging to a list of famous families which would make a true "who's who" of American wealth and industry. Their eyes delighted in the vivid coloring of villas and palaces, set like jewels along the great vista of shore and ocean. Never had man and nature united to produce more gorgeous coloring.

And in speedy motor boats they skimmed through miles of Florida's famous Inland Waterways—through a system of canals, channels, lagoons and lakes that someone appropriately said, "truly out-Veniced Venice." Here was the secret of Florida's greatness—the engineering achievement which is turning a whole state from wasteland and mangrove swamp—to a veritable Garden of Eden, in which bounteous nature makes life easy by her abundance.

Hollywood-by-the-Sea— a Place to Live

As one Chicago man exclaimed, "I thought they had put through some remarkable building projects at home in the past few years, but Hollywood-by-the-Sea surpasses anything I have ever seen. Think of this city being only four years old."

That, indeed, is the marvel which impressed everyone. Here they found a real and thriving city of velvety grass-covered lawns flanking smooth coral boulevards—a city of artistically lighted streets and inviting parks and parkways—a city of beautiful homes and apartments—of thriving businesses, established churches, up-to-date schools, substantial banks, and spacious, luxurious hotels.

"Hollywood is the wonder city of Florida," said Gilbert T. Hodges, of All Fiction Magazine. "We were simply dumbfounded at the progress Hollywood has already accomplished . . . We have found a delightful summer climate, a beautiful country, and one with endless business and industrial opportunities. In other words, Hollywood is a place where one can live with health and prosperity."

Above: A group of Chicagoans with an afternoon's catch from the Gulf Stream, directly off the coast of Hollywood-by-the-Sea.

At right: Gene Sarazen gives Thomas Meighan a few fine points of the game on the famous golf links at Hollywood-by-the-Sea.

MAKE YOUR VACATION SHOW YOU FLORIDA

Most of all you would have been surprised at the remarkably congenial, distinguished company which has made up these vacation tours. Here you would have met business executives and their families—educators and writers—veteran travelers—young men and young women with the verve of life and the buoyant enjoyment to get the fullest pleasure out of every hour.

Decide now that you will enjoy such a vacation. These splendidly conducted tours provide the utmost at the least expense. One hundred dollars pays for your Pullman berth and round trip fare on the train; it pays for hotel accommodations—room and meals; it pays for your trips by boat and motor coach—it gives you the freedom of the golf courses—the beaches—all your entertainment and recreation. With the small exception of dining-car meals, there need not be another dollar of expense to you, for the most complete and enjoyable vacation.

Read the list of departure dates on which you may secure accommodations. Select the date most convenient to you, and make reservations as far in advance as possible. Act quickly. Decide upon a vacation at Hollywood-by-the-Sea, then act upon your decision.

I. C. SPEEDS UP ELECTRIFICATION OF SUBURB LINES

The Illinois Central has geared into high speed during the last week in the electrification of its suburban service.

More than 2,500 feet of wire were strung two days ago, over eight miles yesterday, and trolley wires will be hoisted by Monday at latest—and perhaps today or tomorrow.

The first motor car was completed by the Pullman company three days ago, is now being inspected by the technicians and experts, and will be gone over by the officials within ten days.

Substation Sites Bought.

The last site for substations to tune down the electric power for the operation of the cars was acquired four days ago.

It is expected that by Dec. 1 all the poles will be erected and the wires strung from 67th street to South Chicago, Matteson, and Blue Island. The poles are already in place on the South Chicago and Blue Island routes and between Kensington and Matteson on the main line. More than 80 per cent of all foundations are in for all of the 934 poles, and approximately 60 per cent of all line structures are up.

Insists on Opening July 1.

While the engineers and other experts are begging for an opening date of Sept. 1, 1926, President Markham is insisting that the first car be operated July 1 next, if physically possible. That is exactly six months ahead of required time.

It might seem that a rate of eight miles a day would soon complete the job of stringing wires; but there is 776 miles to be erected, exclusive of about 50 miles of cable which contains from 16 to 30 wires. The wires are to be stretched over the 29.5 miles of the main line, 4.5 miles of the South Chicago branch and 4.6 miles of the Blue Island branch.

Trackage Program Outlined.

The complete track program is as follows: Starting at Randolph street there will be eight tracks for loading trains when the station facilities are fully developed, but probably only five tracks in operation by July 1. Then there will be electrified five tracks between this terminal and Eighth street, six tracks between Eighth and 53d streets, four tracks between 53d street and Kensington, and two tracks between Kensington and Matteson. On the South Chicago branch there will be two tracks electrified and on the Blue Island line only one track. However, on the Blue Island cut off, all of the construction will be for two tracks, except the stringing of wires. The second track will be laid when the traffic justifies, the right of way for it having already been acquired.

As soon as the first motor car has been officially inspected and approved, the Pullman company will start mass production of 129 others. The Standard Steel Car company is expected to begin building 85 trailer cars within ten days or two weeks. These, added to the 45 new steel cars now in service, are to be the backbone of a suburban service which contemplates a speed of 57 miles an hour of tangent track.

All of the filling in has been completed except between 83d and 95th streets, which is now in progress. The fill for the Markham yard, which will have a present capacity of 10,815 cars, has been finished.

Substations Under Way.

The electric substations are showing activity. The 16th street station has been started. The steel has been erected at the 69th street station and on Front street in Kensington. The site for the Harvey substation was bought three weeks ago and the one on Laflin street in Blue Island this week. Excavation has started on the Cheltenham station and on the one at Vollmer road near Olympia Fields. The Commonwealth Edison company, which is doing the work, is a trifle ahead of the schedule of performance and has told the I. C. officials that all equipment has been ordered.

When this job is completed, it is probable that electrification of the freight service north of Roosevelt road will be started. It is required to be completed by 1930.

COUNTY EMPLOYEE FOR 31 YEARS.

John C. Satterlee, 3537 Walnut street, celebrated his 70th birthday yesterday in the county building, where he has been employed since 1894. Mr. Satterlee began his work during Mayor Washburne's administration in the county clerk's office.

POLISH VETERANS HONOR OLD LAND AND THEIR NEW

In a hall decorated with the flags of America and Poland, and with wreaths in memory of those who died for a common cause, the fourth annual convention of the American Alliance of War Veterans of Polish Extraction opened last night at the Polish National Alliance building, 1406 West Division street.

Fifty-seven delegates, representing thirteen posts of the order, were present at the first session. M. Piotizkowzki, chairman of the convention committee, called the meeting to order and introduced L. T. Walkowicz of Chicago, commander of the alliance, who welcomed the delegates.

A ball is scheduled for tonight and business sessions for tomorrow. Planning of relief work among disabled Polish-American soldiers one of the chief aims of the convention.

CHILD BURNS TO DEATH IN AUTO.

Ivanhoe

had 2,000 visitors last Sunday

Come Out-Yourself-Today

A throng of live Chicagoans found it worth while to visit "IVANHOE" last week. They learned for themselves just "what's doing" in this new, fast-building community. They went home after a happy day, with a better knowledge of conditions and affairs that are vitally important to every citizen of our great, growing, sprawling city. They now know of one place where a family can live in secluded comfort, secure from encroaching industry, and still be in close touch with the very heart of the city by means of unparalleled transportation. They learned about "IVANHOE"!

The lesson was so vivid to many that they followed its teaching by an immediate purchase in the great 3rd Unit of this magnificent property. Wisdom indeed! For in this unit, homesites spacious and fully provided with the most complete improvements ever installed in a Chicago home-development may be had at true bargain prices and on most liberal terms. Business locations, and flat and apartment sites, ripe for early large profits, are offered at similar below-market-value prices.

Before it is too late, why don't you learn about "IVANHOE"? Today, or tomorrow's Holiday, offers you an excellent opportunity to come and give this brand new community a thorough, searching inspection.

Plenty of Illinois Central Trains

FREE Round Trip TICKETS

"IVANHOE" already has fine train service—four fast trains will serve you today. Our representatives, wearing "IVANHOE" badges, will be on duty at all scheduled stations ready to supply FREE Round Trip Tickets to "IVANHOE" for yourself and party.

Special INVITATION to Motorists!

It's just a nice Sunday afternoon drive to "IVANHOE" and home again. And what fun when you get there! Wide, smooth concrete boulevards and plenty of parking space. Acres of velvety green grass and hundreds of trees bordering miles of cement sidewalks. Cool, refreshing breezes blow at "IVANHOE." While you're looking over the development the youngsters can have a barrel of fun in one of the fully equipped "IVANHOE" Community Playgrounds. By all means come out—good paved roads make the trip easy. Take the most convenient way to Halsted Street, then

$2,000 in Diamond Prizes FREE!

Simply Write 100 Words About the Diamond

Why do you think the diamond is beautiful? What is there in its appearance that most stirs your soul? There's never a human eye or heart but thrills instantly at the sight of a genuine Diamond, "the most beautiful thing in nature." WHY IS IT? Tell us what there is in a Diamond that most appeals to you. Just write 100 words, or less. Loftis Bros. & Co. are giving away $2,000 in Diamond prizes to the persons who write the five most humanly interesting descriptions. Win a beautiful Diamond ring for yourself—it's easy!

PRIZES FOR 5 BEST DIAMOND DESCRIPTIONS

1st Prize . . . $1,000 Diamond Ring
2nd Prize . . . . $500 Diamond Ring
3rd Prize . . . . $250 Diamond Ring
4th Prize . . . . $150 Diamond Ring
5th Prize . . . . $100 Diamond Ring

The winner of any one of these prizes may choose either a man's or a lady's ring.

RULES OF THE LOFTIS DIAMOND CONTEST

1. Write your description of a DIAMOND on a plain piece of paper on which you have also written your name and address. Descriptions must not exceed 100 words in length. Contestants may send in any number of descriptions they desire, but each must be on a separate piece of paper. Write on one side of the paper only.

2. Descriptions may be either prose or poetry. There are no restrictions on style, wording, or form. Slogans, phrases, stories, dialogues, etc., are permitted.

3. Each contribution will be judged from the human standpoint primarily. The THOUGHT behind the words will be the principal consideration in deciding the winner. In case of a tie, a prize identical in all respects with that tied for will be awarded each tying contestant.

4. The winner of any of the 5 Diamond Prizes has the choice of selecting either a man's ring or a lady's ring of the value stated, from the stock of any Loftis store or from our catalog. Free catalog sent you on request. Contest is open to all men and women over twenty-one years of age, except Loftis Bros. & Co.'s employes and members of their families.

5. Contest closes October 15th, 1925. No contributions will be returned. All descriptions for the contest will become the property of Loftis Bros. & Co. to be used in whatever manner they desire. Each contestant agrees to abide by the decision of the contest judges, which will be final.

6. Bring or mail your descriptions to the Diamond Contest Editor, Loftis Bros. & Co., Dept. 923, 108 N. State St., Chicago, Ill., or to any of our branch stores.

Amazing New Invention for the DEAF

Not even a headband needed!

At last the unseen hearing aid—worn in, not on, the ear—in perfect comfort

FROM Europe comes a remarkable new invention for the deaf, called the Midget Phonophor. Brings back the joy of good hearing often in the most stubborn cases of deafness. The tiniest hearing aid in existence—but the most powerful. Worn without headband. Almost invisible. Reproduces conversation or music with clear, natural tones.

The proposed Indrio station of the Florida East Coast Railway, whose main line provides frequent service to the north and south. Directly behind the station is the Dixie Highway, which in Indrio will be a palm-shaded boulevard 150 feet in width.

INDRIO to Open September 12th

First Unit of New Florida Town will be placed on sale next Saturday

Advantages that Assure a Sound Investment

Indrio will have countless advantages that make for speedy growth and substantial increases in property values. Among them are:

A high, dry location on the Indian River, the Dixie Highway and the Florida East Coast Railway.

A comfortable climate the year 'round; average annual temperature 72 degrees.

Proposed improvements to include a million dollar hotel, salt water bathing casino, pleasure and boat piers, yacht harbor, tennis and roque courts, bridle paths and an 18-hole golf course.

An abundance of shady parks, plazas and boulevards, the latter to range from 100 to 200 feet in width.

All residence lots to be 100 feet wide, and to face either an avenue or a boulevard.

Architectural harmony assured by the adoption of the appropriate Mediterranean style of architecture as standard. All structures to be approved by the city planners before erection.

Paving, sidewalks, water, electricity and sewers to be installed without expense to the buyer.

An inexhaustible supply of pure drinking water.

Rigid restrictions to exclude undesirable citizens.

Splendid game fishing and duck shooting.

Surrounded by Fort Pierce Farms, Florida's most productive farming and fruit raising land. Indrio will be the natural trading center of this highly prosperous region.

Conceived by Men of Affairs

Indrio is the practical vision of practical men, who command the financial resources and artistic genius necessary to insure its realization. These men include John I. Beggs, a leader in the public utility field and a director of the North American Co., the First Wisconsin National Bank of Milwaukee and the First National Bank of St. Louis; Edwin B. Meissner, president of the St. Louis Car Co.; Richard McCulloch, formerly head of the United Railways of St. Louis and now a director of the St. Louis Car Co.; Frank B. Shutts, owner of the Miami Herald; Edwin Binney, president of Binney & Smith, New York; Charles O. Reynolds, investment banker of Chicago, and George T. Baker, realtor, Fort Pierce, Fla.

Wm. O. Krieg, J. T. Hetherington and M. D. Hetherington, eminent city architects of Chicago, are the city planners of Indrio. Charles W. Murray, for eight years city engineer of Miami, is in charge of development.

AFTER months of planning and preparation, the first unit of Indrio is about to be offered to an expectant public. Promptly at 8:30 next Saturday morning, September 12th, will occur the formal opening of what is destined to be America's most beautiful home town.

Since our initial announcement, which appeared only one week ago, Indrio has become the sensation of the country at large. From all over America have come inquiries regarding this remarkable townsite development.

The public has been quick to sense the fact that Indrio is in a class apart from any other development in Florida today. Conceived by men of large affairs, with millions at their command, it will far surpass all similar projects in the magnitude of its improvements and the beauty of its surroundings.

So heavy have been reservations to date that entire blocks of property have been spoken for. From present indications it is clearly evident that the first unit of Indrio will be oversold.

We are gratified by the extraordinary interest which has been manifested in this project since our first announcement. It convinces us that our own faith in Indrio's future has been more than justified.

Avoid Disappointment by Acting at Once! Make Reservations NOW at 10% Discount

Although no lots will be sold prior to the formal opening, reservations are now being accepted at our various sales offices.

Reservations made now will be subject to the 10% introductory discount which will apply only on the opening day.

The overwhelming response to the announcement of Indrio prompts us to urge you to act quickly if you would acquire a homesite in the first unit. Certain it is that by the opening day this unit will be entirely exhausted.

Protect yourself against disappointment by making a reservation at once. The convenient coupon at the right will bring you a price list of Indrio property, a reservation blank and an elaborately illustrated folder describing the town. Clip, sign and mail right now!

If by any chance you plan to go to Florida this winter, do not fail to visit Indrio and gauge its future for yourself. We know you will marvel at its scenic beauty and tremendous possibilities for growth.

On the Dixie Highway and Florida East Coast Railway

Indrio is situated on the Indian River, a stretch of shimmering sea water separated from the Atlantic only by a narrow strip of picturesque jungle land. Game fish abound in these tropical waters and wild fowl are plentiful in season. Sandy beaches and a rolling surf bring joy to the heart of the bather. In summer cool breezes sweep in from the sea, while winter days are made balmy by the genial Gulf Stream. Can you picture a more delightful spot in which to live?

G. O. P. SEES MEAL ON TIGER AS AL AND HEARST WAR

Tammany Steals 5c Fare Thunder from Hylan.

necine war in the Democratic tribe the Republicans think the story will be far different this time. They are certain that if Hylan should be renominated he would be slaughtered by Tammany and that if Walker should win the Hearst crowd would bolt, making it simply "pie" for the Republican candidate.

Anticipate Feast.

Hence the Republican leaders are licking their chops with the most promising anticipations of a hearty meal at the pie counter which has been vouchsafed them in many a long year in our habitually Democratic national metropolis.

Whoever wins the game will control city expenditures of approximately $400,000,000 a year, a budget many times larger than that of any state in the union and only a little less than one-seventh of what the national annually expends. Sustenance and rich pickings for the pay roll politicians here.

Then there is supposed to be a billion dollars' stake in the game, that being the estimated value of the transportation lines, on, above and below the surface of the ground, which are complaining of eking out an uncertain existence on the five cent fare to which they have been limited under the Hylan régime, and yearn for an increase, to say eight cents, if not ten. At present writing, however, the traction magnates are not so sure that they are sitting in the game after all.

If the traction companies ever really had any hope of getting an increased fare out of the mayoralty election, it is pretty difficult now to detect the basis thereof. Mayor Hylan's chief bid for continuance in office was his promise of continuance of the five cent fare.

Steals Hylan's Thunder.

But then along came all the other candidates and swore the same oath on a stack of Bibles, and now comes Tammany invoking a special meeting of the city's legislative assembly for next week to pass a law prohibiting the increase of fares except with the approval of the people by referendum. So Tammany proposes to cut the ground from under Mayor Hylan, depriving him of his chief rallying cry and solemnly committing everybody against any fare boost unless the people themselves decree it. It begins to look as if the traction barons might as well take their chips and go home.

No less interesting are the ultimate stakes for which Gov. Smith and Mr. Hearst and the Republican leaders are playing. The governor, there is now no doubt, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1928, if not for the senate next year.

Likewise it is not doubted that if Mr. Hearst triumphs in this contest his ambition to rule from the White House will flower anew, and that he might take it into his head to try for the senate next year in order to gain a stepping stone to higher preferment.

That was what he was believed generally to have had in view in 1922 when he sought the Demorati nomination for either governor of New York or senator and was so brutally thrust aside by Mr. Smith, who took the nomination for governor when he didn't want it, just to keep Hearst from getting it, and then served an ultimatum that he would not run on the same ticket with Hearst for senator. Once again Mr. Hearst's perennial ambition was thwarted. Smith had the editor down—but not out.

Crisis in Al's Career.

For Gov. Smith the contest furnishes perhaps the most critical juncture in his entire career. He is now an outstanding figure in the Democratic party by virtue of his leadership of the conservative wing of the party and his election for a third time to the governorship last year by an overwhelming plurality when the rest of the country and the rest of his own state was going Republican by great pluralities.

The governor is now the logical candidate of conservative and wet Democrats for the nomination for President in 1928. Bryan's mantle of leadership of the progressive and dry Democrats has descended upon William G. McAdoo, and it looks as if the 1928 Democratic national convention would be the scene of another struggle between Smith and McAdoo.

George Brennan figures that Smith came within fifty votes of enough to put him over in Madison Square Garden, and presumably he would be even stronger in 1928, notwithstanding the feeling of many influential Democrats that it would be inexpedient to nominate a Roman Catholic.

City Controls State.

Now, the New York City Democrats dominate the Democratic party of New York state. About half the members of the New York delegation in the Democratic national convention—as in the Republican—hail from the greater city and whoever controls the city delegation has pretty close to a stranglehold to begin with, on the delegation—and with the delegation voting as a unit ruled by the majority, as in the Democratic convention, that stranglehold is worth having—close to 100 out of 1,000 votes in the convention, to be precise.

With Hylan in the city hall, Hearst had just enough delegates in the 1922 and 1924 state and national conventions to be annoying to Messrs. Smith and Murphy. That was when Tammany was supporting Hylan and sharing the patronage. If Tammany loses this fight, however, it will be outside the pale, and the Hearst-Hylan crowd will dispense the patronage and control the New York City delegates.

Conceivably under such circumstances it would be easy for Hearst to nominate himself for either governor or senator next year and to go to the Democratic national convention in 1928 as New York's candidate for the nomination for President.

If the governor has his way about it, however, it will be Al Smith instead of Hearst who will be the power behind the mayor of New York City.

If nothing occurs to jeopardize his control of the New York delegation to the 1928 convention Smith will be able to qualify as a candidate for the presidential nomination without question. And if Tammany beats Hylan there will be no question of Smith's control of the delegation. If Hearst, however, should triumph over Smith and Tammany, the ability of the governor to control the delegation would be questionable. That outcome easily might be the beginning of the end of Smith as a candidate for the presidency.

Paige's Latest and Finest Creation—

The New Landau Sedan $2395

Paige has put all the convenience and beauty of a drawing-room into this new Landau Sedan. For folks who insist that their motor cars be as luxurious as their homes.

Outwardly—this smart new creation has true distinction—smartness of line and color. It might well represent five figures. Inwardly it has correspondingly fine workmanship and endurance.

Yet this luxurious big car costs but $2395 — fully equipped, ready for the road.

Lasting Beauty

A glance will tell you that. A handsome two-tone color effect that you'll never tire of. And stream-lined, rear to radiator, with a smart double-belt moulding—all in permanent lacquer. It's a car whose beauty will last.

A strong, substantially built car. Able to do a hundred thousand miles—and keep its youthful, vigorous action. Chassis and body construction is the finest money and engineering brains can produce.

Loungy Roominess

It's like sinking into the soft luxury of your favorite easy chair. Room to relax and ride in perfect ease. More leg room—greater inside length both front and rear.

And there's every convenience you could possibly wish for—included at no extra cost. Upholstery is the very finest mohair velour—rich—beautiful—long-wearing.

Paige Motor—Improved!

This world-record chassis now refined to greater smoothness. Paige's big motor now has a new counter-balanced crankshaft. A new air cleaner keeps cylinders clear of road dust and grit.

Finer action is the result. Travel all day at sustained high speed—and never a hint of labor from this powerful motor. Hills and level stretches all look alike to Paige.

And travel at touring speed in the solid comfort you expect from 131-inch wheelbase—full size balloon tires—61-inch rear springs and snubbers all around.

You'll do 45 in comfort over roads that slow the average car down to 15.

Drive It 50 Miles

Take this luxurious big Paige out where hill and road will prove its power beyond a doubt. We'll gladly arrange such a trip for you. Drive it on the boulevard—to the country club where beauty counts. Then compare its size—beauty—power—comfort and price with any big car. And you'll never spend more. (619-5)

In comparing values consider this necessary equipment included in the Paige price for which you must pay extra elsewhere—five balloon cord tires, trunk, bumpers, snubbers, motometer, automatic windshield wiper, rear-view mirror, electric clock, gasoline gauge on dash, combination stop and tail light, heater—all included at $2395, f. o. b. Detroit, tax extra.

Paige-hydraulic 4-wheel brakes included at this price.

Buy and Build in Beverly Hills

The Fastest Growing Suburb of the South Side

Here is where not one, but literally hundreds of our clients have made from thirty to forty per cent per annum on their money. Some have made over one hundred per cent on their investments.

Eighty Per Cent Profit

One man came into our office this week to close on the purchase of one hundred feet of property and is paying eighty per cent more for this property than he could have purchased it for a little over a year ago. He said, "Mr. Campbell, I was a fool not to have bought these lots when you first offered them to me a little over a year ago. Then I had the money but was afraid of your judgment. I have watched the property for over a year and now I am buying for my home and paying almost twice what I could have purchased this same property for a short time ago, so here is my check."

Another Opportunity

We own some very attractive property bought a number of years ago before the advance in values in Beverly and intend to sell all of this property within the next two weeks at very low prices, up until September 15th. On that date prices positively will be advanced to the market price or twenty-five per cent more than our asking price.

Come to our office, 95th and Robey Streets, TODAY and get the best selection. Prices range from $60.00 a foot up. Get our proposition for a cash price. Don't put off seeing this property and then six months from now tell us how sorry you were you did not purchase.

Our terms are such you cannot afford not to own a lot, twenty per cent cash, balance on easy monthly payments.

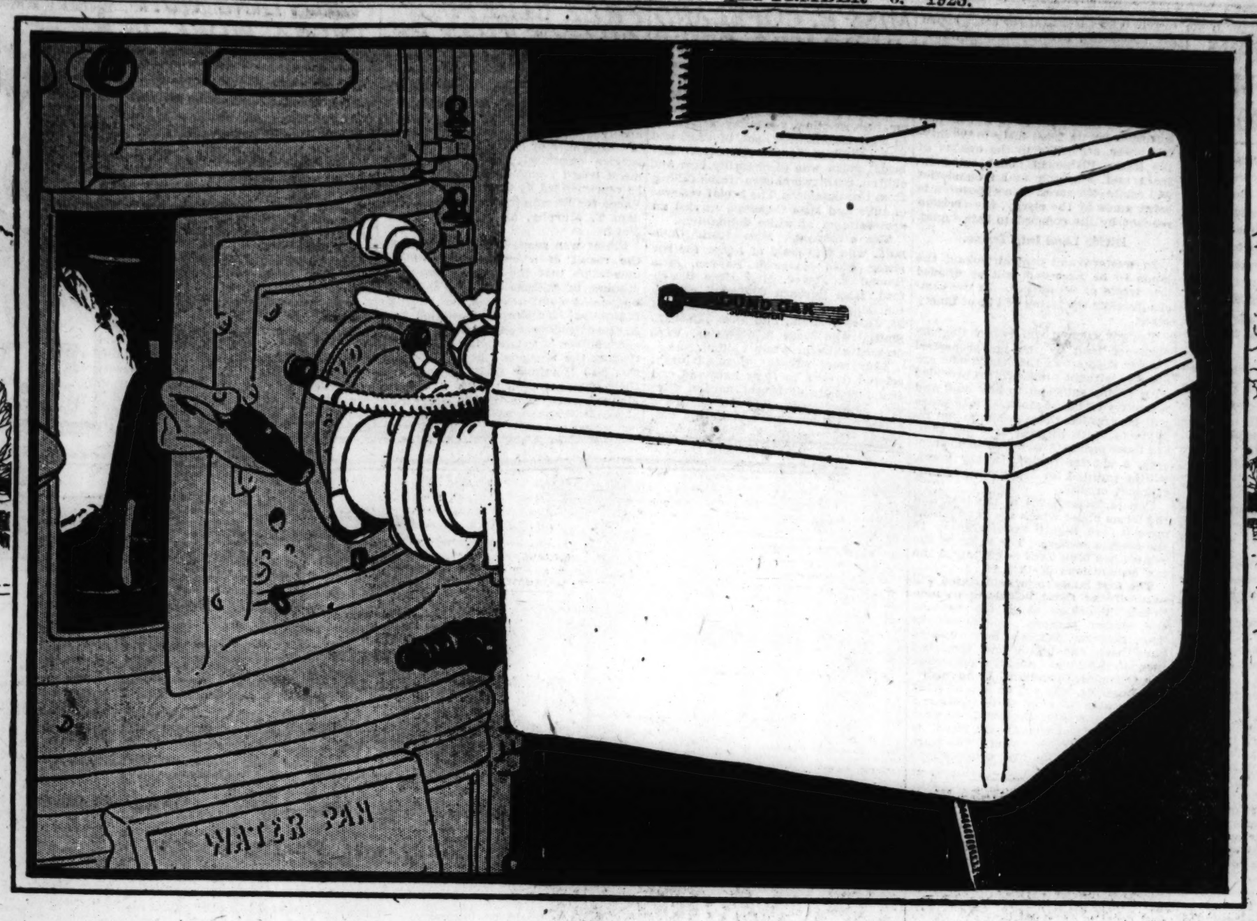
ROUND OAK SUMMERHEAT Oil Burners are adaptable for any size home, large or small. This home of 7 rooms and bath was kept comfortably warm all winter by a ROUND OAK SUMMERHEAT Burner in a ROUND OAK Warm Air Heating System with a decided saving over hard coal.



This large home of 17 rooms and 4 bathrooms, heated by a boiler with 2,500 square feet of radiator capacity, was kept thoroughly comfortable in the coldest weather by one ROUND OAK SUMMERHEAT Oil Burner. The consumption of oil showed a decided saving over hard coal and abolished the need of a janitor.

The Beckwith Company Presents the

ROUND OAK SUMMERHEAT

Automatic Fuel OIL BURNER

Adaptable for any type of Heating System

The announcement of the ROUND OAK "SUMMERHEAT" Automatic Fuel Oil Burner, by the "ROUND OAK Folks" of Dowagiac, Michigan, proves beyond a doubt that automatically heating the home with oil is at last a practical success.

"SUMMERHEAT" is the sensation of the industry and is made by the oldest and largest manufacturers of warm air heating appliances in the world—leaders in the industry for more than two generations, enjoying a production basis rivaling that of the automobile industry.

"SUMMERHEAT" has instantly removed the skepticism of thousands of home owners who have been reluctant to experiment and have waited the advent of a truly modern automatic fuel Oil Burner—one produced and guaranteed by a thoroughly dependable manufacturer. Now here it is—

The "Superhuman" Oil Burner

An automatic fuel oil burner, operating successfully without the aid of human hands! The exacting requirements of such an undertaking make it imperative that the Company responsible for it be expertly equipped—both in years of successful experience and in mammoth facilities for production.

Requires No Attention

As its name implies, this ultra modern oil burner, "SUMMERHEAT," is provided with exclusive and fully tested automatic devices which eliminate entirely the uncertain elements of the human mind—making it, in fact, "Superhuman."

When the temperature of the "SUMMERHEAT" equipped home falls two degrees below that desired, an electrical impulse is transmitted to the burner by the room thermostat and instantly a perfect flame of just the proper size for the home requirements is introduced in the burner. This flame is the color of a glowing ingot and the clean, radiant heat is of such intensity that almost immediately the temperature is brought to the desired degree—and kept there until another drop in room temperature occurs.

Swings On the Door Off the Floor

"SUMMERHEAT" is attached to the feed door of furnace or boiler, leaving the inside FREE for burning garbage. Wood or coal can be burned at any time if desired without interfering with the oil burner.

Nothing in the heating plant is removed; you simply enjoy a dual system of heating. This is a revolutionary development which you would naturally expect from an Organization with millions in resources, whose whole business life has been spent in perfecting and producing home heating equipment. A Company with an experience of—not just 6, or 10 years, but more than fifty years of success in this field.

Simple—Sure—Silent

There is no roar or explosive beginning when "SUMMERHEAT" functions. These well-known nuisances have been swept away in Beckwith engineering, by exclusive refinements. Mechanical vibration, smoke puffs, excessive noise (heretofore accepted as unavoidable weaknesses) are eliminated in "SUMMERHEAT."

There are no complicated parts which require expert, skilled handling. On the contrary, we believe that this device relieves the home owner of all anxiety over the much-discussed competitive oil-burning methods. It is no longer necessary for him to study the science of combustion or to go into the details of mechanical and electrical engineering in order to select the right oil burner for his home. He has only to depend on the name, Beckwith—the ROUND OAK FOLKS.

"SUMMERHEAT" is as perfect in its field as the 1926 automobile and is sold and serviced under the established practices of high-grade automobile distribution.

It stands today as the solution of the heretofore unsolved problem of heating with oil fuel. It is NOT an experiment—NOT the sentimental fulfillment of an inventor's dream, but a practical, working device—"superhuman" in efficiency—safe, simple and sturdy; economical and thoroughly dependable. Be sure to see it in operation at any of the Chicago addresses given below.

Swings On the Door Free From the Floor

Easily attached to any furnace, any hot water, steam or vapor boiler—of any size or make—all without change or alteration. No grates to remove, no bricking in under the furnace. Simply leave your present heating plant as it stands and operate the ROUND OAK Burner right through the feed door. This leaves the furnace or boiler intact, permitting the burning of coal, wood or garbage at any time should occasion demand.

Above all—it has back of it four millions in resources, a priceless name for honorable dealing over a half a century—and it is made and guaranteed by the largest stove and furnace manufacturing plant in the world!

Prompt Service

ROUND OAK Service, with all its facilities, is as near as your telephone.

Our new descriptive circular completely describes our "SUMMERHEAT" Oil Burner. We should like to place a copy in the hands of every home owner. Write, telephone or call upon the nearest distributor today for your copy. Complete estimate for installing in your home gladly furnished upon request.

Convenient time payments gladly arranged.

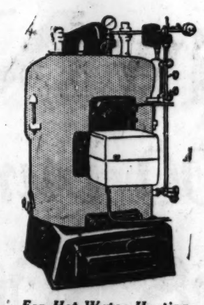
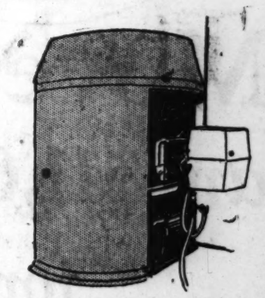
Manufacturers of Round Oak Stoves, Ranges, Gas Ranges Furnaces and Summerheat Oil Burners



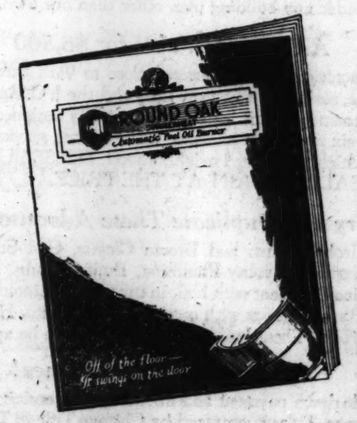
For Hot Water Heating

The ROUND OAK SUMMERHEAT Oil Burner will accommodate from the smallest to the largest of this type of heating plant and hold the hot water at a standing temperature with an evenness of warmth to the home that cannot be had with coal.



For Warm Air Furnace

The easy simple method of installing and the minimum of noise from combustion and the absence of all mechanical noise make the ROUND OAK SUMMERHEAT ideally adapted for warm air furnaces.



For Steam Boiler Service

Any size heating plant from the smallest to the largest may be satisfactorily and economically heated with a ROUND OAK SUMMERHEAT Oil Burner. The uniformity and complete adjustability of the flame tends to hold the steam pressure at a constant point with little or no fluctuation and, therefore, uniform warmth in the rooms above.

POLAND DIVIDES NOBLES' ESTATES AMONG PEASANTS

BY JOHN CLAYTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

WARSAW, Sept. 5.—Five million acres of land, much of which in many cases for centuries has formed a large part of the holdings of the Polish nobility, will be divided into small farms during the next ten years, to satisfy the land hunger of the Polish peasantry.

This radical and sweeping measure, which changes Poland from a country in which great farming enterprises form the chief industry of the land into a nation of small land owning peasants, was recently decided upon by the Polish parliament, largely as an emergency measure to halt the spread of Bolshevism among farm laborers.

Seek to Satisfy Peasants.

As in all eastern European countries, the agrarian question in Poland is one of the most important social problems. Since the rebirth of the Polish state in 1918, the peasant majority in parliament has been trying to satisfy the demands of their farmer-laborer constituencies through a radical reform in land ownership.

As early as 1920 the Warsaw diet passed a law which parceled the land of many of the great estates among those who had little or no land. This act was confiscatory, and its details were so poorly worked out that it was impossible to apply the measure on a large scale. The state, struggling for its existence, could not force confiscation.

Bring Agrarian Reform.

Then came stabilization and external and internal consolidation of the new Polish state, bringing with it unusually long political life for the Grabski cabinet. The situation became favorable for the peasant leaders, who seized the opportunity to force through a new measure which would bring an effective agrarian reform.

Unprecedented political disputes featured the framing and debate on the bill, but despite all opposition of the big land owners, the Sejm on July 20 passed an act entitled "Law for parcelling and new settlement," which modifies, amends and makes possible the execution of the original agrarian reform of 1920.

Take Lands of Church.

The new law foresees the parcelling of all great estates in Poland, a total of five million acres, including properties of the nobility and the church. The maximum farm land which the landed nobility will be permitted to retain is 450 acres. Forests remain untouched by the reform.

In the eastern provinces families which can prove that their ownership of the land antedates 1795—the year of the final Polish partition—will be permitted to retain 750 acres. Owners of model estates where the science of farming or cattle breeding is developed to a high degree will be permitted to retain an additional 750 acres above the maximum, but the total of these additional allotments must not exceed 1,400,000 acres.

The church lands will be taken under an agreement reached between the vatican and the Polish government. According to this, pastorates will be permitted to retain from forty to seventy-five acres, according to the quality of the land. Bishoprics, chapters, seminars and convents and monasteries will retain 450 acres. No opposition is being made by the clergy, the decision reached by the concordate being final.

Divide Land Into Tracts.

In western and central Poland the lands to be parcelled will be divided into tracts of fifty acres. In the eastern districts the farms will be of ninety acres.

The government will finance the purchase of land by the non-propertied class in such a way that those who are entirely without funds will be provided with credits sufficient to buy land and necessary tools and stock. Forty years will be granted these peasants for repayment, with interest at 6 per cent. For those peasants who own some property, a shorter period, twenty years, will be granted for repayment of government credits.

The purchase price of the land and the terms under which the government buys it, are highly unsatisfactory to the present owners. The value of the estates has been fixed according to the tax declarations of 1923.

The first lands to be confiscated will naturally be those belonging to non-Polish minorities along the western and eastern borders. It will not be long, however, before these estates have been exhausted, and then the turn of the Polish nobility will come. The Germans, Ukranians, Lithuanians and Russians, who will be first affected will be able to offer little resistance unless they receive the united support of the Polish conservatives, but it is believed the Polish owners will start the battle when the first confiscations are made.

YALE SEEKS DETAILS OF OFFER TO FOUND COURSE ON MOVIES

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 5.—[United Press.]—Yale university is interested in the offer of Robert T. Kane, motion picture producer, to found and endow a chair in motion picture technic, it was learned today.

George Parmly Day, treasurer of the university, has written to Kane asking for more detailed information about the offer of $5,000 a year which he made recently to several large institutions.

Day said in his letter that he wished to submit the matter to the Yale corporation's committee on education policy and subsequently to the members of the corporation for consideration. Yale is the first university of those named to reply to Kane's offer.

Bronx Zoo Welcomes First Musk Ox Born in Captivity

New York, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The first musk ox ever born in captivity saw the light at the Bronx zoo today. It weighed only 8½ pounds. Its parents were captured five years ago on the east coast of Greenland.

MISS E. COPELAND BECOMES BRIDE OF P. M'CLINTOCK

Simplicity marked the gowns of Miss Elizabeth Copeland and her attendants for her wedding yesterday afternoon to Paul MacClintock, son of Prof. and Mrs. William D. MacClintock. Her bridal gown was of chantilly lace and chiffon, with two chiffon trains falling from the shoulders. The bridal veil was of tulle and Miss Copeland carried an arm bouquet of white delphinium.

The attendants, Miss Ruth Copeland, who was maid of honor for her sister, Miss Margaret Boyden, Miss Rachel A. Foster, Miss Elsie Blatchford, Miss Barbara Churchill of Milton, Mass., Miss Martha Dickinson of St. Joseph, Mich., and Miss Elizabeth Smith, who were bridesmaids, were dressed alike in white chiffon.

They wore wreaths of small bright colored flowers in their hair and carried bouquets of bright garden flowers. Immediately after the service a small reception was held in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Boyden.

FREE CLUETT OF CHARGE THAT HE MISUSED OFFICE

William F. Cluett, chief deputy sealer of weights and measures and a city employé for nearly 35 years, was absolved of insubordination and misuse of the powers of his office by the civil service commission yesterday. The merit board recommended that Cluett be reprimanded by City Sealer Carmen Vacco for his admitted assault on William T. Murphy, an aged fellow employé.

Cluett was suspended on July 23 as the result of a city council recommendation that the civil service commission investigate charges that he, under the domination of the Chicago Retail Coal Merchants' association, had harassed independent dealers.

A number of independent dealers, including the Wisconsin Lime & Cement Co., and Mortimer B. Flynn, testified their wagons and trucks had been stopped many times at the suggestion of W. H. Cody, an investigator for the coal association.

PERUVIANS QUIT TACNA WORK IN ROW WITH CHILE

ARICA, Chile, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The Peruvian boundary delegation connected with the Tacna-Arica plebiscite board has temporarily withdrawn from its work, pending the receipt of satisfaction from the Chilean authorities over the seizure of Peruvian soldiers who were leading mules to Tacna for use by the Peruvian delegation.

An official statement by Gen. Jay J. Morrow, a member of the American commission, says the matter has been taken up with the authorities to prevent such "unwarranted outrages" in the future. Meanwhile the work of the boundary commission is being seriously delayed.

Ricardo Cornejo, a Peruvian house owner of Arica, and an auxiliary member of the Peruvian boundary delegation, was attacked in the street yesterday by a man he said was a Chilean. Cornejo was struck on the wrist and elbow with a stick, and also was stoned.

Attractive on a Dutch Colonial home

This roof whose colors blend with foliage and sky

"I'D like to live there!"

Next time you see a house like that notice the roof.

It will be a substantial roof, of course. But you will find that its coloring—in harmony with the rest of the house and its surroundings—is one of the biggest factors in securing the beauty you admire.

Indeed, in a wise choice of roof, body and trim color lies your greatest opportunity to add to the attractiveness of your home.

And if that home is a cozy, white Dutch Colonial, Richardson suggests the color scheme shown here—

A roof of opal and dusk blue shingles, with green shutters and gables.

These new Richardson colors form a roof that harmonizes perfectly with any setting. Both fall and summer foliage blend with the opal mixture of weathered brown and grey green slate flakes. And the soft dusk blue reflects the sky itself. Green shutters carry over to the body of the house the green tones in the roof and gables.

This is only one of the many beautiful effects you can secure with Richardson Multicrome Roofs.

50% thicker than the ordinary roof

The Multicrome Roof is built of Super-Giant Shingles—extra large, extra heavy. Its 50% greater thickness adds both beauty of texture and years of endurance. Its base is sturdy, long-fibre Richardson felt. Its waterproofing is Viskalt—99.8% pure bitumen, especially vacuum-processed. Its surface is slate in close, overlapping flakes—further protection against weather and fire hazards.

This roof gives the maximum roof value at a moderate price. It is economical to lay and equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs

The other new colorings are equally attractive on different architectural types of homes.

Other rich blends of color

Dusk blue and heather purple shingles, for example, make just the roof for a gray stucco home. And on a home of brown brick, opal, antique brown and heather purple are unusually effective.

Before you build, before you re-roof, by all means see these new colorings.

One of them can give your home just the distinction and charm you have always wanted it to have.

To help you choose

To help you choose the roof which will make the most of this opportunity we have prepared an authoritative booklet, What Color for the Roof?

In it, there is page after page of beautiful homes in different architectural styles, all in color to show the most tasteful effects in body, trim and roof combinations. Interestingly explained, too, are the principles of all good color schemes.

And with the Richardson Harmonizer which it contains you can see the complete effect of 54 different roof and house combinations.

The price of the book and Harmonizer is 25c. Send the coupon below for your copy.

See the new colors at your dealer's

Your nearest dealer in building materials can show you these and other beautiful Multicrome Roofs. He will tell you, too, why the points mentioned in the panel at the left make their beauty lasting.

IRISH UNIONS CLOSE RANKS TO RADICAL CHIEF

Conservative Elements Gain Control.

Thomas Wren, who has just returned from a two months' study of labor conditions in Europe, has written a series of articles. The first dealt with economic problems of England; the second, concerning industrial conditions in Ireland, follows:

BY THOMAS WREN.

Although hampered by the recent political turmoil, visitation of "black and tans," and ill advised labor strikes, the government of the Irish Free State is today becoming stronger and more popular with the masses of wage earners.

And with the officialdom of the Irish Free State striving daily to patch up weak spots in governmental rule, the conservative element of Ireland's trade union movement has opened warfare on labor leaders who are inclined toward communist doctrines.

The conservative element in the Irish union movement openly blame James Larkin, who was formerly connected with the Transport Workers' union in Dublin, for the radicalism that has been rampant among the wage earners of the Emerald isle for the last 15 or 17 years. The Irish workers, it is said, have learned by experience that Larkin's communist policy of "down with capitalists and to 'ell with agreements between union and employer" doesn't pay.

Larkin's power is said to be waning.

Unpopular in Chicago.

Chicago labor officials recall Larkin's visit to the United States and their opinion of the Irish labor leader is expressed largely by James J. Conroy, secretary of the Chicago Building Trades council, who said:

"When Larkin was in Chicago shortly after the close of the world war, radicalism, that smacked of revolution and what not, was being advocated by soap box orators on all sides.

"Of course the revolutionary program was ridiculous and absurd, but conservative labor officials heard so much of it that for a time it threatened to become a nuisance. Larkin was a large man with a powerful voice and his size and voice got him by with certain classes of workers. But the government caught up with him and he was sentenced to a term in Sing Sing for criminal anarchy. He served two years of a five year term, being released in the early part of 1923. Later in the same year he was deported."

During his absence in the United States the conservative element of Irish leaders took control of the Irish Transport Workers' union.

Returns to Ireland.

When Larkin returned to Ireland in 1923 he was ousted from the Transport Workers' union. He immediately organized a dual union and called it the Workers' union, an organization formed on the one big union plan. The membership of the dual organization is composed of some transport workers, building tradesmen, laborers, and others who do manual labor.

When Larkin completed organization of his new union his power as a dictator was cut, and in Dublin today one finds little spoken of the Irish radical leader, who is said to be an executive member of the Moscow third internationale.

The Roman Catholic church has waged a continual battle in Ireland against the spread of soviet teachings among the Irish wage earners. Conservative Irish labor officials contend that the tide has turned against Russian teachings.

In Belfast, which was classed at one time as a great shipbuilding port, the anti-religion warfare of several years ago has partially paralyzed industrial activities. Numbers of men and women were unemployed there this summer, many of them leaving to seek work in England and France.

Dublin, the capital of the Irish Free State government, was the scene of many strikes called or urged by Larkin. That city is still feeling the effects of the walkouts, called in many instances, conservative labor officials declare, to satisfy Larkin's lust for the limelight.

Irish Wages Low.

Wage rates in Ireland are slightly below those in effect in England.

The Irish building tradesmen receive on an average of $15 and $16 a week. Members of the Dublin police force are paid about $15 a week, a rate which is exceeded in the police departments in the United States by approximately $30 a week, especially in large cities.

GIRL FINED $100 FOR THEFT.

Margaret Claussen, 18, 7043 St. Lawrence avenue, was given a year's sentence at the House of Correction and fined $100 on a charge of petit larceny by Judge L. P. Harris in Wabash avenue court yesterday.

CHICAGO PILGRIMS REACH U. S. AFTER JOURNEY TO ROME

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—A Chicago band of pilgrims to Rome for the holy year, numbering 221, arrived today on the Red Star liner Pittsburgh from Antwerp. The party was under the direction of John Maloney of Chicago and is the largest group of pilgrims to Rome from an American city during the year.

The Maloney tourists not only visited Rome but also Lourdes and other sacred shrines. They were gone two months. They went in a body from the ship to Hotel McAlpin for lunch. Tonight they attended a Broadway show, leaving at midnight on a special for Washington. Tomorrow they will make a tour of the capital and attend mass at St. Matthew's. They will continue to Chicago Sunday night.

The party sailed from Montreal on the liner Regina on July 4, visiting England and Ireland before proceeding to Rome, where five days were spent, and an audience given them by the pope on Aug. 10.

Citizens prominent in fraternal, social and professional circles made up the company, including Judge John P. McGoorty, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Igo, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Cunningham, the Rev. Joseph F. Kelly, the Rev. John H. Nawn, Mrs. Catherine Madden and her daughters, Mary and Margaret, Mrs. Charles Hoffman and her daughter, Ruth, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carroll.

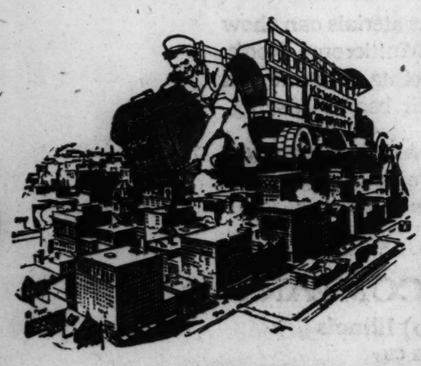
KEWANEE

Annually Saves Millions for Owners of Fine Buildings

Buildings which use Kewanee Boilers have no smoke problem to solve. The Boiler solves it for them—in advance. Because the Boiler doesn't smoke, no matter what kind or grade of fuel you use.

Kewanee Boilers laugh at coal shortages. If the mines don't deliver, the Boiler burns oil. And whether the fuel is coal or oil, the efficiency is just as great and just as sure.



If smokeless coal is scarce and prohibitive in price, the Boiler welcomes the soft stuff, extracts from it just as many heat units and burns it smokelessly. This is all due to the design of the Boiler which is saving millions of dollars annually for owners of buildings.

The Kewanee Smokeless All-Steel Firebox Boiler is an earning asset to any structure from a three-flat building to a 52-story office affair. The government of the United States believes in it because the majority of the post-offices and scores of other government buildings are equipped with it.

If you want your building to produce, to earn an interest on the investment, write to The Old Man Behind the Boiler and get the details of design and construction. Or ask any smart architect of heating-engineer.

For Piano Floors ~ Liquid Granite has no equal

Lyon & Healy Inc~

Liquid Granite has been used on the piano floors of Lyon & Healy's great establishment in South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, for years because it is more than just waterproof . . . . it wears.

"Save the surface and you save all"—Shakespeare

When you select varnish for floors demand floor varnish that wears—waterproof, of course, but wear-resisting above all things!

Save the surface and you save the floor—but the thin protecting film of varnish, no thicker than paper, must have the wear-resisting qualities of granite.

Most Durable of All Varnishes

Read what Lyon & Healy, Inc., Chicago's largest and one of the world's greatest retail musical-instrument houses, has to say about the unequalled durability of Berry Brothers' celebrated Liquid Granite:

"We have tried many makes of varnish on our piano floors, but always get back to Liquid Granite. In our judgment it stands up best where pianos are moved over the floors almost daily!"

"Where pianos are moved over the floors almost daily!" And Liquid Granite is used because of all the varnishes manufactured it meets this tremendous test best!

Try This Simple Test Yourself

Finish a board with Liquid Granite. Allow it to dry. Then test it with a hammer. Strike heavy, smashing blows squarely on the varnished surface. Although the protecting film of Liquid Granite is only the thickness of writing paper, the hammer blows will merely dent the wood—not break the varnish!

Know What Is Best—Then Specify It

If you own your home, an apartment or any building, give time and study to the floor-varnish question.

Liquid Granite will wear longer, look better and cost less in the long run than any other varnish you can use. Don't get into the costly habit of just saying: "Varnish the floors." Make it a point to know what floor varnish is best and specify it. If you will do this you'll insist upon Liquid Granite. It is without equal.

2 Great new features

Starting In Next Sunday's Tribune

1. Natural Color Photographs

A New Process Developed by The Tribune - the First Newspaper in the World to Reproduce Rotogravure Portraits from Life in Natural Colors

Starting next Sunday The Tribune will present an innovation! After months of research and the expenditure of thousands of dollars, The Tribune has developed a new process for reproducing photographs in Rotogravure in the natural colors of life. The Tribune is the first newspaper in the world to achieve this result.

The first Natural Color Photographs comprise life studies of famous movie stars—beautiful portraits, on high grade paper, suitable for framing.

Starting next Sunday a new series of Natural Color Photographs will appear in The Tribune Picture Section every Sunday.

2. Caravans and Cannibals

A Sensational Account of Mary Hastings Bradley's Recent Experiences Hunting Elephants in Africa

Mary Hastings Bradley, famous author and explorer, has written an amazing account of her experiences on her recent expedition into Central Africa. This series of ten articles—a most thrilling account of exciting adventures—portrays the dangers of Mrs. Bradley's thousand mile journey through a hitherto unexplored region. Her amazing experiences hunting elephants — and the thousand and one dangers encountered in this Cannibal land—are told vividly, realistically, in "Caravans and Cannibals" starting in the Magazine Section of next Sunday's Tribune.

If you want an adventure treat be sure to read this thrilling series. It will be illustrated with many interesting photographs.

Don't Miss These Two Big New Features Beginning

In Next Sunday's Tribune

Wide-awake women know these secrets

THERE are certain homes in every neighborhood that are the envy of all who enter. It is not a matter of rich draperies or expensive furnishings . . . but of solid, livable comfort.

Think over the women who have made those homes. You'll find that they are women of more-than-average intelligence . . . quick to understand, and use, better methods, better things.

And there are others whose homes tell just as clearly a story of careless indifference . . . even though such vital matters as home comfort and health protection are involved.

Two kinds of home-makers . . . two kinds of homes.

These leaders can tell you an interesting story of how a great menace has been removed from home life . . . and a great comfort added.

How 60,000 leaders have built

Four years ago, Celotex Insulating Lumber made it practical to build homes that would really keep out heat and cold . . . provide better health protection.

Naturally, among the first to accept Celotex were wide-awake, far-seeing women. Their interest centered in their homes. They were quick to grasp this great opportunity to improve those homes. Today, sixty thousand of them are enjoying a wholly new degree of home comfort and safety in houses built with Celotex.

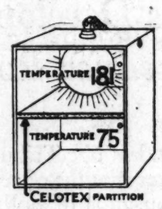
These leaders have set up in every community a standard of living by which homes, and people, are judged. Their modern homes are insulated.

The new standard of living

These women live in houses that are snug and warm on the bitterest winter days . . . refreshingly cool in wilting summer heat.

Their children's health is guarded from the menace of cold-giving draughts and sudden temperature changes.

Always, these Celotex homes are quiet and restful. Nerve-wracking noises are subdued. The women who live in them have more money to spend on the luxuries they want . . . for the cost of up-keep is much less than that of ordinary homes. Fuel bills are cut by one-third.



Note this actual test. A Celotex box is divided in half by a layer of Celotex. The upper half is heated by an electric lamp.

The lower half is 106° cooler.

In the roof and walls of a house, Celotex keeps heat in during the winter, out in summer.

Comfort with fuel-saving at no extra building cost

Celotex is Lumber—the only Insulating Lumber. It is the one material that combines higher insulating value with greater structural strength, and is not an extra item in the building.

A home built with it costs no more than an ordinary house; because Celotex replaces five other building materials.

1. It replaces wood lumber as sheathing, giving greater structural strength.
2. Plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex, forming a stronger wall than lath and plaster.
3. Celotex replaces building paper, giving better protection against wind and moisture.
4. It replaces deadening felt, giving a restful quiet.
5. Wherever used, Celotex replaces any extra insulation or heat-stopping material.

A smaller, less expensive furnace, fewer radiators, will be required to heat a Celotex house. Year after year, your fuel bills will be cut by one-third.

Celotex comfort costs no more

Every woman who really wants these advantages for her home can have them. No thoughtful man would deny his wife and children the comfort and protection, the social prestige, that such a home could give them.

For it is not a matter of money. Celotex adds nothing to building costs.

There is no excuse for not using Celotex Insulating Lumber in building a new home today. And many who built before Celotex was available are now lining their attics and basements with it. That helps . . . and it costs very little.

Yet some women will still put up with old-fashioned, heat-leaking homes . . . cold-in-winter, hot-in-summer, expensive to operate, difficult to sell.

Get all the facts

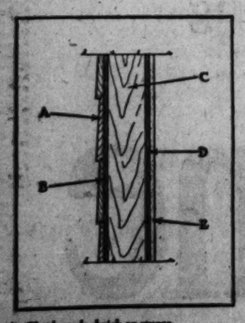
Talk with your husband about Celotex.

These are improvements in living so vital that every progressive woman will get the facts before building or buying a home. They make the ordinary house as out-of-date as one without electricity, modern plumbing or a central heating plant.

Ask your husband to find out more about Celotex from your architect, contractor or lumber dealer. Everywhere, leaders in these lines advise its use. All lumber dealers can supply it.

If you are going to buy a home already built, get Celotex construction if you possibly can.

And by all means send for the Celotex Building Book. Even if you are not thinking of building soon, you will be interested in this great improvement. Just use the coupon below.



A. Clapboards, brick or stucco
B. Celotex Insulating Lumber
C. Studding, or framework
D. Celotex Insulating Lumber
E. Plaster

Construction showing application of Celotex Insulating Lumber; (B) in outside walls as sheathing, where it replaces wood lumber and building paper, and (D) on inside walls, where plaster is applied directly to its surface.

Celotex is applied directly to studding in place of wood sheathing.

A wall so sheathed is many times stronger than one sheathed with wood lumber. And it is a wall that effectively keeps out heat and cold.

BOBBY JONES AGAIN CROWNED GOLF CHAMP

KAUFMANN, MAYS "ARGUE" AS CUBS AND REDS SPLIT

BOROTRA, FELLED BY VOLLEY, RISES TO BEAT AUSSIES

French Win Bitter Davis Cup Doubles Match.

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Fighting off a desperate rally of their opponents that carried the Australians from 5—5 to 5—all in the fifth set, Rene Lacoste and Jean Borotra of France defeated Gerald Patterson and John B. Hawkes in the Davis cup interzone doubles match at the West Side Tennis club, Forest Hills, today and put their country in a strong position to reach the challenge round.

Six thousand spectators witnessed the defeat of the great team from the Antipodes in one of the most thrilling finishes ever seen in the international play.

Five times the French team stood at match point and each time the Australians, boldly staking everything on their speed and power, thwarted them until the eighteenth game of the final set.

Borotra's Play Sensational.

Borotra, whose sensational work stood out conspicuously almost throughout the match, rose to magnificent heights in this game, and his smashing kill, followed by a lightning placement off service, enabled the Gallic pair to break through Hawkes for the set and the match. The score was 4—4, 3—6, 6—4, 1—6, 10—8. Two hours and twenty-two minutes of actual play were required before the decision was reached.

Borotra was the hero of the day in more ways than one. In the third game of the fourth set the popular French ace was struck square in the temple by a murderous volley smash from Patterson's racquet and was knocked flat on the ground. For two minutes he lay stretched out motionless while players and officials rushed to him, and the spectators waited in concern.

Galery Also Stunned.

Hardly more than six feet separated the two players across the net when Patterson made his shot and it looked as though Borotra had been knocked "cold." Dr. George E. Stanwix, who was acting as net umpire, hurried to the Frenchman's aid, and after his head had been rubbed for a few minutes Borotra was lifted to his feet and assisted to a chair.

The Gallic star's play had been so outstandingly brilliant up to this time, and he had so captivated the spectators with his dynamic style and sunny, genial nature, that the gallery was almost as stunned by the blow as was Borotra himself. It looked as though the pride of France, the player whose great playing kept his country in the running when he defeated Anderson Friday and who was again carrying the tricolor of France to another unexpected victory in this match, was through for the day.

France Confident Now.

When Borotra got up from his chair, put on his "blue devil" tam o'shanter and walked on the court to play again a tremendous cheer went up from the fans. The demonstration became even more pronounced when he went over to Patterson and gave him a reassuring tap on the shoulder. The stadium was Borotra's for the asking at that moment.

Now France looks forward confidently to seeing its team reach the challenge round for the first time in the 25 years' history of the Davis cup matches. Borotra will meet Patterson at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, and Lacoste will play Anderson. The Frenchmen need but one more singles victory.

The Australians, although they lost the match, won more points and more games than did the French. The total points scored by the Anzacs was 183 to 174 for the French, and the former won 28 games to 26 for their opponents. The seeming discrepancy is to be attributed to the result of the fourth set, which the Australians won by the decisive score of 6—1, the only one-sided set of the match.

STEEL HELMETS SAVE LIVES OF CANADA JOCKEYS

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Steel helmets, now part of the regulation jockey equipment of Manitoba racetracks, saved the lives of two riders during the meet of the Manitoba Jockey club at Whittier park yesterday. Jockey Woodstock was thrown when his mount stumbled. He was kicked on the head by another horse but escaped without a scratch.

Jockey Morton's mount fell and the rider was thrown beneath the flying heels of the next horse. A dent of nearly two inches was made in his helmet, but although stunned he was not seriously injured.

Swedish Yachtsmen Here for International Races

New York, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Capt. Arvid Schulz headed a group of four Swedish yachtsmen who arrived today from Gothenberg on the Swedish-American liner Stockholm, ready to compete in the American-Scandinavian yacht race to be held under the auspices of the Seawanhaka Corinthian yacht club of Oyster Bay, beginning Sept. 12. They brought with them the much heralded six meter yacht The Viking.

In the Wake of the News

THOSE CUBS.

DEAR WAKE: What's the matter with the Cubs?

William Wrigley, principal owner, is a thorough sportsman. He is not in baseball primarily to make money—he has enough already—but because he loves the game and wants to give Chicago a pennant winner. In fact, he owns most of the stock because some former stockholders wanted dividends and Wrigley wanted pennants. There have been dividends, but no pennants.

When Wrigley obtained control he took the rubber band off his plethoric bank roll and said, "Go get 'em." Stars were hard to buy. Finally the club announced it would build up from young material instead of purchasing overpriced stars. It was sound financially and all right theoretically, but it did not pan out. Instead of building up, the club has been building down. Our trade with Pittsburgh helped the Pirates, not the Cubs. To put it mildly, the present Cubs are a joke.

Which prompts the question: Is there enough baseball brains connected with the Cubs? In the days of Jim Hart and Charlie Murphy we had smart fellows around, on the playing field and directing its policies. Who on the present Cub pay roll, from the office boy up, has had previous experience with pennant winners?

We see McGraw and other successful managers surrounded not by one but by several experienced advisers and former players. Pittsburgh, on the road to the pennant, brought back Fred Clarke in order to emerge from the ruck. The Cubs act as if they did not know what baseball was all about.

I realize it's easy enough to criticise. But we fans who remember the good old days on the west side want results. We judge by results. We are not getting results and Bill Wrigley is not getting a run for his money. It's up to some one to produce a drastic remedy.

G. M. C., Old Time West Side Fan.

CHICAGO GOLF.

Chicago did not qualify a single player among the sixteen who competed for the national amateur golf title. It was the first time in 29 competitions that this city did not have some kind of chance for the honor.

Our standbys, Bob Gardner and Chick Evans, are not through by any means, but there is a great array of brilliant young players who shoot their heads off in qualifying medal play, while lacking experience in match play. It so happened our own young players, of whom there are many, had off days with which golfers are familiar.

Meantime, for solace, let's take a look at the past. In 28 previous annual tourneys Chicago furnished ten champions, five runners-up, and only thirteen times was not first or second. In 1905, 1909, and 1916 the final was an all-Chicago affair. Chicago will be heard from again in future national tourneys.

The Things Gone By.

I fain would spend my winter years
Beside a summer sea;
As a hermit, there among
The rocks I'll went to be.
Once awhile between the rocks
I'll spy a ship sail nigh;
I'll wonder some—but soon forget—
The things gone by.

I'll listen to the raging surf
Come tearing, wearing in,
Yet futile as some weary cause
Which seeks by force to win.
There each dawn will be but dawn,
Each eve a fleeting sigh—
And there I'll learn to soon forget
The things gone by.

SOX ACQUIRE 2 PLAYERS FROM LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

It was announced last night that the White Sox have acquired two ball players from the Little Rock club of the Southern association. One is Pitcher McBee, a husky left handed Indian, who made a fine showing against the Sox last spring in an exhibition game. The other is Outfielder Galley, who, with the veteran Wilbur Good, former Cub, is leading the Southern association in batting. The two youngsters will be with the Sox on the training trip next spring.

The fight the Cubs are making to stay out of last place is almost as gallant as the fight the Pirates are making to stay in the lead. In a long afternoon of strenuous endeavor, the north siders yesterday got an even break in two games with the Cincinnati Reds, which enabled them to escape the humility of hitting the bottom. The Cubs won the first like champions, 6 to 0, and lost the second after an impressive fight, 4 to 1.

Until the eighth inning of the second game, the north siders were on their way to a win a doubleheader, having copped the first and leading in the second, 1 to 0. But in the eighth round of the second fight the Reds shoved over the tying run and then in the ninth knocked the ball to hellangon and won with something to spare.

Tony and Carl Argue.

The first contest put a feather in the cap of Tony Kaufmann. He was on the slab opposed by the veteran submarine hurler, Carl Mays, and Tony won with something of a flourish because a couple of times during the contest he and Mr. Mays almost came to blows. Anyway, the umpires thought the thing was so serious they stepped between the men.

Just what started the row between the pitchers can't be figured out except that in the sixth inning, when Mays was apparently beaten, he began shooting the ball at the heads of the batters. He made Gabby Hartnett drop to the ground in that round, and maybe Tony said something to provoke a fight.

Anyway when Mr. Mays came to bat in the seventh, he was saying things to Tony. Probably he dared him to go over and cover first base, for, although two were out and there was no reason for a bunt, Mr. Mays pushed a bunt down to Gonzales at first base and dared Tony to cover the bag.

Mays' Spikes Miss Tony.

Tony was there, took the ball, and was over the bag so far ahead of Mr. Mays that he laughingly asked, "Where you been all this time?" This made Mr. Mays still hotter, especially when his last leap with pointed spikes failed to nick Tony.

Then came the eighth inning and our Tony stepped up to bat with a runner on second. Mr. Mays was still mad. He sneaked over a strike on Tony and then shot one right at his eyebrows. Tony dropped to earth as the ball whizzed past so close that it blew off his cap. Instead of starting a fight right there, Tony took a firmer grip on his bat and socked the next one over the left fielder's head for a double, driving in another run. He had some choice things to say to Mr. Mays when he pulled up at second.

Only six hits were made off Tony. He was a corking pitcher and might have been a great boxer if the umpires hadn't interfered. No boxing at the Cubs' park until the common people adopt our new boxing law.

Freigau Hits Homer.

Vic Keen was on the slab in the second game, opposed by Rube Benton. They are a couple of peaceful guys who possibly went out after the game and had an ice cream soda together. Not a chance for a fight. However, it was a swell game of ball. The Cubs got a run in the first round because Howard Freigau slammed one into the right field bleacher after two were out. That was the only run off Rube all afternoon.

Vic went along in style trying to make that run win him a ball game, but in the eighth Smith's hit, Pinelli's sacrifice, and Walker's single tied the score, and then in the ninth all the boys took toe holds and knocked in three runs, which started the crowd of about 10,000 fans on their way home to supper.

BERLENBACH IS PICKED TO BEAT SLATTERY IN GO

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—The stage is about set for the championship affair between Paul Berlenbach, holder of the lightheavyweight crown, and Jimmy Slattery, the Buffalo youngster, at Yankee stadium next Friday night.

Berlenbach is at Bill Jones' place at Southampton putting on the finishing touches, while Slattery is at home making ready for the fray.

It is surprising how New York City boxing fans are stringing along with Berlenbach in this rumpus. Most of them figure Berlenbach will knock out Slattery with one rip to the stomach. They claim Slattery cannot take them in the mid section, which is Paul's favorite target.

On the other hand, Slattery's supporters are sure Jimmy will blind the rough-fisted Paul with left hand pokes, and when he has him readied up for it, will send through a right hand punch to the jaw and end the show.

Young Tony Marullo of New Orleans is to face Tommy Loughran for eight rounds on the same card.

Laplante, Former Jersey City Player, Dies of Blow

North Adams, Mass., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Henri J. Laplante of Clinton, Mass., formerly with the Jersey City team of the International league, died today in the North Adams hospital from effects of a blow struck by some unknown person in Hoosick Falls, N. Y., Monday night. He was found beneath an automobile in an alley way.

FRANCE'S HOPES PROVE FRANCE'S VICTORS

JEAN BOROTRA. RENE LACOSTE.

This brilliant pair of racket swingers brought confidence to France yesterday that the final battle for the Davis cup this year will be between the Tricolor and the Stars and Stripes. Despite the fact Borotra was felled by a terrific volley which struck him on the head, the Gallic gamecocks swept Gerald Patterson and John B. Hawkes, the brilliant Australian doubles team, to defeat in the third match of the interzone finals, taking a lead of two matches to one.

St. Marks Wins Lutheran Track Meet; Pilgrim Second

Through the individual efforts of Edward Stock, who won three events and finished third in another, St. Marks won the fifth annual track and field games of the Evangelical Lutheran A. A. held yesterday on Soldiers field, Grant park, with a total of 37 points. It was the fifth straight year St. Marks has won the title.

Miss Violet Krubaeck was responsible for the Pilgrim team finishing in second place. This young lady who promises to be a rival of Helen Filkey for the honor of being Chicago's champion girl athlete, also won three first places and was third in the 100 yard dash. Her sterling work added greatly to her team's total of 19 points.

Christ Church Third.

Christ church of Chicago finished in third position, one point behind Pilgrim, while St. Paul was fourth with 12 markers. Eleven teams broke into the point column and the triple victories of Miss Krubaeck and Stock were easily the features.

Otto Grossmann of Christ church, Oak Park, hung up two stellar performances by winning the 440 and 880 yard run in commanding fashion, while H. Schmidt of St. James won the 100 yard dash but lost the furlong to Bernard Clausen of Bethlehem by inches.

Ray Runs Dead Heat.

Joie Ray of the I. A. C., making one of his last appearances as an amateur, ran a dead heat with Wayland Burke, a former Tennessee school boy, who will enter the University of Chicago this fall. Joie led all the way and permitted his opponent to draw up on even terms in the final stages of the race and breast the tape on even terms. The time was 4:39 2-5. Ray will make his professional debut as a boxer in Urbana on Sept. 17 when he will appear on the same card with Sammy Mandell, the Rockford lightweight.

Nellie Todd, a member of the W. H. T. girls' team, won a special 60 yard low hurdle race in :09 3-5, and Mildred Horrocks gave an exhibition of discus throwing. Summaries:

BOBBY'S GOLF RECORD FOR NINE YEARS RANKS HIM ONE OF GREATEST

OAKMONT COUNTRY CLUB, Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Bobby Jones was born in Atlanta in 1902. He started to play golf as soon as he was able to swing a club. Bobby made his debut in national golf competitions in 1916 at Merion, where he was defeated in the penultimate round by Bob Gardner, but the world had heard of Bobby Jones.

The war came on then, and the next national amateur tournament was held in 1919, when Dave Herron defeated Jones in the finals, 5 and 4. In 1923 Jones was defeated in one of the early matches by Max Marston.

Then came the Merion Cricket club (Philadelphia) affair last year, and Jones won the championship.

In 1923, at Inwood, Bobby Jones won the national open championship. In June of this year he lost the national open to Willie MacFarlane by one stroke, after 108 holes of play.

There have been other titles, and Jones has been runner-up or second lots of times, but the three championships—two amateur titles and one open title—are the ones that the experts will quote you in their efforts to have you believe Jones is the greatest of all golfers.

In capturing the title today Jones duplicated the record by winning his second consecutive championship.

Four other men have won the crown two years in a row since the tournament was begun in 1894, but none has been able to win three years in succession.

The last time a golfer won two titles in as many years was in 1912 and 1913, when Jerome D. Travers turned the trick. He was runner-up to Francis Ouimet, who beat him 6 and 5, in 1914. Travers also won in 1907 and 1906, but three years intervened between the latter year and his next title.

Others who have won two years in succession are: H. J. Whigham, 1896 and 1897; Walter J. Travis, 1900 and 1901; H. Chandler Egan, 1904 and 1905.

Champions since 1913 were:

Player.	Year.
Francis Ouimet	1914
R. A. Gardner	1915
Chick Evans	1916
David Herron	1919
Chick Evans	1920
Jess Guilford	1921
Jess Sweetser	1922
Max Marston	1923
Bobby Jones	1924

There were no championships in 1917 and 1918 owing to the war.

BY MORROW KRUM.

Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Robert T. Jones Jr. successfully defended his title of national amateur golf champion at the Oakmont course today. Jones defeated his 20 year old protégé, Watts Gunn, also from Atlanta, 8 and 7, in the final match of the annual tournament.

The first nine holes of today's play gave the champion the only real competition he has faced during the entire tournament. Gunn the student was out to beat his teacher, and the first half of the morning round was a splendid battle. The players were even at the tenth.

At the thirteenth hole, however, Jones swung into his real game and tossed a salvo of birdies at his opponent that would have broken any golfer's heart. From there to the finish the result was never in doubt.

Jones Four Up Midway.

At the eighteenth Jones was 4 up and at the twenty-seventh he had a lead of six holes. To that wide margin Jones added the twenty-eighth and then closed the tournament by winning the twenty-ninth.

The retention of the title, which Jones won last year at Merion, gives the Atlanta golfer a new claim to recognition as one of the greatest of American born golfers. During the week he has defeated William Reekie, Montclair, N. J.; Clarence Wolff, St. Louis, Mo.; George Von Elm, Los Angeles, and finally the youth, Gunn, to whom he taught the tricks of golf.

The closest match the title holder had throughout the tournament was with Wolff, whom he beat 6 and 5 on the thirty-sixth hole route. Added to these accomplishments was his qualifying score of 147, two strokes behind Roland Mackenzie, the medalist. It has been a week of soft picking for the champion.

5,000 Follow Match.

The anticipated drama of today's match drew one of the largest crowds that has ever witnessed an amateur tournament final. It was estimated that more than 5,000 spectators followed the play over the sun baked Oakmont hills.

The gallery knew the situation that had been developed by the eliminations matches. They knew the champion had arrived at Oakmont ten days ago in an automobile with his 20 year old protégé. They knew Jones had been forced to beg Gunn's father, Judge William Gunn, to permit his son to come to the tournament. They knew that all Gunn knew about golf he had learned from Jones. And they knew that Gunn had said he would do everything his power to defeat the title holder.

Gunn stepped up to the first tee and sent a ball sailing straight down the fairway, outdriving Jones on the first hole. Both got birdies on the par 5 hole. The second hole was halved in par fours. And so was the third. The gallery grew tense. Gunn was out to beat his teacher.

Gunn One Up at Fourth.

On the fourth Gunn dropped a long iron approach shot within 10 feet of the hole and Jones went into a trap. Gunn sank his putt and was one up. There was enthusiastic applause as the youngster's putt dropped in.

Jones sank a long curling putt on the fifth for a birdie three and squared the match. Then the champion sank a 20 foot putt on the sixth and was one up.

Gunn got a par four on the seventh after Jones was trapped and again the match was even. On the eighth Gunn missed a putt and lost the hole, making him one down.

On the long par 5 ninth both got on in two and both made fair approach putts, but Jones missed his second putt and Gunn got a birdie four by sinking his. The turn was made with the match squared and everybody was rooting for the kid.

Bobby Starts on Thirteenth.

Gunn won the tenth after Jones was in a green trap and had played a poor explosion shot. The next two holes were halved. Both played them in par.

It was at this stage of the game—the thirteenth hole—that Bobby Jones decided that there had been enough of such play. He drew up a hole on his belt and fell into the battle spirit that has won tournaments for him before. He shot the thirteenth in par, getting on in one and taking two putts. He got a birdie three on the fourteenth, a par four on the fifteenth and was two up on Gunn who had been having trouble with Oakmont's traps. They halved the sixteenth in threes and Jones got another birdie 3 on the seventeenth and a par on the eighteenth, finishing the morning round four up. He had made four threes in the last six holes.

Bobby Shoots Top Round.

The medal scores showed the champion had gone out in 36 and returned in 34, for a total of 70, two strokes under par, the best of the tournament. Gunn needed 74 strokes for the morning round, two more than par.

At 2 o'clock they went at it again. Gunn was still in the fighting spirit, but the champion had a big lead.

Jones won the nineteenth and twentieth with birdies, a 4 on the former and a 3 on the latter. He was 6 up.

On the twenty-first hole Gunn played one of the most spectacular shots of the tournament. His approach shot dropped into a trap at the right of the green. He studied the lie carefully and played an explosion shot with his niblick. The ball rolled straight into the hole, which was 70 feet away. Jones, who was on in two, didn't even bother to putt. He swung his club and applauded his opponent's feat.

Gunn Cuts Bobby's Lead.

On the next hole Gunn made a great putt, a matter of 20 feet and won the hole with a birdie 4, leaving him only 4 down.

On the twenty-third hole Gunn fell back of some high "chocolate drop" bunker and got a six, while Jones needed only 4. The next was halved and Gunn sank a long putt on the twenty-fifth and again was only 4 down.

At the twenty-sixth green Jones, who was just on the edge, got a break. It is a 220 yard hole and his tee shot hit a girl. Had it not been stopped it would have gone into a deep ditch. He chipped to the green, five inches from the pin and won the hole, after Gunn had been in a deep trap.

On the twenty-seventh Jones got a 5 and Gunn took 6. The afternoon turn was made with Jones 6 up. On the twenty-eighth Jones chipped close to the pin and sank a putt for a par 4. The match stood Jones 7 up and 8 to go.

On the twenty-ninth Gunn had lost heart. He was in a trap off the tee and went into another on his third shot. Jones was on in two and put his approach putt within a foot of the pin. Gunn ran over and congratulated him. The student had put up a good battle, but the master had won.

TOURNEY NOTES

AFTER the play was over the officials of the U. S. G. A. took Jones and Gunn out in front of the clubhouse and presented them with their medals and a great deal of oratory. Jones was called upon for a speech.

"This is the greatest golf course in America," he said. "And Pittsburgh's galleries are the most polite and orderly I have ever known. It has been a wonderful tournament."

Then Gunn was asked for a speech. He snickered and smiled and finally laughed out loud.

"Mr. President, officials, and ladies and gentlemen," he said, and snickered again. "When I came up here I didn't expect to qualify. But the people were so nice to me that I stayed all week."

Judge William Gunn, father of the runnerup, who didn't want his son to come here a fortnight ago because he didn't think the lad had a chance that was good enough, weeps copiously on the club house veranda after the match was over this afternoon. But when he talks about his son's world's record of winning fifteen consecutive holes, he smiles.

Mrs. A. W. McCloy, who watched the tournament from her saddle horse on the five days of the week, was afoot with the gallery today.

One woman, who wore high heeled shoes, lost a heel at the third hole of the morning round, but the loss didn't deter her gallerying the entire match.

Gunn was unusually careful to smooth out all heel marks in the sand traps today.

MILWAUKEE PLAYER SETS NEW MARK IN ACCEPTING CHANCES

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 5. (AP)—Oscar Melillo, Brewer second basemon, broke the world's record for the number of chances accepted at the keystone bag, when the eight putouts and seven assists he had today raised his total of chances accepted to 1,035 for 141 games. The former second base record was set by Lajoie in 1908, when he accepted 1,025 chances in 156 games.

Melillo today figured in four double plays, which raised the total of the Milwaukee club to 176 for the 148 games played this season, which is but six less than the world's record set by the Washington Senators in 1923, when that club turned in 182 double plays in 154 games. The flashy second baseman is responsible to a large extent for the epidemic of double killings the Brewers have been making this year, his speed in getting the ball away being a material factor.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—A temperature in excess of one hundred degrees appeared to disturb the White Sox this afternoon and they lost a lap in their third place marathon by letting the Browns land on them to the tune of 10 to 8, in the second game of the series.

About the only thing the Pale Hose were able to do properly was to hit, and they held up their end in that particular by cracking three Brownie hurlers for thirteen smacks, but their own slabbers—Ted Lyons, Hollis Thurston, and Dick Kerr — were socked even harder and in addition the Collins fielders cut in with a few errors that aided the locals in the manufacturing of runs.

Barrett Gets Three Hits.

As might be guessed, Bill Barrett had more than one man's share of the fielding slips, but the infielding outfielder made amends for his carelessness by uncorking three helpful hits, one of which sailed over the right field screen.

It was Barrett's homer, among other things, that gave the Sox a 4 to 2 lead in four innings, but the lead proved worthless. In that chapter Joe Giard passed Sheely after which Falk and Barrett promptly hit the ball into the right field bleachers. That advantage loomed formidable, but the home troupe knocked Lyons all over the place in the fifth and then clinched it off Thurston with a couple of homers in the sixth, after the visitors had knotted the count at six apiece in the first half of the inning.

While Lyons and then Thurston were having their troubles in the fifth on five hits and fumbles by both Barrett and Hooper, four Brownies went scooting over the pan. This outburst of runs quieted the local wolves, of whom about 7,500 were present, but they broke forth with their customary howls in the sixth, when a single by Barrett, bad throws by Robertson and Gerber, and a double by Mostil, scored two and knotted the count. The Brownies, however, were not long in breaking the deadlock.

Rice, Sisler Clout Homers.

Rice was the first gent to appear in the home sixth and he planted one of Thurston's slow foolers into the seats in right. Sisler did the same a moment later. Then Barrett pegged one wild and that runner went across before Kerr could step out and complete the inning. Another registered on wee Dickie in the eighth when a single and a pass opened the inning.

Although they were in arrears by 10 to 6 going into the ninth, the Sox waxed so boisterous that they drove Dave Danforth off the slab and there is no telling what would have happened if Falk hadn't pulled one on the bases. Kane, Hooper, Sheely, and Falk singled in the final frame with none dead, two scoring, then Falk got himself trapped off first base and the rally was ruined.

SQUARES BUNCH BLOWS TO BEAT CHICAGO BLUES

Timely swatting in the first inning by Burns and Mokate figured in the 3 to 1 win of the Logan Squares over the Chicago Blues at Calahan's park yesterday. The Squares hopped on Dave Black in their half and counted two runs on four singles. Olen Voight hurled a smart game for the Squares, scattering nine wallops through the fray. Score:

RED SOX BOOT GAME TO SENATORS, 7 TO 6

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Erratic play sent the Red Sox to a 7 to 6 defeat today in the second game of the series with the Senators. Fohl's men batted in enough runs to triumph had they properly supported Fred Wingfield. But in the sixth round they booted a couple of Washington runs across.

Dutch Ruether started on the slab for the home team but lasted only four innings. In that time he yielded five hits, four of them for extra bases, one being a homer within the park by Wingfield. Ballou then took up the pitching burden and was nicked for three safeties. Score:

Bobby Jones of Atlanta, Ga., Wins National Amateur Golf Championship for Second Year in a Row.

HE'S STILL CHAMP. Robert T. Jones Jr. isn't called "Ty," but he's as consistent in leading golfers as the "Georgia Peach" is in setting the pace for ball players.

WAY BACK WHEN. As Bobby looked at 17, when he first startled golf world.

TITLE HOLDER DOESN'T MIND THIS. Bobby hits 'em hard and far, but sometimes not so accurately—witness this evidence produced by the photographer. He is master of the "explosion shot" and seldom wastes a stroke when he lands in a trap.

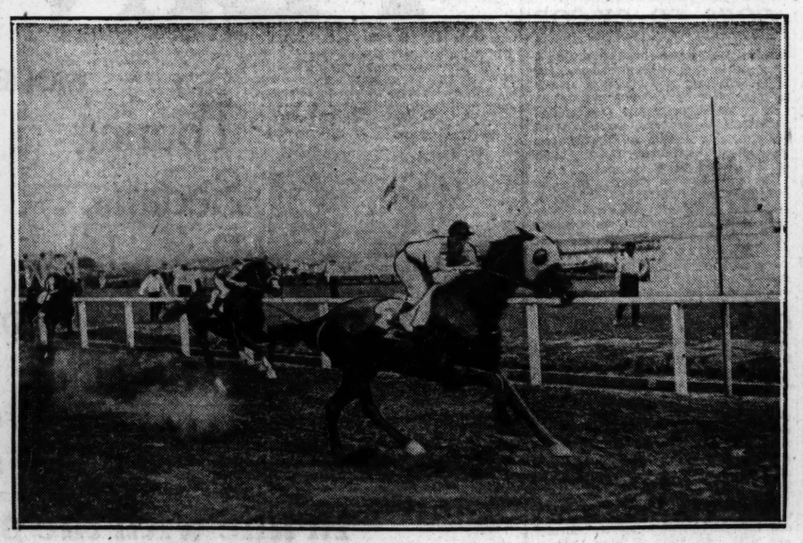
GIRL STAR OF LUTHERAN A. A. MEET. Violet Krubaek of the Pilgrim team is shown winning the 50 yard dash for girls, one of the events of the fifth annual championships on Soldier field yesterday. In addition to winning the short dash, Miss Krubaek won the running high jump, the running broad jump, and was third in the 100 yard dash.



AND THE BAND PLAYED "MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME." All the honors in the P. A. Nash handicap, feature of yesterday's Hawthorne races, went to Kentucky horses, Columbia making a parade of it to win. Right On Time was second, and Georgia Rose a distant third.

CHICAGOANS WIN IN SAGINAW CLUB TENNIS TOURNEY

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Several states are represented in the sixth annual Saginaw Valley open tennis tournament which started today on the clay courts of the Saginaw Canoe club. Chicago entries were not so numerous as in past years.

Four representatives of Chicago were on hand for the start of the meet and all survived the first round play, while three reached the third round.

Merle Lyon, Chicago, met defeat in the second round when he fell before E. S. Clark Sr. of Bay City, Mich., in straight sets, 7—5, 6—2, after having trimmed E. C. Eddy of Flint, Mich., with the loss of only one game in the first round.

Frank T. O'Brien drew a first round bye then won a 6—2, 6—2 verdict over Milton Carpenter of Lansing.

The other Chicagoans, Axel Gravem and Emmett Pare, each won two matches during the first day of play, Gravem defeating Alderton and Cook, both of this city, while Pare was disposing of Toash of Saginaw and Slater of Pontiac, Mich.

Gravem and O'Brien paired for a doubles victory in the first round of team play when they won from Henderschott and Stouffer of the Michigan state college varsity tennis team.

FAVORITES WIN AS PARK RIDGE NET MEET OPENS

The first annual Labor day tournament of the Park Ridge Tennis club moved through the first two rounds yesterday afternoon with the favorites all coming through with ease. Despite the large field of 86 entries the matches were run off rapidly. Play will continue through today and Labor day, with the finals on the holiday, providing the unwieldy field has been sufficiently cut down by that time. If the matches cannot be completed in the three days the final brackets will be played next Saturday and Sunday.

The opening matches produced little in the way of thrilling competition. Most of the matches were decided with ease, only three going to three sets before a decision was reached. The feature match of the day saw the Rockford champion, E. M. Brolin, fall before Stanley Drake of the River Forest club in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4.

Among the more prominent players who are expected to come through as the field dwindles are Art Hubbell, Frank O'Connell, Les Leavitt, Stanley Drake, Jay Chappell, S. G. Burkland, Harold McLaughlin, J. O. Durant, George Neeves, and Ellis Klingeman. Summaries of yesterday's matches:

FIRST ROUND—Gus Lottinghaus beat Carl Christenson, 6—0, 6—3; C. S. Palmer beat C. Brassiard, 6—3, 6—1; Stanley Drake beat F. M. Brolin, 6—4, 6—4; J. J. Pape beat C. E. Oehler, 6—1, 6—2; M. B. Oct. 10—Madison Central at Beloit.
Oct. 17—Racine at Beloit.
Oct. 24—Kenosha at Kenosha.
Oct. 31—Madison East at Madison.
Nov. 14—Janesville at Janesville.

TWO INTERCITY TILTS ON TODAY'S SOCCER PROGRAM

Having successfully disposed of the challenge of the Wanderers of Brooklyn, local soccer teams will swing into action today and tomorrow in another pair of intercity matches, this time with the Vesper-Buicks of St. Louis, runners up for the national championship two seasons ago.

Sparta, one of the local teams which vanquished the Wanderers, will oppose the Vespers in the first game of a two series today at 27th street and Kedzie avenue. Tomorrow the Vespers will play Pullman, Peel cup and match play champions, at the same park. Tomorrow's game will be preceded by a match between Sparta and the Buda A. A.

Vespers Have Good Record.

The Vesper-Buicks invade Chicago with an impressive record. Among their outstanding players are La Rose, goal; Joe Haci, former Pullman star, back; Fink, center half; Reed, left half, and Becker, forward.

Four other major league clubs are scheduled for action today when the Brickies playing the Canadian-American western champions, at DePaul field, and the Thistles meeting the Olympics at 47th avenue and 19th street. The latter game will mark the debut of Bob Hannah as manager of the Thistles. The new manager has signed Franklin Davidson and Dave Paxton, former Notre Dame mucks; Flynn, former Buda halfback; Chisholm and McGowan, Sparta players; and Lowe and Taylor of Calumet, Ill.

Minneapolis Team Here.

The Norwegian-Americans, last season's champions, will be the only international league club to play here. They will meet the Norge club of Minneapolis at 45th street and Wentworth avenue. The Norge club defeated the locals in a game at Minneapolis in June.

GLENNA COLLETT LEADS FIELD AT SARANAC LAKE

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Sept. 5.—[United Press.]—Miss Glenna Collett, Providence, former national champion, led the field in the qualifying round of the Adirondack women's golf championship today with a score of 81. She started very badly with a nine on the first hole, but she recovered and went through almost at par. Mrs. J. Thompson, Siwanoy star, was second with an 86, and Miss Maurine Orcutt, Eastern champion, turned in an 88.

COLUMBIA WINS NASH HANDICAP AT HAWTHORNE

BY FRENCH LANE.

They might have called it "Kentucky day," at Hawthorne yesterday, on the final Saturday of the long summer Chicago racing season. Some 20,000 racegoers braved the intense heat to see the card decided and to witness Kentucky owned and Kentucky bred thoroughbreds march home with practically all the honors of the day.

The feature was the Patrick A. Nash handicap, a sprint at six furlongs, in which Kentucky took all the honors, Columbia, from Charley Koerner's stable, winning on a well timed rush with Right on Time, Lexington owned, second, while Georgia Rose, owned by Mistah Pat Knebelkamp of Louisville, was third.

Midwestern Wins Fourth.

But not only in the handicap did the "Hard Boots" lay it on good and strong, for it was Knebelkamp's Midwestern that raced to a spectacular triumph in the secondary feature which came fourth on the program, and it was Frederick Grabner's speedy Kentucky bred 2 year old Renbarg which scored another sensational victory in the Himyar purse, beating out the French bred Etoile du Quesnay and the popular favorite, Martial Wand.

For the final Saturday's racing the punters all but had a field day, for practically every winner on the card had come in for strong support nad numerous favorites were nodding to the finish judges when the races were over.

Columbia never left the result of the feature race in doubt once the webbing lifted. Jockey Simon shot her into an early lead, which she increased on the first turn, and then she came on to win finally by three lengths, while Right on Time made up considerable ground and was up to beat Georgia Rose out of the place by a length.

Thrills in Secondary Feature.

Midwestern's victory was one of the most brilliant on the card, for Jockey Welman, in bad with the stewards here for his incompetent riding, had to hustle the four year old son of Ultimus over the whole trip of a mile and a sixteenth to finally win by a neck from Col. Bob Baker's Victoire. Rachel Potter was third.

Renbarg's wining dash was the only one the punters failed to guess, for he had been overlooked during the mad rush of support to Martial Wand.. He won in a hard drive from Etoile du Quesnay, while Martial Wand was lucky to save the slim end of the purse.

The other races found heavily supported ones the victors, Little Smoke coming up in the last strides to win the opener and Ruban Rouge made the means of a big plunge, coming down in front in the fifth.

The closing race brought one of the most stirring finishes of the day, when Peter J. lasted just long enough to turn back the desperate last second challenge of Resonance. Fifty-Fifty came in for some support, but it took all of Jockey Mortensen's wisardry to have him third at the end.

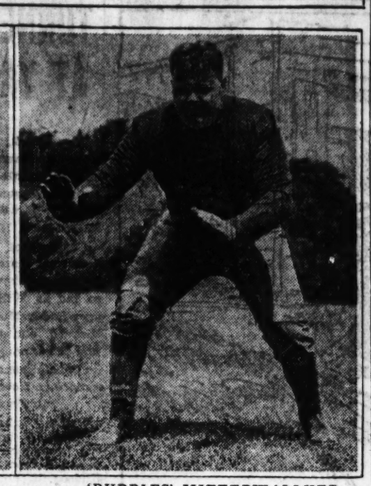
FORREST GREATHOUSE.

JOHN KUENZLI.



'BUBBLES' MITTERWALLNER.

Here are some of the new candidates who are regarded as promising prospects for berths on the 1925 University of Illinois eleven. They probably will get a chance against Nebraska, Oct. 3, the first game for Capt. Grange and his cohorts.

TURF STARS AWAIT BUGLE AT AURORA

Aurora, Ill., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—The names of most of the western thoroughbred racing stars are found in the list of nominations for the four early closing events which are to feature the fall racing season here, which opens next Saturday, Sept. 12.

They include the $5,000 added Fox Valley handicap to be run Oct. 3, the $2,500 Inaugural handicap of Sept. 12, the $2,000 added Chicago handicap of Sept. 19, and the $2,000 Central States handicap down for a decision on Sept. 26.

The fall season will open under the most favorable conditions, with nearly 1,000 horses quartered on the Exposition park grounds, the most notable list of turf stars that have ever appeared here. The entries for the early closing events follow:

HAWTHORNE MAY USE MODIFIED MUTUELS

Good-bye bookmaker and orallizer at future Chicago race meeting.

And Howdy-do, Pari-mutuels or some profit sharing system of speculation that will replace the old odds quoter on Chicago race tracks.

Joseph A. Murphy, president and general manager of the Chicago Business Men's Racing association, announced last night he would recommend to the stockholders of his association at a special meeting on Tuesday morning "that at all future meetings they conduct the so-called oral system of betting be abolished."

Plan System Within the Law.

"Two years of experimenting shows us the so-called oralizing is distasteful to the great mass of Chicago people, to the press and to the army of tourists here every summer. Our policy has always been strict obedience to the law but we have worked out a plan under which the public can participate in the racing the same as the horsemen do in the winnings of their horses. We think it will be strictly within the present statues."

At a recent meeting of the new Washington Park corporation it was announced by President Robert Switzer they would operate under the same proposed modified mutuel system. Aurora adopted it and operated successfully last spring.

Would Quit Presidency.

Murphy announced also he would ask his stockholders Tuesday to relieve him of the duties of president of the association and place a well known Chicago business man at the head. He wants to devote all his time to the racing proper, he said.

There was talk last night of a test case on the proposed modified mutuel wagering system being made at Hawthorne later this fall.

MY LORRAINE COPS FEATURE AT LIBERTYVILLE

My Lorraine won the fourth and feature race of the turf program at the Libertyville fair yesterday, scoring in spectacular fashion over Comedy, with Wolf Jr. third. All five events offered good racing.

Presiding Steward William Booker found it necessary during the afternoon to suspend Jockeys McDonald and McCorkin for unsatisfactory riding.

Another card of five races is down for a decision on this afternoon's program. Results yesterday follow:

First race—Won by Edith Clifford; Sinvonia, second; Fanny Courtan, third.

ART MORTENSEN'S CONTRACT SOLD TO H. G. SHIMP

Jockey Arthur Mortensen's contract was purchased yesterday by the Chicago turfman, Herbert G. Shimp, for a reported price of $15,000. The little rider from Idaho who still is an apprentice has been the sensation of the summer racing here riding more than 50 winners at Hawthorne. He had been under first call to Shimp previously to the sale of the contract yesterday. Harry Payne Whitney and Joseph E. Widener both made offers for the contract, it is said.

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Sale of Bobby Moore, third baseman of the Dubuque Mississippi Valley league club to Oklahoma City in the Western league was announced today.

COLUMBIA WINS YACHT RACE TO MICHIGAN CITY

A placid sea, westerly winds and predictions for excellent sailing weather started six yachts across the lake yesterday morning in the annual Michigan City race of the Jackson Park Yacht club. The race started off Jackson park harbor.

Edith II. was the first boat to reach the other side, a distance of thirty-two nautical miles, but due to a time allowance given other boats in the thirty foot class, Columbia was the victor. Columbia's corrected time for the sail was 4:29:35, while Edith's was 6:26:44. Camilla finished the drive in 4:51:00, corrected time. The victor was piloted by its owner, H. A. Redmon of the Jackson Park Yacht club. Edith was sailed by R. Williamson and J. C. Irwin, and Milt Herbert was at the wheel of the Camilla.

Quest had an easy time in the yawl class, finishing the sail in 5:36:05, and winning in corrected time of 5:19:16 from Beaver, the other entry in the yawl division. Joel Holk and Jack Holbrook, owners, handled the Quest, while Bryce Hess took the Beaver over the lake.

Chaperon, sailed by its owner, Sam King, the only Q craft in the race, finished in 4:43:05. Summaries:

BESSEMER WINS ANNUAL SOUTH PK. FIELD MEET

About 3,000 people watched 400 boys from fifteen parks decide the annual south parks baseball field day championships at Washington park yesterday afternoon.

Bessemer park was the winner in the senior section with 58½ points; Cornell winner of the intermediate division with 26 points, and Grand Crossing victor in the junior class with 40 1-3 markers.

Willard Swanson, Grand Crossing park, a fourteen year old youth, scored high individual honors among the juniors with a total of 14. W. Marek, Cornell square, took high honors in the intermediate class, piling up a total of 12 points, and D. Munyo, Bessemer park, topped the seniors for individual point honors with 23.

Sixth Corps Officers to Hold Golf Meet Sept. 14-18

Officers of the Sixth corps will compete in a golf tournament at the Olympia Fields Country club Sept. 14-18, to determine who will represent the command at the Army Golf association championship meet, which will be held the following week at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. Lieut. Col. H. M. Nelly is in charge of the tournament at Olympia Fields.

FISHMAN WINS PITCHING TEST

Fred Fishman of Avalon park playground yesterday won the Chicago Board of Education baseball pitching championship in the annual tournament at Grant park.

More than thirty pitchers from the playgrounds of the city competed. The conditions under which the event was run off were for each pitcher to stand on the slab and attempt to hit a target fifty feet distant.

GRAND PRIX RACE TODAY

MONZA, Italy, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Sixteen racing automobiles representing manufacturers in the United States, France, England, and Italy, will get away tomorrow in the Italian Grand Prix. Crown Prince Humbert and the Princess Yolanda plan to see the start of the speed test, which consists of eighty laps over a 10 kilometer course.

Racing fans have arrived from France, Switzerland, and all parts of Italy.

STAYERS HANDICAP AT LONDON ENDS IN TRIPLE DEAD HEAT

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—That very rare sporting event, the triple dead heat, occurred at the Folkestone races today and brought a huge crowd to a high pitch of excitement.

The three horses deadheated in the Stayers handicap were Z. G. Michalino's Rocos with F. Scott up, Capt. R. E. Sassoon's Golden Book with E. Martin up, and Miss L. Reynolds' Breezy Heather with T. Carey riding. Golden Book's jockey immediately objected to Rocos, and the stewards after hearing the evidence disqualified the latter horse.

The last triple deat heat was at Windsor in 1923. Previously to that there had, according to available records, been but one since the Ashley stakes at Lewes in 1836.

Minneapolis Polo Team Beats Canadians, 6 to 5

Fort Snelling, Minn., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Minneapolis defeated the St. Charles Canaries of Winnipeg, 6 to 5, in a consolation match at the fourth international polo tourney here today. The Canadians rallied in the last three chukkers to score four goals, but Minneapolis counted twice in the sixth to win.

Illinois Jockey Club Fans to Dine Thursday

Business men, political leaders, and leading sportsmen will assemble at the Congress hotel Thursday evening for the first annual dinner of the Illinois Jockey club, sponsor for the new Washington Park racecourse, under construction at 175th and Halsted streets. The dinner will be in the nature of a testimonial to Robert M. Sweitzer, county clerk, president of the club, and in celebration of the completion of a three year campaign to build the new racecourse.

CROISSANT AS FORD BY-PRODUCT WAXED WEALTHY

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Frank Croissant, a native of Brooklyn but resident in Chicago, sailing today on the Leviathan for a vacation in Europe, estimated his fortune at $20,000,000.

Discussing the beginning of his fortune, Croissant said one day in Chicago many years ago when real estate was not moving so well he decided to be a "Henry Ford by-product" and that thereafter whenever he heard that Ford planned to build a new factory or an assembling plant he bought up realty in the neighborhood. Thus, he said, he built up his present wealth.

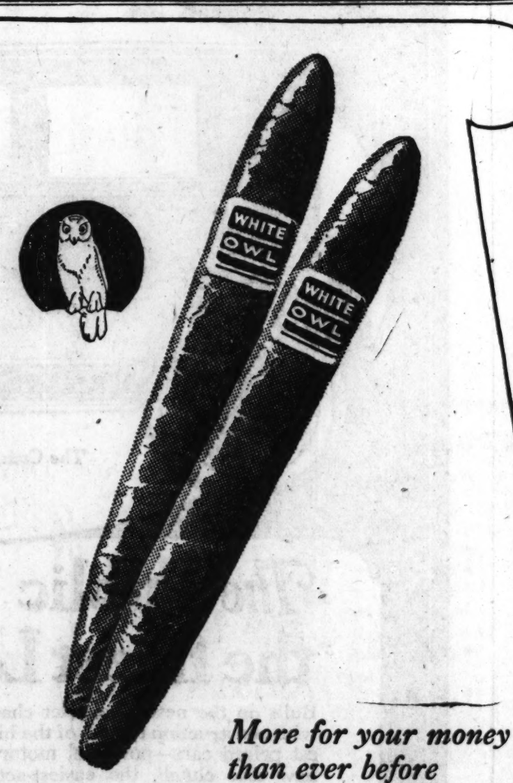
Mr. Croissant is owner of many race horses, including Kentucky Cardinal, Gibbons, Stanwix and Buck.

EXTRA MILE IN ALLEGED 'FIXED' RACE KILLS MARE

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Nellie Looksir, racing mare owned by J. L. Sangson, Alta, Ia., one of the three horses on the track in an alleged "fixed" race at the state fair Thursday, died at the fair grounds stables yesterday.

Veterinarians declared that death was due to over-exertion. E. G. Mason, Grinnell, and U. S. Renne, Fort Calhoun, Neb., drivers implicated in the alleged frame-up, said the running of an extra heat which fair judges ordered was responsible for the death of the animal.

The extra heat which the judges ordered was the fifth mile in the race.



2 for 15¢

More for your money than ever before

There's nothing new in selling cigars at 2 for 15 cents, but tobacco from the finest crop in years does add to White Owls an additional sweetness of taste and mellowness that give your money an entirely new value.

When you consider that a nickel is a nickel and a dime is a dime, it may seem strange to some that in one case fifteen cents buys so much more than in another.

The reason is simple. It just proves conclusively that what you spend is never as important as how you spend it.

In offering so much now for your 15 cents, the manufacturers of White Owls are only following a wise policy. Most successful manufacturers give far greater value for the money. Competition is keen; the public is an exacting buyer. Profit, per sale, must be unbelievably small and ultimate return must come through huge volume.

Upon this sound principle the remarkable business of White Owls has been built. A million a day to satisfy the demand—a cigar which sells by the million simply because of its remarkable value.

Nature and the enormous sales of White Owls have now combined to make them taste better than ever. The tobacco being used is from what experts have pronounced the finest in years. Sweeter tasting than ever, more mellow, more fragrant. Smokers everywhere are commenting on the improvement even in a cigar which, because of its enormous popularity, seemed to have reached the acme in cigar goodness.

Never before have your 15 cents bought as much as in White Owls. They are, truly, greater value than ever.

More and more men are buying White Owls in the handy pack of ten. Then you can be sure of always having in your pocket your favorite cigar—full-flavored, fresh and in perfect condition.

MERKNER SECOND IN SENIOR MILE OF BIKE RACES

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Charles Winter, representing New York, today successfully defended his laurels by nosing out his nearest opponent in the finals of the one mile race for seniors in the national championship bicycle races, in progress here.

Winter finished in front of eight other riders who had qualified for the finals by placing in three preliminary heats. His time was 4:02⅕, comparatively slow.

Edward Merkner of Chicago was second, just a wheel behind the winner, while E. J. Mouilcaudt of St. Louis was third, and R. J. O'Connor of Washington, D. C., was fourth.

William Unkert of Newark, N. J., won the quarter mile race for juniors. Walter Bresnan of New York was second, Geary May of Los Angeles, third and A. Wilkins of Baltimore, fourth. The winner's time was 30⅕ seconds.

JOHNSON DENIES MACKMEN-LABOR CONTROVERSY

Regarding the alleged boycott of the Philadelphia Athletics because of a supposed controversy with the American Federation of Labor, President B. B. Johnson of the American league, yesterday said there can be no controversy between the Philadelphia ball club and organized labor because the dispute between the Athletics and the labor organization was all thrashed out with President Green of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Green was convinced that the Philadelphia club had been extremely fair with the building trades and consequently a boycott never could have his sanction as the entire matter was positively ignored by the executive council of the federation.

WOODBURY BEATS IOWA CHAMP IN THREE MILE RACE

Kewanee, Ill., Sept. 5.—Cliff Woodbury, Chicago, dirt track champion, defeated Bob Zlene, dirt track champion of Iowa, in one of the greatest racing classics downstate this afternoon, marking the close of the Kewanee fair. It was a three mile event, Woodbury time being 3:22.

Woodbury won first in the 10 mile feature race from a field of ten fastest dirt track drivers of western Illinois. G. A. Hardy, 2900 Sheffield avenue, Chicago, sustained a badly injured foot, but refused to quit the field.

Swan Peterson, Galesburg, suffered injuries and was taken to a hospital.

CHICAGO GETS FRANCHISE IN HOCKEY LEAGUE

Word was received yesterday from Walter Earley, local hockey enthusiast, that the United States Hockey association in Pittsburgh, Pa., has granted Cicago a franchise in the association for the coming year. Earley, who is to lead the local aggregation, will return immediately to organize the Chicago team. Players probably will be selected from local universities and colleges if possible. The entrance of Chicago into the association will raise the membership to eight, as Pittsburgh, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Detroit, Duluth, Eveleth, and Cleveland also belong to the organization.

NEW GREEN BAY STADIUM WILL BE READY SOON

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 5.—Construction of what ultimately promises to be one of the finest athletic stadiums in this part of the state has been under way at Joannes park for the last eight weeks and the football field will be in readiness for the opening games of the season this month.

The field is being built by the city of Green Bay's school board for the high schools and use of the stadium has been given to the Green Bay Football corporation for the Packer games on Sundays during the gridiron season.

Spring Valley Wildcats Begin Grid Practice

Spring Valley, Ill., Sept. 5.—The Spring Valley American Legion Wild Cats have begun football practice. The veterans on the squad are Doig, Ryczek, Walker, Coveny, Lolli, Perino, Chandelier, Chiodo, McDonald, Cinotto, Nesit, Nicoli, Bogren, and Skee.

HOPPE TO PLAY ST. JEAN THREE CUSHION MATCH

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Willie Hoppe will celebrate his return to three cushion billiards, following his two recent clashes against Erich Hagenlacher at 18.2 balk line when he opens a 600 point handicap match against Andrew St. Jean of Minneapolis at the Strand billiard academy Monday afternoon. Hoppe has agreed to play St. Jean 600 to 480, or in twelve blocks of 50 to 40 each. St. Jean, who is among the first four in pocket billiards, also has an excellent rating at three cushions, and many billiard followers believe that the odds are a little too generous on the part of Hoppe.

ROWLEY HIGH GUN AT LINCOLN PARK

Doubles shoot, added bird handicap, made up the program at the Lincoln park traps yesterday. H. M. Rowley was high gun in a field of forty. Dan Zei and G. Nicholson each shot 46 for second honors, while F. Fitton's 45 put him in third place and a 43 tied M. Hoff and W. M. Johnson for fifth.

WESTERN BIKE TITLE RACES HERE SEPT. 27

As a fitting climax to a successful season the western division of the Amateur Bicycle League of America will stage the western amateur outdoor bicycle championships at Soldiers' field, Grant park, Sunday afternoon, Sept. 27. The meet will bring together the leading riders of Chicago and other midwestern cities, from which list the western champion will be crowned.

Since its inception five years ago the league has developed numerous great riders, many of whom have made good in professional circles. Among the more prominent of the league graduates are Ernest Kockler, Carl Stockholm, Mickey Walsh, and Roy Mobeck.

Races will be held for juniors and girls in the A. B. C. and novice classes. Newsboys and Boy Scouts races also are on the program. The meet is open to all amateurs in the west. Entries can be made with Julien T. Fitzgerald, western representative of the A. B. L. of A., at 2846 West North avenue.

COAST COMMISH RECOGNIZE JACK HIS OWN MANAGER

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, has been granted a California boxing license and recognized as his own manager by the state athletic commission, Rob Roy Benton, who has been acting for him, announced here today.

Benton said he thought this would serve as a precedent for the New York boxing commission in its settlement of the dispute involving the champion, Jack Kearns, and Tex Rickard, in connection with a proposed Dempsey-Wills contest.

Edouard Mascart on Way to U. S. to Battle Kaplan

HAVRE, France, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Edouard Mascart, European featherweight champion, sailed for New York on the steamer Suffern today. He intends to spend the winter in the United States and will seek bouts with Kid Kaplan, the world champion featherweight, and Babe Herman, the outstanding contender for Kaplan's title.

MOTOR OILS·FOROLENE·FURNACE OILS

WILLS MAY MEET TUNNEY OCT. 12 AT YANKS' PARK

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Whether Harry Wills will enter the ring for battle before the end of the outdoor season and if so how many matches he will undertake will not be known until Monday.

Conferences scheduled for today failed to materialize and as a consequence developments were unchanged so far as Wills is concerned. Manager Paddy Mullins saw Promoter Tex Rickard, but only for an instant, or just long enough for Rickard to make an appointment with Mullins for a conference at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Promoters Fail to Appear.

Mullins' scheduled conference with J. Frank Black and Babe Clunan, Newark promoters, did not occur because the men from the other side of the Hudson did not appear.

Indications today were that Wills will engage in only one bout before the end of the current open air season and that this lone match will bring the Negro heavyweight title commander in the ring with Gene Tunney, foremost white heavyweight.

May Meet Oct. 12.

Promoter Rickard is after this bout. He wants it for Columbus day at the Yankee stadium. Matchmaker Jimmy De Forest wants the bout for the latter part of the month at the Polo grounds and so do the officials of Ebbets field in Brooklyn. Wills is eager for the bout. It remains for Tunney to accept the assignment and then the battle will go to the promoter making the best offer.

EVANSTON RIFLE TEAM WINS IN SHOOT AT PERRY

Camp Perry, O., Sept. 5.—(AP)—The United States rifle team won the Palma team match here today with a score of 1,770 out of a possible 1,800. The Canadian team, with 1,745, was second, and the Cuban team, 1,715, third.

In the 200 yard rapid fire match Sergt. George Friend, United States infantry, won with 100 points.

Private Percy Eberhardt, United States marine corps, won the 400 yard rapid fire match with a possible of 50. Eight competitors scored 49.

The Ridgeville Rifle club, Evanston, Ill., won the small bore interclub long range match with a score of 390 out of a possible 400 on a 200 yard range.

The individual short range small bore match was won by Virgil Richards, Pittsburgh, Pa., with 394 out of a possible 400.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

ILLINOIS HAS NEW REGULATIONS IN GAME AND FISH CODES.

COPIES of the Illinois game and fish codes are off the press and now giving hunters the latest dope on 1925-1926 hunting regulations; quite a number of blue winged teal have come down from the north and Illinois gunners are busy getting ready to tilt the lid of the hunting season on the sixteenth of the month, as, according to the migratory bird act, waterfowl hunting may begin on that date.

Illinois hunting laws are just about the same as they were last year. Wood ducks are still on the protected list. Other waterfowl may be shot from Sept. 16 until Dec. 31. This includes coots or mudhens, brant geese, plover, jacksnipes, and yellowlegs. The season on rails is from Sept. 16 to Nov. 30. The quail season is scheduled to open on Nov. 10 and will continue up to and including Dec. 20, with a limit of 12 a day, which is a bag limit large enough for anybody.

Six days are set aside for pheasant shooting beginning Nov. 10. The limit is two a day, and only cocks can be shot, the same ruling that was in force last season. Small bore enthusiasts who like to swing a 20 or a 16 gauge on doves in the cornfield have the entire month of September for this gunning, as the Illinois law says 15 a day up to and including Sept. 30.

Members of hunting clubs in the state of Illinois should secure a copy of the new game and fish codes and carefully read section 27 A of article four on page 21. This section is a novelty. It stipulates that "every person, association, club, corporation, and all persons, firms, and partnerships owning, holding by lease or otherwise, or controlling land and water or land or water used for hunting migratory birds or having a privilege to hunt thereon migratory birds, shall pay a license fee of $10 to the department of conservation and secure a license covering such land and water." In other words, if you have leased a piece of land for hunting ducks or geese you must pay ten bucks to the conservation department for a license to shoot on that land. Clubs must come across with a similar amount.

And that isn't all. Every person, club, corporation or what not, owning or leasing land for waterfowl hunting must keep an accurate daily register showing the number and kind of migratory birds shot by each person using the grounds. The idea is to have each hunter fill out a blank at the end of the day which is to be turned in for the register. Farmers who hunt on their own land are, of course, exempt from this ruling. Club members must have their daily shoot certificates up to date and be ready to show them to any warden, according to the new ruling.

NOTED COLORED PILOTS IN AUTO SPEEDWAY RACES

Leading race stars among the colored drivers of the country will compete tomorrow afternoon in the meet at the Thornton speedway. The twenty mile Western championship is the big feature. There also will be two ten mile eliminations and a ten mile consolation, making fifty miles of racing for the afternoon.

Six states will be represented in the event—Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, California, Pennsylvania, and Nebraska. Two Western champions for the season are among the entrants—Sam Buford of Los Angeles, who captured the 50 mile title at Thornton in July, and Bob Wallace of Indiana, who won the 100 mile championship at Indianapolis last month.

Bill Jeffries of Chicago, who is promoting the meet, is a leading contender.

Following are the entries:

Bill Carson, Chicago, Frotenac; Bill Jeffries, Chicago, Frotenac; Chris Cowan, Omaha, Duesenberg; Bill Buckner, Indianapolis, Buckner Special; Malcolm Hannon, Indianapolis, B. and B. Special; William Valentine, Indianapolis, Frotenac; M. D. Threkeld, Chicago, Frotenac; Hugo Barnes, Indianapolis, Fronty; Robert Wallace, Indianapolis, Tray of Hearts; Doc White, Keokuk, Buick Special; William Wathall, Chicago, Marmon Special; Sam Buford, Los Angeles, Fronty; Clifford Jackson, Chicago, Dodge Special; Ernie Stevens, Chicago, Dodge; Clifford Jackson, Chicago, Dodge Special; Joe Lewis, Pittsburgh, Frontenac.

CHICAGO BOYS WIN WHITE LAKE SWIM LAURELS

White Lake, Mich., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Two Chicago lads, Raymond O'Keefe Jr., aged 13, and Jim O'Keefe, 15, have all but walked away with the boys' swimming championship here this season, winning a majority of the cups and medals awarded at the summer camp here. They won added honors by swimming across White lake, starting the trip at 10 o'clock and finishing at 1 o'clock. The younger of the two brothers has won five cups and numerous medals competing against the best boy swimmers here.

ACE RETAINS STAR CLASS YACHT TITLE IN EAST

Port Washington, N. Y., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Ace, representative of the Western Long Island Sound fleet and owned by Adrian Iselin, II., successfully defended her international star class yacht trophy by finihing third in the fifth and final race of the championship series today. Rody of the Narragansett Bay fleet was first today and Sonny of the Graves End Bay fleet, second.

STONE ARRIVES TODAY TO TRAIN FOR OWENS BOUT

Ad Stone, the Philadelphia heavyweight who meets Ernie [illegible] of California in the windup of the boxing show at East Chicago [illegible] night, will arrive in Chicago this morning. He will make his headquarters at the Plaza hotel on the north side and will do all his boxing at the Mullen gymnasium.

Stone, who is a veteran of the world war, having served with the marines, is looked upon as one of the best heavyweights of the east. He fought Paul Berlenbach in the third round, pair of bad hands making it necessary for him to lose on a technical knockout. He has met some of the best of his weight, including "Young" Stribling, Tommy Loughran, Charley Weinert, Billy Shade and a host of other lights.

Managed by Jack Kearns.

Owens, who is under the management of Jack Kearns, is looked upon as a promising product by those who have seen him work. He has defeated the best heavyweights on the coast and has challenged the winner of the Paul Berlenbach-Jimmy Slattery bout in New York on Friday night. Since Berlenbach has held the world's light heavyweight title Owens has frequently challenged him but he has refused to listen to the challenge. A forfeit of $2,500 has been posted with the New York boxing commission to bind a match between Owens and the winner of the Berlenbach-Slattery bout.

Aside from introducing new faces in the windup of this show, Matchmaker Jim Mullen has arranged other matches which will bring together some fighters who have not been seen in action in the East Chicago or Aurora ring this year. The talent has been drawn from towns close to East Chicago, with the result the fighters' followings are expected to comfortably fill the arena. There will be forty rounds of boxing and the tickets are on sale at the usual places.

Moore Fights Tomorrow.

Pal Moore, the Memphis and Chicago flash, leaves today for Oshkosh, Wis., where he will trade punches for ten rounds with Henry Lennon, the South Chicago tomorrow afternoon. Moore has no setup in the South Chicago battler, who is a southpaw and who can hit with his left hand. In the past the port siders have given Moore a lot of trouble and Lennon may be no exception. Moore will be handled by Manager Harry Ballstadter and Mike Finney.

ILLINI COACH 23 YEARS.

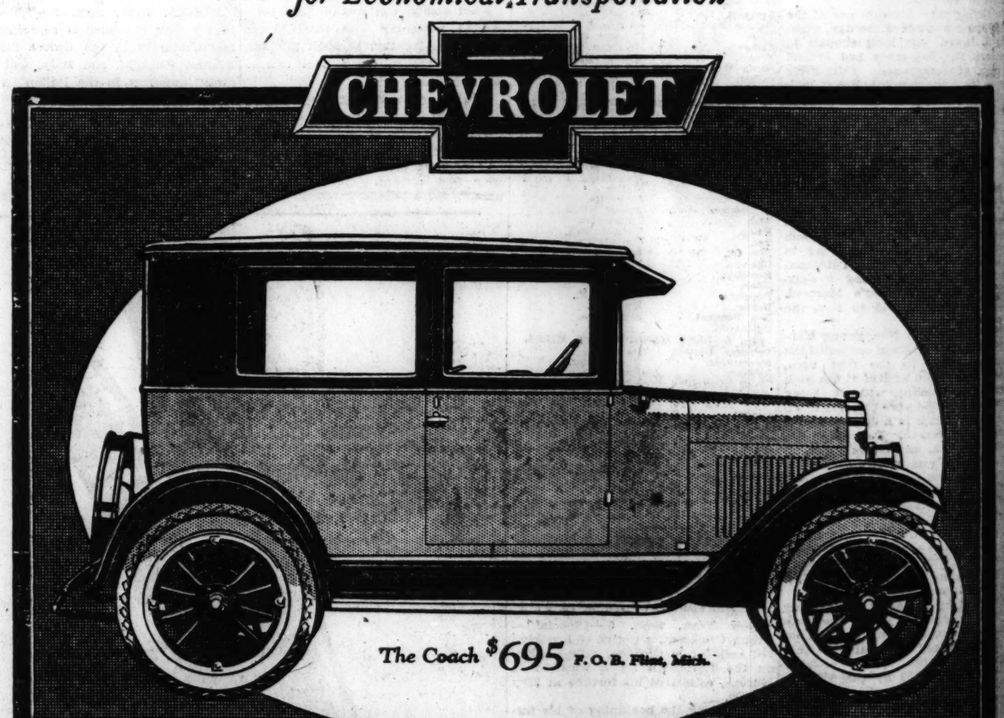
for Economical Transportation



The Coach $695 F. O. B. Flint, Mich.

The Public Acclaims this the finest Low Priced Coach

Built on the new Chevrolet chassis with construction typical of the highest priced cars—powerful motor; a new disc clutch, the easiest-acting you have ever handled; extra strong rear axle; long semi-elliptic springs—this car provides a remarkable combination of strength, power and comfort.

But in addition it is a beautiful car. Its fine Fisher body meets your ideals of fine appearance and comfort. It is finished in sage-green and black Duco whose lustre and color last for years. For such a coach to be priced so low is truly an achievement in motor car manufacture. See this car today.

Midwest Wealth Swells Coffers of Auto Industry

New Battle Seen in Race to Produce Small Car.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Automobile manufacturers are heading into the fall market full speed ahead—something entirely new at this season of the year, when by all laws of supply and demand the automobile and truck business should show signs of weakness. Labor, another unfailing barometer in the industry, shows a slight decrease for the week, but an increase of more than 40,000 employes for the corresponding week of 1924.

But with all the incoming and unfilled orders now booked by the various factories, manufacturers are giving no thought to an over-production for storage purposes. Close tabs are being kept and cars are being produced and delivered accordingly. There will be no over-production this fall and winter such as occured in 1923-'24 when the manufacturers were taught a lesson at the cost of several millions of dollars and the loss of considerable sleep.

Prices are at rock bottom All builders have made their announcements and prospective buyers are satisfied that now is the time to choose their 1926 car. With a general tendency of an increase in the price of material of all kinds, it will be surprising if the public does not pay higher prices for their car with the coming of a new year.

An official statement from Washington says a wave of optimism is sweeping throughout the middle west and southwestern districts. Inventories of both new and used cars in these sections were lowered last week. Change in the general state of mind is regarded by many dealers as one of the most promising indications in the district. Sales are running from 30 to 60 per cent ahead of the same week last year. New model announcements, lower prices, bumper crops, and better state of mind all had a beneficial result.

With the announcement made this week by President A. P. Sloan Jr. of General Motors corporation that that corporation had purchased Austin Motors, Ltd., of Birmingham, England, came a distinct buzz from automobile circles that a pretty automobile war would soon be staged, with Europe the battle ground, and the possibility of its being brought to America.

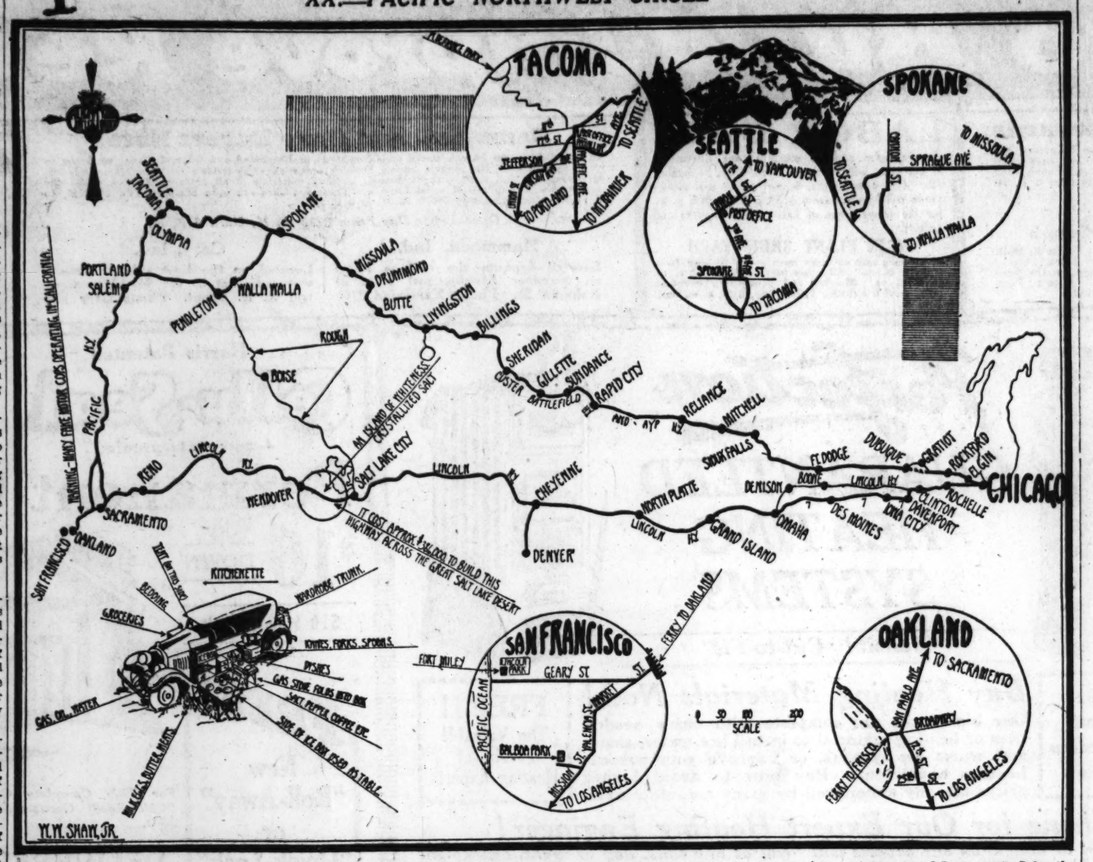
Ford is having things pretty much to himself as far as low priced cars are concerned in England and other European countries, but with the taking over of the Austin properties by the strong General Motors it means but one thing—a bid for the European trade.

Several weeks ago one of the Austin motors arrived in Detroit. This, it has been announced, was for no other purpose than a model to be used on cars of Austin models which will eventually find their way into the American market. This will mean nothing more or less than another battle between Ford and General Motors.

The Austin company has an extensive manufacturing plant near Birmingham, England, and the car is well thought of wherever known.

Tribune Tours

XX.—PACIFIC NORTHWEST CIRCLE



W. W. SHAW, JR.

THERE is still time for that long contemplated tour through the great open spaces to the west and a glimpse of the Pacific northwest in autumn. Steady improvement of the main highways by both state and federal builders this spring and summer has added 50 per cent to the enjoyment of the long runs to the coast.

This tour suggestion uses the direct northwest route for the trip to the coast and a combination of the Lincoln highway and Iowa route 7 for the return, with the scenic Pacific highway as the western end of the gigantic loop. All of the roads followed are reported good at this time of the year.

OILING SYSTEM
MOST EFFICIENT KNOWN

Every moving part of the engine is continually and automatically bathed in oil. Pressure-fed through the drilled crankshaft, the oil is forced to all crankshaft bearings, to the valve mechanism and even to the piston pins. It is an absolutely thorough system that assures perfect and almost silent functioning of the engine at all times.

VELIE

ONLY a week has passed since we displayed the New Velie Brougham and already the word is going 'round, "Buy this individual car if you want exclusive appearance as well as value."

While retaining all the distinguishing features, mechanical and otherwise, which have made the name Velie notable, it embodies many new refinements which contribute to greater comfort, convenience and beauty.

All the distinction of custom design is here, the grace of line in body, full crown fenders and sweep of hood that suggest smooth-flowing power and luxurious travel. The lower half of the car is finished in Duco in soft, satiny, cloud gray, and the upper body in gun metal gray.

Throughout, the workmanship is of the high standard you are accustomed to expect in more costly cars. The body is soundly built and reinforced; the interior delightfully upholstered and appointed. Lockheed Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes and balloon tires assure you absolute riding comfort and safety for all conditions of road and traffic. Scientifically balanced and suspended on its long flexible springs, it rides with velvety ease.

Here, in short, is a car inspiring rare pride of possession, available at a price that brings it quite within your means—a car which is adapted to the most widely diversified uses and occasions—a car with a powerful silent motor to which its entire ownership pays homage.

We cordially invite you to view the Velie Brougham at our display rooms and to let us arrange a demonstration where and when you may desire.

MOTORDOM

Shadow of Motor Shortage Marks Midseason Rush

Here's Why It's So Hard to Get Delivery on New Cars.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

THE United States came nearer to an automobile shortage on July 1 than ever before in its history, according to the National Automobile Dealers' association analyzing the production and sales totals for the last six months of 1925.

On that date there were approximately 10,000 new automobiles in the hands of 45,000 dealers throughout the nation, indicating that the greater number of dealers throughout the country were without new cars of any kind. At the same time there were approximately 200,000 used cars in the hands of the same dealers. In 1924 there were about 20,000 new cars in dealers' hands and approximately 300,000 used automobiles. In 1923 there were 60,000 new cars in dealers' hands and 400,000 used automobiles, and in 1922 about 175,000 new vehicles and 400,000 used cars in dealers' hands.

If all the automobile factories had together closed down a single day in the first six months, there wouldn't have been a new automobile on sale anywhere in the United States on July 1, as sales during the first six months of 1925 were averaging in excess of 10,000 cars and trucks daily.

That this period of buying has been also strongly advantageous to the manufacturers, is shown by the tremendous increases in the net earnings of the leading producers, the gain in the stock market quotations of their shares and by the extra dividends declared by many and the swelled cash reserves with which they will go into the fall and winter months.

That it also has been advantageous to the dealer is declared by C. A. Vane, general manager of the association in the review of the dealer position for the first six months of the year.

"Dealer profits have been more satisfactory than for several years." Vane declares, but they will be kept so only by manufacturers keeping production within legitimate demand.

"In 1922 when there was a 50,000 over production of motor cars and trucks, there was a dealer mortality of 25 per cent. In 1923, when there was an over production of approximately 350,000 cars and trucks, the mortality rate rose to nearly 33 per cent. Last year, when production was kept well within bounds of sales, this mortality rate was checked, being reduced to approximately 21 per cent. If the last six months of 1925 are sanely watched by all, this mortality rate should be further reduced. There is no question but that over production and dealer mortality go hand in hand."

Officials of the association who for years have advocated production based on demand instead of plant capacity, are highly pleased with the attitude of the automobile manufacturers during the first six months of the year.

Net profits to automobile dealers this year, while substantial because of the tremendous volume of business done, only average a return of about 3 per cent net on the gross amount of sales, the association executive declares. The association has declared as its policy, that the dealer is entitled to a minimum of 5 per cent net profit on the gross sales.

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Julia Babcock, 4333 N. Lincoln-st., Chicago.

The Question.

Do you think the city should remove the orange lights from the stop and go signals?

Where Asked.

Michigan avenue and Ontario street.

The Answers.

John Evenhouse, 1831 Washburne avenue, salesman [motorist].—Absolutely not. The orange light is a signal to stop traffic. If it were removed there would be more accidents and confusion at the city intersections. We need the "get ready" sign.

Richard J. Gordan, 117 East Grand avenue, federal employé [pedestrian].—It is my opinion that the orange lights should remain as part of the signal system. Many motorists are caught in the middle of an intersection now when the lights change and the orange gives them time to cross. The orange light is a boon to the pedestrian.

Frank N. Rito, 1637 Flournoy avenue, mail carrier [pedestrian].—I do not think the "get ready" lights should be removed. They are the safety part of our signal system and serve to slow up traffic. There should be more signal lights installed at boulevard interesections. They give the pedestrian a chance.

Edward P. Howard, 4737 Dover street, chauffeur.—The orange lights are the most important part of the traffic signal system and they should not be removed. There would be a jam at every important crossing if the "go" lights were flashed without giving time for cross traffic to stop.

Jack Schneller, 615 North Wells street, electrician [motorist].—I would not like to see the orange lights removed. They are a safety proposition and give both pedestrians and motorists time to move across intersections properly. In some places the orange lights remain on too long, but generally they are a good thing.

The Gas Tax.

Gas tax funds in the state of Ohio will be spent in highway uses, according to the policy of Gov. Donahey. The governor has insisted that the funds go to build as many miles of gravel roads as is possible.

Sky Line Drive.

In Glacier National Park there now is in course of construction the world's most picturesque automobile highway, the "Sky Line drive," which in several places rises above the clouds. Aug. 15th the first motor car arrived at the Golden Stairs on St. Mary's lake, which is as far as the construction work has been completed.

This unusual roadway will be finished in 1928, it is thought.

Use Hand Control.

Maybe it will solve your hill climbing problem to know that sometimes an accelerator does not open the throttle wide even when it is pushed all the way down to the floor. It may not be connected so as to give maximum action to the throttle, and perhaps the thickness of the floor mat may have something to do with it. Next time you climb a tricky hill try using the hand throttle control.

Cadillac Custom 7-Passenger Touring Car

Four Advantages of The New CADILLAC Radiator

While the new Cadillac radiator, with its thermostatic shutters, is very much worth while for its appearance alone, it is, in fact, a distinct engineering improvement with a direct bearing on economy and efficiency—in these four ways:

1. The entire engine is quickly warmed to the temperature of operating efficiency.
2. The carburetor and air entering being directly heated—perfect vaporization is assured and power consequently increased. During winter the Cadillac thus starts with a minimum use of the choke.
3. Crankcase and cylinder blocks are also quickly heated to normal operating temperature which, with Cadillac crankcase ventilation, prevents oil dilution.
4. More energy is used as power, and less wasted as mere heat.

These shutters, furthermore, are integral with the radiator, not a mere accessory for winter. They function in summer as well as winter.

From a background of 23 years of continuous success, the new Cadillac emerges as the masterpiece in the fine car field. It is the ultra-modern version of motor car perfection. It is complete verification and vindication of Cadillac's leadership.

FARM AND GARDEN

Forty-Year Hoard of Stones Builds His Dream House

And the Hoosier Farmer Takes Two Years to Construct It.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

THE world is beating a path to the door of Frank Myers' twenty room dream house built on the old Myers farm near Wolcottville, Ind., within three or four miles of Sylvan lake, where Gene Stratton-Porter gathered the material and wrote two of her famous stories, "The Harvester" and "A Girl of the Limberlost." It took this Hoosier farmer more than forty years to gather the tons of pebbles, stones, and boulders that he used in making the foundation under Dream house and the T shaped barn on the same farm.

From the time Frank Myers was a boy that old wise man's idea of building a mouse trap better than anyone else appealed to his whimsical fancy, so he set out to build a house better than any other farm home in America. And while his neighbor, David Langstron, the harvester, raised medicine plants and herbs, built his new house, and waited for his dream girl—all in Gene Stratton-Porter's imagination — Frank Myers, a real barefooted farm boy a few miles up the road, gathered material for his dream house.

Year by Year.

Day after day during the forty years of preparation Frank would come in from the fields with his pockets filled with stones of various colors and pile them back of the old shack where the Myers family lived. When he came in from a hunt over his neighbors' farms or in the timbered section around Sylvan lake his game bag would often be filled with ducks, squirrels, quail, and stones—mostly stones. On his hunts he usually spent most of the time with his hammer and chisel chipping off slabs from choice stones that he happened to find in a field or creek bed.

At school, during the noon hour, when other boys were playing ball or tag, Frank Myers would be down on the creek looking for rocks for his new home. After he grew to be a man he kept up his search for rocks, and wherever he went, whether he was walking, riding on horseback or in a buggy, or touring the country in an automobile hundreds of miles away from home, he was constantly looking for choice stones. Year after year the pile of stones back of the old Meyers home grew larger and larger.

A few years ago, when all of the neighbors thought Frank Myers had given up "that crazy idea of building a house out of that pile of stones," he started to sort them and placed them one by one into the foundation of the farm home that travelers from all over the world now come to see. In the foundation that extends above the ground level at the front of the house is Mr. Myers' name. The letters, F. E. MYERS, are four feet high and are made of black stones with a background of white and gray stones. On the other three sides of the house the foundation is made of a heterogeneous mixture of rocks—all sizes, colors, and shapes.

It took Mr. Myers and his hired man more than two years to build the house, which is 40 by 60 feet. The two men then spent three more years in building the barn, which also has a rock foundation.

There are three entrances to the house, all covered with porches. It is three stories high and is finished throughout with mahogany, birch, and birds-eye maple and hardwood floors. In the bedrooms on the second floor the closets are made of cedar, and clothes' chutes lead from the hallways of all three floors down to the laundry room in the basement where the washing machine and water pump are run by power. The house and barn are electrically lighted.

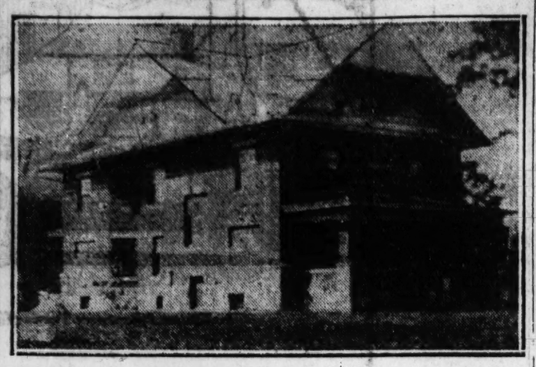
The barn is said to be one of the largest in the country, 60 by 100, with a 30 by 60 foot wing. All the feed grown on the farm of nearly 400 acres is stored in it. It holds 250 tons of hay and 60 tons of straw. The lower floor is so arranged that at least 120 head of cattle and an equal number of hogs can be housed, in addition to the stalls for ten horses. The building is well ventilated and lighted, and is built so that a man can stand in almost any part of the barn and see all corners and sides. Hay racks, feed bunks, boxes, and water tanks are all inside so that in the winter time Mr. Myers does not go outside of the building to feed and water his live stock.

Although the owner of the dream house is not a wealthy farmer, his home would not be out of place along Sheridan road in Chicago. By doing most of the work himself, the cost of the house was kept down to about $15,000 and the barn $20,000. Both have rock foundations, brick walls, and roofs made of fireproof shingles. These buildings would cost double the original cost today.

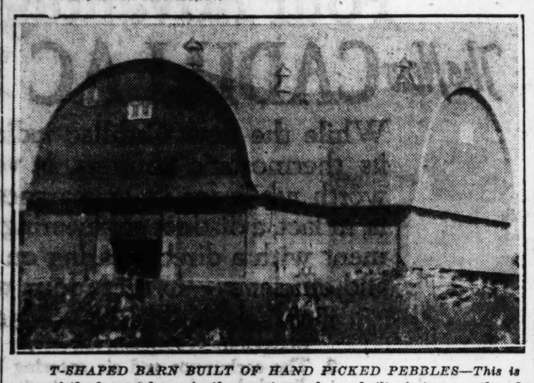
Mr. Myers started with his father's old farm of 160 acres, which he inherited, and has since added more and more land until he now owns a total of 395 acres.

The farm is located along the Chicago-New York air mail route, and Mr. Myers is paid $1,400 a year for a sixty acre field which is used as a landing field for the mail planes. He operates the lights at night to aid the pilots in landing.

A HOOSIER'S DREAM



COMBINATION FARM HOME, DANCE HALL, AND COMMUNITY HOUSE—It took Frank F. Myers forty years to gather the pile of pebbles, stones, and boulders that were used in making this house on his farm, three miles northeast of Wolcottville, Ind. He spent two years building the house, which cost $15,000.



T-SHAPED BARN BUILT OF HAND PICKED PEBBLES—This is one of the largest barns in the country and was built of stones gathered by Frank F. Myers, Wolcottville, Ind., at a cost of $20,000. It holds 250 tons of hay and all the other crops grown on a 400 acre farm.

Glenn Ellyn Announces First Flower Show

The Glen Ellyn Garden club will hold its first annual flower show at Mrs. G. M. Kendall's home in Glen Ellyn, Ill., next Thursday between 2 and 8 o'clock, according to the announcement made yesterday by Mrs. J. P. Kelley. Premiums will be awarded to flower growers who exhibit the most artistic winter bouquets, bowls, and baskets of mixed flowers, bowls and vases of single varieties, and display of single flowers in vases.

The contest, which is designed to stimulate interest in growing flowers around homes and in parks, is open to all flower gardeners in Glen Ellyn. The garden club was organized the first of this year to stimulate interest in beautifying gardens. The proceeds of the first fall flower show will be used to improve the park in the village square of the business district.

MOTORDOM

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

G. M. WILLIAMS, president of the Nordyke and Marmon company, has announced the appointment of Homer McKee of Indianapolis, one of the country's leading merchandisers, as vice president of Marmon to succeed E. S. Gorrell, resigned. H. H. Brooks, under whose sales leadership Marmon has shown such marked progress, has been made director of sales for the company. Mr. McKee will retain the presidency and management of his advertising corporation in Indianapolis.

Louis Geyler, president of the company at 2635 Michigan avenue, which bears his name, and one of the pioneers of the automobile industry in Chicago, has retired from active service. He severed his connections with the Gardner and Case companies last week and will devote his entire attention to his radio interest as director of the Electrical Research laboratories, 2500 Cottage Grove avenue. Jan. 1, 1905, saw the entrance of Mr. Geyler into the automobile field. His first venture was with the Autocar under the firm name of Geyler and Levy. In 1907, the partnership was dissolved and Geyler took on the Stevens-Duryea with a salesroom on Michigan avenue. In 1909 he erected the building at 2519 Michigan avenue and took on Hudson, moving to 2500 Michigan avenue in 1914. In 1918 he acquired the Dort account and in 1920 added Stephens to his line. In 1924 he assumed the wholesale distribution for Gardner and Case. It is understood that Gardner will be handled in Chicago now as a factory branch.

Directors of Paige-Detroit declared a dividend of 35 cents a share on the no-par value stock at their meeting last week, in addition to the regular dividend on the preferred. President Jewett declared that conditions for the year are unusually favorable. The factory output in August was nearly double that of the corresponding month a year ago.

Reports from C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors company, set a new monthly sales record for August at 10,675 cars. The total volume of business ran 24 per cent beyond the best previous month since the company was founded.

Fifteen Makes Are Now Standard in Used Car Business

BY THE end of 1926, used car stocks of the majority of automobile dealers will include less than 15 different makes of automobiles. This is the belief voiced by officials of the National Automobile Dealers association, which arises from surveys conducted this year, in which it was found that many dealers already are restricting their purchases of used cars to a very few lines of cars. Dealers generally will not go outside of their own and popular and handled lines.

Careful restriction of the makes of cars that will be accepted by an automobile dealer's used car stock is one of the prime essentials of building up a successful used car business, according to association authorities. It will have the effect of causing the dealer to refuse some deals in which he would deliver a new car, but it also will enable the dealer thereby to refuse new car business that he would obtain only at the expense of a large loss on the used car accepted.

for some distance and a bump in the road may jolt it free. The driver may experiment with the car for a while and perhaps the wire will establish contact, only to break it later. This process will be repeated until the nut of the terminal is tightened.

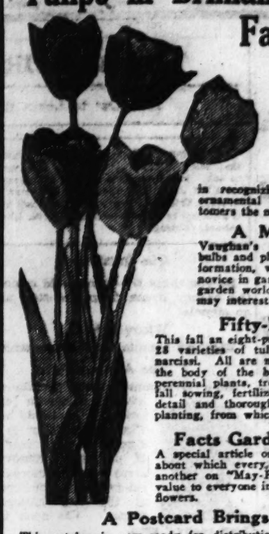
Tulips in Brilliant Color in This Fall Garden Book

Vaughan's Bulb Catalog Takes on New Splendor

FREE TO YOU



VAUGHAN'S Seed Store has published for 1925 a fall catalog which every garden lover will find a valued addition to his library. This house for several years has led in recognizing the greatly increased interest in ornamental gardening, and interpreting for its customers the newest tendencies in gardening art.

A Magazine of Gardening

Vaughan's Catalogs are not mere lists of seeds, bulbs and plants, but are magazines of gardening information, which give complete instructions for the novice in gardening, as well as the latest news of the garden world and all meritorious introductions which may interest the most advanced garden makers.

Fifty-Five Colored Plates

This fall an eight-page color section illustrates in true colors 28 varieties of tulips, 12 of peonies, 9 of iris and 9 of narcissi. All are named and priced at special figures. The body of the book are complete list of all fall and spring perennial plants, trees, shrubs, vines, evergreens, seeds for fall sowing, fertilizers, insecticides and tools, described in detail and thoroughly illustrated. It is a manual of all planting, from which nothing has been left out.

Facts Garden Makers Should Know

A special article on "The Embargo on Bulbs" gives facts about which every garden maker should be informed, and another on "May-Flowering Tulips" will be found of great value to everyone interested in these most brilliant of bulbous flowers.

A Postcard Brings It to Your Door

This catalog is now ready for distribution and will be mailed upon request, or may be obtained at our retail store, 10-12 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

A Rainbow Garden of Tulips, $2.00

In the May flowering tulips, with their huge blossoms on stately stems, we find the supreme expression of color. No other flower can compare with the wide range of brilliant and delicate tints and shades which is offered by the Darwin, Cottage Breeder types. They will provide a brilliant spring show in any garden.

50 bulbs, 5 each of 10 varieties, postpaid 300 miles, for $2.00

Now Is Time to Sow Lawn Seed

Sowing lawn seed in the autumn, from August 20 through September, is recommended by U. S. Department of Agriculture experts. Cold nights, fall rains and short days are ideal for grass growing. Our mixtures contain recleaned seed of the best scientific blend for lasting lawn. Sow 1 lb. to 300 square feet for a new lawn, half as much to repair old lawn.

Chicago Parks Mixture: ½ lb., 30c; lb., 55c; 5 lbs., $2.65; 10 lbs., $4.75. Orders for $2.00 postpaid to 300 miles.

50 Iris Plants for $2.50

Iris plants, transplanted now, will surely bloom next year. We offer 50 plants of 5 varieties, our selection, for $2.50, prepaid, to 300 miles.

Water Flowering Narcissi for Christmas Flowers

They will come to flower in bowls of gravel and water, or fibre and water; and produce flowers for the holidays. Only large bulbs produce good flowers; the larger the finer. Fancy bulbs, 60 cents per dozen; mammoth bulbs, (14 ctm.) 70 cents per dozen; jumbo bulbs (15 ctm.), 85 cents per dozen. These prices are postage prepaid; cash and carry, 10 cents per dozen less.

Enthusiastic Preference

Whole-hearted approval has greeted the New Oakland Sixes from the start. Good words have travelled from lip to lip—now the demand for the cars is spreading like wild-fire. And with good reason:

The New Oaklands are beautiful beyond comparison. They reveal unequaled performance qualities. They incorporate more than 100 improvements including Air Cleaner, Oil Filter, Four-Wheel Brake refinements and, above all, the Harmonic Balancer, an exclusive feature which renders the Oakland engine unmatched in freedom from vibration—yet prices are $70 to $350 lower.

Is it any wonder that buyers are enthusiastic? Is it any wonder that they are forgetting Fours and other Sixes? Is it any wonder that they are placing orders for this car in a volume which is taxing Oakland's capacity to supply?

Rickenbacker Announces New Coupe-Roadster Model

There is in this new car a snugness, an intimacy, a sense of luxurious isolation unachievable in any other model.

Rickenbacker powered, this Coupe-Roadster makes fact of the magic carpet of fable.

There is a utilitarian side, too. Thousands of men use cars in their business to make other cities closer—the day longer. This car is ideal for conference en route. If alone, it is less lonely. It has ample dust and rain proof carrying capacity.

For those occasions which call for giving the other fellow a lift, there is hidden in the trim after-deck comfortable seating capacity for two passengers.

This car is distinctive—individual—exceptional.

Rickenbacker automobiles—Sixes and Vertical 8's—possess distinctive qualities valued by the discriminating buyer.

The sweet silence, the effortless ease with which its tremendous power is applied—the quickness of acceleration and the amazingly smooth yet rapid deceleration—these are qualities which are appreciated only by those whose past experience has been with fine automobiles.

This car makes its irresistible appeal to persons who derive pleasure from super-performance.

If you appreciate intrinsic value and judge a car not by its price but by its high performance—

If you want the best for the least money—then you belong in a Rickenbacker.

Weakness prevailed in the hog market as values dropped to the lowest point since the middle of the previous week, the day's top and average standing lowest in ten days at $13.25 and $11.80, respectively. Unevenness yesterday ranged from steady to 40c lower, only a small showing of prime 275@300 lb butchers at $12.85 equaling Friday's levels, due to scarcity. Quotations are largely 25@40c under the close of last week, under weights sharing in the full price cuts, owing to the marked narrowing of eastern demand. Shipments from Chicago last week at 22,000 were second smallest since October, 1922. Total arrivals yesterday at 2,000 were among the smallest on record. Market closed at the bottom, although only pen holders and inferior hogs remained unsold.

Last week's hog receipts, which totaled largest in over a month at 111,500, averaged about 252 lbs in weight, equal to the heaviest weekly average since September, 1925. Arrivals were 34,400 smaller than the coresponding week a year ago and 33,900 smaller than two years ago. Prices averaged $12.00, within 10c of the lowest weekly average since week ending May 9, but show $2.40 advance over a year ago and $3.55 gain over two years ago.

With the exception of a few high priced specialties in heavy beef steers, which were within 15@25c of the highest since 1920, general cattle market declined $1.00@1.50 under excessive supplies last week. Receipts at 62,200 were largest since January and 10,600 larger than previous week. Over 35 per cent of arrivals were range cattle, which spread prices to the widest point on record. Fairly good western cattle were obtained around $7.00 and common steers of beef merit as low as $6.00, while highly finished 1,457@1,546 lb steers reached $16.10, within 15c of the highest in nearly five years. Average cost of good beef cattle at $11.35 was lowest since June, and $1.15 under the first week in August.

Sheep Receipts Increase.

Liberal marketing of western lambs swelled last week's sheep receipts to 117,100, the largest since last October and 29,100 greater than previous week's arrivals, but only 7,600 more than the corresponding week a year ago, when Monday was a holiday. The quota of feeding lambs was unusually large, but met broad demand and additional advances raised best 60 pounders to $15.75 Wednesday, a new high mark for the season. Best fat westerns reached $15.65, highest since July 31, while top natives brought $15.50. Fat aged sheep and yearlings closed on par with a week ago.

Monday, Sept. 7, is a holiday at the Chicago Stock Yards and all stock arriving that day will be counted in Tuesday's receipts which are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 35,000 hogs and 26,000 sheep. Next week's receipts are estimated at 58,000 cattle, 115,000 hogs and 95,000 sheep, against 70,385 cattle, 131,919 hogs and 119,999 sheep a year ago.

WHEAT DECLINES; HEAT HELPING PRICES OF CORN

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

December wheat sold down to $1.49¾, and all deliveries were at a new low on the present downturn as the result of free selling by scattered longs who were evening up for over Labor day, and pressure from houses that usually act for a leading local operator. Buying under $1.50 was of a good class, and stop orders were not large, and the finish was on a strong rally with net losses of ⅝@1¾c. Corn showed independent strength with September ⅜c lower and deferred deliveries ⅜@½c higher. Oats were unchanged to ⅜c lower, and rye off 1¼@1½c.

Selling Pressure Heavy.

Considering the news and the heavy pressure net losses in wheat for the week were not large, 2⅜@3c. Rye was 2¼@2½c lower as compared with the previous week. Coarse grains, however, were stronger, with corn 3⅞@4¾c, and oats 1⅛@1¼c higher. Lard finished 15c higher to 12½c lower, with ribs 10@22½c and bellies 10@50c lower.

Bear Sentiment in Wheat.

Bearish sentiment predominated in wheat, and there was a general expectation of a sharp decline on Tuesday as the result of large receipts in the northwest and prospects for a good increase in the visible supply, as Minneapolis and Duluth stocks gained 1,831,000 bu for the week. The buying of December under $1.50 was of a better class than the selling, with offerings absorbed on resting orders, and there was some buying that was regarded as short covering by leading eastern shorts. With a holiday ahead many of the local element evened up at the last.

There was little encouragement in the foreign demand for wheat, with sales of 200,000 bu in all positions, including some hard winter from Montreal. Liverpool closed ¾d lower. Winnipeg was off ⅜@⅝c for the day, with some buying of futures by exporters. Minneapolis showed more strength than Chicago and was ⅝c lower, with some selling of December there against purchases here.

Fear Corn Crop Damaged.

While the weather map showed rains in parts of the northwest and Iowa, and the forecast was for unsettled and cooler over the holiday, there was aggressive buying of the deferred deliveries by strong commission houses. There was a sharp dip at one time, but the close was well toward the top. There was a material increase in the complaints of damage to the new crop which came from a wider territory than heretofore. Scattered longs sold September.

Bulk of the trade in oats was in spreading between the various deliveries, with the market influenced largely by the action of other grains. The seaboard reported 100,000 bu sold for export.

Foreigners were credited with buying rye futures, but trade in the aggregate was not large, and prices declined in sympathy with wheat.

Provision Market Dull.

Trade in provisions was limited, and the market easily influenced. Commission houses were on the selling side and the finish was 5@10c lower on lard with ribs unchanged to ¾c lower, and bellies unchanged to 5c lower. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date is 3,-668,000 against 3,779,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 300,000 bu wheat, including some hard winter at Montreal and 100,000 bu oats were reported at the seaboard. Chicago handlers sold 15,000 bu wheat, 10,000 bu corn, 47,000 bu oats, 3,000 bu rye, and 3,000 bu barley to the domestic trade, with 50,000 bu corn sold to ro to store. Deliveries on September contracts were 172,000 bu wheat, 70,000 bu corn, 525,000 bu oats and 230,000 bu rye.

Basis on winter wheat here was firm at 15 @17c over September for No. 2 red and 3@5c over for No. 2 hard. Premiums at Kansas City showed little change. Outside markets were 1@3c lower. At Minneapolis choice springs were unchanged and other kinds 1@2c lower as compared with September, with majority of buyers holding off the expected large receipts on Tuesday.

Cash corn was in fair demand, with the basis on contract grades little changed. No. 3 mixed brought 1¼c over, yellow 1¼@1½c, and white 1¼@1½c over September. Outside markets were ½c higher to 3c lower, with Milwaukee showing the most weakness.

Offerings of cash oats were small, and elevator interests fair buyers at 1¼@2c over September for No. 2 white and 1@1¾c over for No. 3 white.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 30 cars; corn, 131 cars; oats, 63 cars; rye, 3 cars; barley, 21 cars.

COTTON PRICES DECLINE

Trade in cotton was relatively light, Chicago being the only American exchange open. Hedging pressure was in evidence and with expectations of a material increase in the southern selling next week prices declined readily and the finish was at net losses of 12@28 points. All American exchanges will be closed Monday. Prices follow:

FORMAN GUARANTEED BONDS
Go beyond all existing standards to mark a New Era of Investment Safety and Profit

IT was hardly to be thought possible that safer investments than Forman First Mortgage Bonds would ever be found. Here was the safest security known—first mortgages on high grade, income-earning real estate, further protected by the Forman Plan, under which no investor ever lost a dollar of either principal or interest in forty years.

Yet George M. Forman and Company have now gone beyond all known standards to procure a final safeguard for Forman Bonds—the unconditional guarantee of prompt payment by a leading, conservative, and entirely independent, old-line insurance company. Such impregnable safety places Forman Guaranteed Bonds in a unique category beyond all possibility of loss.

Of further significance is the fact that Forman Guaranteed Bonds carry decidedly attractive interest rates, and hence inaugurate new profit possibilities for the most conservative investors.

New Safety Factor for Investors

June of this year saw a new era of investment safety when Bristol & Company introduced a definite, binding insurance company guarantee on Chicago Real Estate Bonds.

BRISTOL Insured BONDS
Complete and binding guarantee by leading independent insurance companies removes last possible element of risk. This symbol should be familiar to all investors.

This guarantee—the first of its kind ever placed on Chicago Real Estate Bonds—gives you, the investor, absolute protection against loss of principal or interest. It eliminates all need of investigation on your part. This has been done for you, not only by our own organization, but by the staff appraisers, lawyers and mortgage experts of the insurance companies. Their guarantee on the bond is your assurance that the issue is a safe investment for your funds.

Guarantee Proves Bond Safety

Obviously, only a bond issue of extremely high character could merit the guarantee of a conservative, entirely independent insurance organization. This guarantee is final and conclusive proof that Bristol Bonds are ultra-conservative loans, secured by property whose income provides ample margin in excess of greatest annual interest charges and principal prepayments—safeguarded in every manner known to modern mortgage banking.

Guarantee is Optional

The guarantee on Bristol Bonds is optional with the investor. When unguaranteed, Bristol Bonds yield 6½% and 7%. When guaranteed, the yield is 6% and 6½%. The ½% difference is the premium paid to the insurance company. In either case the investor receives identically the same bond, protected by the same stringent Bristol safeguards.

Investigate Now

The demand for Bristol Bonds—both insured and uninsured—makes it advisable that reservations for September investment be made at once. The coupon below will bring you full details.

We Invite Inquiries Concerning Our Bank References

Cross-examine before you invest.

The ablest investors cross-examine their investment house as well as the bonds they buy.

They determine its resources, its reputation, the character and ability of its officers, the strength of its banking connections.

These are the basic factors underlying sound investments.

Investors are invited to cross-examine and to judge the resources, personnel, banking connections, and general reputation of this house.

Such cross-examination precedes—and insures—wise investment.

MOTOR SHARES FEATURE ACTIVE STOCK SESSION

The Chicago and New York stock exchanges, the Chicago board of trade, and other leading commodity markets, and the banks will be closed tomorrow—Labor day.

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Last.	Net chge.
20 railroads	84.57	83.99	84.40+	.50
20 industrials	158.83	158.23	158.70+	.71
40 stocks	121.60	121.08	121.50+	.61

New York, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Exceptionally heavy trading for a pre-holiday session characterized today's brief session of the stock market, which continued the recovery begun on Thursday. Total sales were in excess of half a million shares, despite the absence of many large traders.

Low priced motors were again prominent in the upturn. Heavy buying of Nash-Marmon common sent that stock up over three points to a new high record of 65, while the preferred, recording an even larger gain, crossed 92 to a new peak. Dodge Bros. "A" was bid up over a point to 28, where it was still three points under the year's high. Noah Motors jumped nearly eight points on two sales. Other motors moved within rather narrow and irregular limits.

Public utilities also presented several points of strength. International Telephone was bid up nearly four points to 53, Radio Corporation closed more than two points higher at 57, and gains of a point or more were recorded by Brooklyn Edison, Electric Power and Light certificates, Montana Power, Philadelphia Company, Third Avenue Railway, and West Penn Power. Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit and Manhattan guaranteed certificates broke through to new high levels for the year.

Harvester Bid Up to 129¼.

International Harvester was bid up nearly five points to 129¼, the highest price in five years. Certainteed Products responded to reports of heavily increased earnings by advancing over two points to a new high for the year at 56. Other conspicuous industrial strong spots were Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies common and preferred, Coca Cola, Du Pont, Fleischmann, General Baking, General Electric, Postum Cereal, and Westinghouse Air Brake, all up 1¼@6 points.

In the rail group, low and middle priced carriers attracted the largest speculative following. St. Paul issues were again taken in large blocks, the common touching 9¼ and the preferred 17¼, overnight gains of about a point each. Gulf, Mobile and Northern common and preferred attained new peak prices at 36¼ and 109¼, respectively. Pittsburgh and West Virginia common, which is expected to benefit through increased shipments of bituminous coal, showed a net gain of 1¾ at 76½.

Demand Sterling Shows Recovery.

Foreign exchanges moved irregularly higher. Demand sterling climbed to nearly $4.84⅝, and French francs held steady just below 4.69c. Italian lira held firm around 4c. Norwegian kroner rallied about 12 points to around 21.47c, but Danish kroner fell back nearly 20 points to 25.08c.

The weekly statement of the New York Clearing house revealed the heavy demand for funds for over the holiday Monday, a deficit in reserve being shown. This amounted to $18,517,270, against an excess reserve a week ago of $380,540, making a decrease in surplus of $18,897,810. Demand deposits decreased $33,247,000 time deposits dropped $10,450,000, and loans and discounts increased $1,227,000.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

While price changes were somewhat irregular in the local unlisted securities market, the majority of issues showed improvement.

Acme Steel company new made a new high at 64. Keystone Steel and Wire common was in demand at 45, with practically no stock appearing in the market, while the preferred was wanted at 105. After selling at 23, Standard Cap and Seal was wanted at 25. Butler Bros. moved up to transactions between 34⅛@35, with stock later offered at 36⅛. A better demand was noted for the Chicago Package issues, the full voting stock being wanted at 29¼, with offerings at 29¾; the nonvoting shares were quiet at 10@30; the preferred was again wanted at 100.

Kellogg company rose two points to 80 bid without attracting sellers near the current level. Interstate Iron and Steel was wanted at 97, with small lots available at 100. The common changed hands between 36 and 40. American Seating reached a new high, selling at 190. Stock was later offered at this price, with bids of 180.

North Continent Utilities common was wanted at 6. The preferred was freely offered at 95. Interstate Public Service prior lien preferred sold up from 95½ to high sales around 99, closing in somewhat better demand at 97, with offerings at 100. Central Indiana Power preferred was easier, stock being offered at 90, with buyers at 89.

In the public utility group American Public Utilities common declined sharply to 86. Little interest was shown in the participating preferred at 75½@79½. The prior lien was in better demand at 88½, up 1½ points. Transactions in Continental Gas and Electric ranged between 134 and 141. It closed steady at 138 bid, 142 asked. Illinois Power and Light preferred advanced fractionally to 96 bid, 97 asked. Although 83 was freely bid for North American Light preferred—a point and a half improvement—it failed to attract sellers.

Among the bank stocks Continental and Commercial National moved up a point to 260 bid, 267 asked. National Bank of the Republic continued reactionary, stock being offered for sale at 210, with best bids around 205. Central Trust Company of Illinois continued stronger at 202@204, a further gain of 2 points. Union Trust was also 2 points better, 945 being bid, with small lots available at 955. After selling at 562, State Bank of Chicago was wanted at this price, with offerings at 570. Numerous bids of 518 were noted for First National—an advance of about 3 points.

No Car meets the Better BUICK in value per dollar - and here's

THE Better Buick steps far ahead of all previous standards of motor car performance. A wealth of new engineering features lifts this better motor car even higher than any previous Buick in those qualities which go to create value, power—speed—economy—and long life.

A few of the many 1926 improvements which add this value and attractiveness to the Better Buick, in such great measure, are these:

75 Horsepower!

The Buick Valve-in-Head engine has been made still more efficient by Buick engineering skill. The Master Valve-in-Head engine now delivers 75 and more horsepower. And there is 60 and more in the Standard models.

Take a Better Buick out and acquire a thorough understanding of what this means to you. You will discover a new power—power to take the worst grades in high gear. Power to get away first in traffic. Speed instantly! With no sacrifice of the economical gasoline consumption always typical of Buick.

Triple-Sealed Engine!

And this new Buick power is protected. Three new seals for the famous Buick sealed Chassis result in decidedly longer engine life, noticeably lower operating costs.

One Seal—an Air Cleaner—cleans all abrasive dirt and grit from the air that goes into the engine. It reduces cylinder wear—saves the expense of piston ring replacement and cylinder regrinding.

Another Seal—a Gasoline Filter—cleans the gasoline, stopping dirt at another point of entry.

And the Third Seal—an Oil Filter—removes dirt and foreign substances from the oil. It eliminates the wear that loosens and destroys engine bearings. Instead of changing oil every few hundred miles, now a Buick owner need change it only five or six times a year.

4 and 2 Door Sedans!

Real Sedans with Fisher Bodies. Upholstery and fittings according to Buick's luxurious standards. Buick builds for the permanent satisfaction of Buick owners and for high resale value after many years. Cars of beauty and distinction ..... four doors or two ..... staunchly built ..... real sedans ..... at "coach prices."

Duotone in Duco!

New beauty! The latest, smartest, most striking color and finish combination for motor cars. Buick Duotone in Duco, and Duco colors also insure a fine looking motor car for years, without yearly refinishing expense!

Safe Night Driving!

The Better Buick introduces the Controllable Beam Headlight, with the control on the steering wheel. This Buick improvement is legal in every state. It furnishes, constantly, a flood of soft, searching light on the roadway for you, without glare in the eyes of the approaching driver, and without any need for dimming. Safer, more comfortable night driving!

Light Pedal Clutch!

Buick's new sawtooth, ten plate multiple disc clutch has 212 square inches of driving surface as against 30 to 80 inches in the average single plate type. Buick could use the single plate clutch and cut the cost in half. But it uses this better type to eliminate trouble and adjustments and for easy pedal action. Only on the most expensive cars will you find its equal.

Lower Prices!

And while Buick has raised Buick quality and performance even higher than before, it also has been able to make substantial reductions in Buick prices. The savings made possible by big volume, by unparalleled factory efficiency and by 21 years of experience in building better motor cars go directly to Buick owners.

You might be tempted to spend a few dollars less than the low price of the Better Buick—

And thereby deprive yourself of many hundreds of dollars worth of extra value. This car raises the buying power of every one of your dollars, for no car can meet the Better Buick in value delivered for the money you invest.

Woman's Section

ONCE MORE THE GLASS OF FASHION REFLECTS THE MOULD OF FORM

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Seamingly, things have changed. Making a frock for one's self used to rank in outlay of energy and in imperious demand for talent with preparing sliced bananas for dessert. Now all this has changed. Any woman who undertakes one of these newest creations has to be able to find herself around in the most complicated patterns. For these frocks are often made in a dozen different sections, and their entire character is dependent upon intricate seaming.

Now the molded line which is the salient characteristic of the autumn modes is not absolutely new. Last year about this time Patou developed it with some emphasis, and I remember remarking at the time that here was a silhouette with a future. The present season has certainly justified such humble prediction of mine, for virtually all of the great French couturiers have come out with some version of the molded bodice and the flared skirt. Among such editions the princess type finds a prominent place and, although here is not the princess of twenty years ago, one has to concede that it comes down in the line royal.

Now that it is established among us, will it win? Will the line of fashion once more be synonymous with the mould of form? Or will the bolster case triumph in the courts of the mode? There is a bit of contention about this point, and quite a few of our New York fashion experts express skepticism as to a widespread acceptance of this more elaborate styling. They say the straight simple line is become a habit with the American woman and that it will take more than Paris to break its hold upon us.

As a matter of fact, too, it must be remembered that Paris herself has not departed definitely from the straight line. By no means has she burned her bridges. And among these newer models with their molded corsage and their complicated seaming one finds many examples of the familiar silhouette, broken only by the customary flare at the hem line.

Whatever the verdict concerning this fashion innovation, one may entertain the soothing thought that the basque of this present season is by no means the basque of the eighties. It is not going to requisition any different type of corseting, except perhaps a more disciplinary brassiere. No, for our modern molded corsage is—let us hasten to say it—subtle. It fits the figure without taking the public into any confidence as to why it fits.

Well, well, the vise is a creature of such frightful mien as to be hated needs but to be seen, et cetera. The one question is whether we shall make good on the quotation by first enduring, then pitying, then embracing. And this question applies not only to the bodice of our new autumn creations. Then, too, is the collar. The great French modistes have made this detail also rather viselike. Often there is a genuine choker. In virtually all cases the neckline lifts perceptibly in the back and fits there snugly.

One doubts much if the American woman is going to embrace the viselike collar. There is something ineradicable in our temperament which clings to the low neckline and which makes us prefer exposing any shortcomings of our throat to adopting a screen of concealment. We shall therefore be subdued only to the point of adopting the new V line which hugs the neck in the back and adheres in the front to that old principle of bold publicity.

Whatever be our reception of the new lines, we shall probably be more docile in the matter of fabrics. The first and most important of the autumn materials is velvet. It is so important that you can hardly go wrong if you wear it morning, noon, and night. Frocks and hats, separate coats and wraps of ensemble costumes—all testify to this universal appetite. And what gorgeous tones they have chosen for this sumptuous texture! Red in Corinthian or pontiff or garnet tone, moss green, violet and purple—these are three of the leading tints. Also, black velvet is well represented. Indeed, black—as well as black and white—has come in for more attention this season than the spring wave of color led us to expect.

The standing figure at the left sums up ably the tendencies which I have mentioned. This charming dinner gown from Molyneux, which is in the vanguard of the Paris army of fashions, is achieved of chiffon velvet shading from the deep pontiff red to a rose pink. Here, you see, the more complicated cutting of which I have spoken is ably presented. In the back only there is a yoke and the seaming that defines the raised waistline merges in the back into a panel. The sides express a circular fullness that contrasts with the plain surface of the front. The only ornamentation used is a rhinestone buckle with a flash of red stones. Last of all, do not overlook the downward dip of the waistline in front—a movement characteristic of the autumn.

The prominence of velvet is hinted first at the left in a velvet beret of cardinal red designed by Suzy. Another proof is afforded by an ombre velvet dinner gown from Molyneux, which also demonstrates the new silhouette with its molded top and flaring skirt. Another velvet—this one a light brown brocaded in deeper brown—adds its weight of testimony to the velvet mode. At last in the center we are afforded relief in a simple little frock of black artificial satin set off with silver stitching and with red suede cloth touched with silver. An afternoon frock from Miler Soeurs in pencil blue crepe Elizabeth provides the jumper effect by means of clever draping, and, last, a model adapted from Anna shows a tunic development of the apron. This frock is of moss green charmeen trimmed with silver braid, silver buttons, and with ruffles of ecru kid.

ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES

Another French model that shows you not only the importance of velvet but also the fact that fashion is as fashion seams—we find it in the second standing figure from the left. This also is an imported model, and its medium is a light brown chiffon velvet brocaded in a darker brown. Here again we find the panel in the back, and this time the panel undertakes on its own all chores of fullness. Let it be said right here, in fact, that amplitude in the back is retained this autumn and, although this mode is not countenanced to the extent observed in the flares, it is decidedly a part of the new fashions. The front of this model is perfectly flat and the line from neck to hem is broken by a wide sash of gold cloth tied in a bow.

Belts and girdles are decidedly admitted to polite society. There are more of them going around than for some time past. Narrow belts, often restrained to back or front, are especially esteemed. So also are wide girdles swathing the hips tightly and providing a good starting point for the flared skirt. In the center of our page we find in a French model of black artificial satin—and, by the way, they have as many new names for this as they have for New York apartment houses—we find an autumn model especially suitable for debutante or college woman. Essentially youthful is the peasant creed of this gown with its brilliant embroidery of silver thread trimming the sleeves, encircling the hips and finishing the sleeves. The girdle is of red suede cloth bound with silver and admitting a silver cutout design at the left side. Cuffs and binding of the neckline exploit the same garnet suede cloth with its gleam of silver.

The jumper! Ah, that's entirely too quiet and self-controlled a phrase for that athletic two piece frock! I am thinking of heading a movement for renaming it the leaper. For that's just what it has done—leaped into every domain of autumn attire. It seems to me, indeed, that there are more elaborate versions of the two piece mode than ever before. Thus, for the youthful wearer we encounter a jumper of gold and green brocaded velvet topping a skirt of plaited green chiffon. Only one of a multitude of such offerings!

Second from the right a Miler creation proves to us that the jumper effect may often be obtained without benefit of scissors. For, although this charming afternoon frock has every appearance of the two piece mode, it is in reality made in one. Clever draping of the bodice over the skirt is responsible for the illusion, and it is this kind of draping which is assigned such a prominent role in our new modes. The whole costume is created of pencil blue Elizabeth crepe, and the artist has shaded her sketch only so that you may see clearly the points of self-material sewed to the bodice. More points extend over the skirt, which ends in self-bound scallops. The one touch of color is supplied by two cerise velvet roses at the waistline.

The apron—this is almost as essential to a woman of fashion as to a woman of the gas range. Still this detail is retained as a means of contributing the flare, and still the designers find a thousand new ways to fashion it. The tunic is not nearly so much in the spotlight as heretofore, and when it does occur it is apt to take on the physiognomy of an apron.

Illustrative of such policy is the adaptation from Anna at the right. Here is a delightful frock of moss green charmeen trimmed with silver braid, silver buttons, and entertaining a vestee made of ruffles of the softest, most pliable of kid. The last named is in a soft tone of ecru and the same kid ruffles are sustained for the sleeves.

On the seated figure at the extreme left you will find a velvet hat of cardinal red designed by Suzy. We didn't put it here haphazard. It's a message of hope. It shows you that this season we are not to be doomed to those everlasting high crowned and narrow brimmed affairs which have proved so trying to many of us. No, the autumn has ushered in various becoming shapes, many made of the becoming velvet, and among such shapes the draped turban known as the beret—the same represented here—holds an important post.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Bettina Bedwell.

FASHION BEATS JACK FROST TO AUTUMN REDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris is seeing red these days. The police are busy putting the official Reds out of the city, and the couturiers are diligently painting the map of the mode in all colors of red.

Red, if one may pass judgment in the middle of the autumn openings, is going to be plastered all around the smart sections of Paris this winter. Fortunately it is not the communistic red, nor is it the shade that is known to excite the animosity of turkey gobblers and bulls. No, indeed. That sort of red is altogether too obvious and banal for the Paris couturiers.

The new reds are soft rose reds, deep rich burgundies, bordeau—the shade of vin ordinaire, and not the chateau vintages—and purplish reds that might have been inspired by the apoplectic complexions of alcoholic gentlemen.

These last, while not particularly alluring on the end of a bulbous nose, are really lovely in the soft new velvets and camel's hair woolens in which they come for dressmakers' purposes. They look very much like mutilated and cooked raspberries, with a sheen that the fabric gives them lending an allure quite irresistible.

Some of the houses consider this red suitable only for the sophisticated and develop it in draped and complicated afternoon and evening dresses and coats. Others come right out on the opposite platform and make it a color for the jeune fille, with plain gathered skirts and little straight bodices and long tight sleeves, finished with romantic lace cuffs.

In passing I should like to say that lace in little plaited jabots, in frills, in gilets, and in collars and cuffs has come in strong along with the vogue for red. Delicate, filmy laces are seen more often than any others.

Patou has scads of velvet and crêpe dresses with plaited lace jabots. Poiret uses lace for collars and cuffs. Martial et Armand make lace gilets and tricky little puff sleeves, and Agnès uses it for all of these purposes. Sometimes they leave the lace to shine in its natural beauty and sometimes they trick it out with encrustrations of metallic thread or colored embroidery. With any of the new reds it is especially beautiful and fitting.

Our first model is in the complexion red I have been telling you about, a red that stands out prominently in the collection of Doeuillet, Jean Patou, and others. Patou comes out boldly with the statement that he thinks this red, in velvet, makes the most ravishing gown a woman could possibly wear. That he is simply devastated with adoration when he looks at a gown of that color and fabric. He certainly likes it, for many of his choicest models are made of it.

Purple-red velvet is combined with copper embroidered lace.

Our model is one that shows what can be done with a simple afternoon dress of purplish red velvet, combined with cream lace, overlaid with encrustations of copper thread embroidery. This fock is one of the forward moving gowns that about half of the Paris couturiers continue to feature for autumn.

All of the flare is concentrated in the front of the skirt, in godets set in so flat they appear to be simply part of a circular piece. They are irregular at the lower edge, giving a fetching hemline and preventing the suffering that comes when a circular skirt that is intended to be straight at the bottom begins to sag. The thoughtful couturier provided for this sag in advance, making a virtue out of what is ordinarily considered a vice.

The back is simple and straight, without even the break of a belt, for the girdle of this frock ceases at the sides, circling the front only with its lace and copper splendor.

Burgundy red velvet with stitched bands of self-material.

A charming collar is made by twisting a length of copper embroidered lace around the circular neckline, and letting it fall to the waistline in a sort of informal jabot. Straight sleeves, with deep cuffs of embroidered lace, complete the frock.

Our second model is created in burgundy red, with the rich luster of the ruby, and, being in velvet, the material is itself so striking that the couturier decided to let line and fabric tell the tale, for there is not the smallest deviation from red velvet on this gown. Its only trimming consists of bands of self-material that are stitched flat and made as inconspicuous as possible.

Notice the abbreviation of the skirt. It barely covers the knee caps, and allows for no skittish motions. This is an accepted length for daytime clothes in the collections of Martial et Armand, Agnès and Lelong. Such a short skirt is mitigated by the overfull godets that are inserted at the sides of the front, fitted under a bias band of velvet placed in a curve extending just to the hips. That curve is clever, and gives a line that is extremely nice.

Velvet is this time combined with chiffon and copper brocade.

The severity of the narrow V neckline has also been alleviated by its band trimming that terminates in a loop at the lower edge, the tip of the V. This band is extended down the center back to the shoulder blades in back, forming a closing with a row of velvet covered buttons. Long tight sleeves are banded at the wrist with narrow bands of velvet.

Our third offering is still another version of the red and velvet vogue; this time the red is a coppery rouge that has more than a little bit of marron in it. It has been combined this time with a velvet and chiffon brocade in the same tone with narrow lines of copper thread shot through it.

The cut of the velvet slip is straight, with cap kimona sleeves that are intentionally allowed to flare a bit away from the arm, giving a line which Chanel is featuring extensively. Below this cap of velvet is inserted a sleeve that is a scanty leg o' mutton and made of the brocade. Brocade also edges the deep V neck and has long ends that are thrown about the neck in the form of a scarf. The full circular tunic that is placed on the skirt passes straight around the hip line in front and dips into a V to the knees in back.

Bordeau kasha duvetyne effectively employed with smart back flare.

Our last offering is another material—kasha duvetyne, a woolen duvetyne with a metallic thread passing through the weave. The color is bordeau red. The flare of this model is placed in the back, where it will be very smart this winter if you can judge by the number of couturiers who are showing it at the autumn fashion openings. Fan shaped insets of the material are set into diagonal slits in back, just at the hip line, flaring markedly toward the hem line.

The creator has also given a flare to the sleeves with fanshaped insets of material beginning just at the elbow, and caught into a band at the wrist. There are two side seams in the front and back sections of the dress body, these seams being separated by about one-half inch, and a narrow strip of dull gold cloth placed beneath, a little streamline device that you will see a lot of later on in the season. These decorated side-front seams form the only trimming that the front of the dress can boast about.

FACTS ABOUT GLASSES

by Antoinette Donnelly

Correcting Some Popular Superstitions and Errors About the Wearing of Spectacles.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]— An inscription in Florence reads: "Here lies Salvino Armato, Inventor of Spectacles. May God pardon him his sins." The last sentence is to be taken literally—not as the victim of frequent accidents to his glasses might interpret its meaning. The invention of spectacles was the work of a philanthropist and deserving of special reward.

It was in the year 1290 that Salvino Armato perfected his invention. Artists who lived long before that year, however, depicted saints with spectacles as a mark of age and erudition, which is possibly where the idea originated that glasses were a mark of age. This belief, unfortunately, is held by some few surviving persons who suffer eye strain rather than gamble on looking a day older.

The truth is, however, since so many children and young adults wear spectacles the superstition, for it is that, is outlived but for a few weak minded persons who insist upon clinging to an old belief.

Glasses, when needed, as a matter of fact, are one of the best preservers of a youthful appearance. Prolonged eye strain causes wrinkles to appear prematurely, and gives the countenance a strained, anxious, tired, drawn, cross look which is characteristic and is far more to be avoided from the point of view of appearance, than the slight disfigurement, if you insist upon calling it such, of glasses. Certain types of faces are enhanced by glasses.

Uncovering the Truth.

Dr. Walter B. Lancaster of Boston, Mass., in a pamphlet issued by the council on health and public instruction of the American Medical association, gives some interesting data on glasses.

The implication that glasses make the wearer old, he explains, dates back to the days when glasses were worn only to help poor sight, and when the vast majority of wearers were those who were suffering from "old sight," that is, whose power of focusing was so far impaired by age that they could no longer make the necessary adjustments for seeing near objects.

Now glasses are worn to relieve strain on the nervous system, to correct defects and prevent eye strain before the conditions get entirely out of reach.

It is not only such remote symptoms as headache, nervousness, exhaustion, bad temper, sleepiness, and the like that we wear glasses to cure or prevent, in Dr. Lancaster's opinion. There are many diseases of the eyes themselves that are caused or aggravated by lack of proper glasses, though all the time the patient may have been seeing well. The most conspicuous of these diseases are those associated with redness of the eyes and lids, myopia, or near sightedness, and cataract.

Sources of Trouble.

That glasses are a source of care, trouble, annoyance, and expense is admitted. Some of the other objections are not so well founded, the Boston specialist argues. When it is urged that they hurt the nose or the ears, it is the fault of improper fitting. And the way they are adjusted by the individual frequently causes discomfort that is blamed on the glasses.

Not all persons are designed to wear the same type of eyeglasses. When the lenses are thick, and especially where there is much astigmatism and where a slight error of adjustment of the lenses causes trouble, spectacles are better than eyeglasses, the specialist tells us. Any style of either eyeglass or spectacle that will not stay properly adjusted is bad. The material of which the frame is made should be strong and well tempered; never weak and flimsy.

"In order to get the intended optical effect, the eyes, when looking straight ahead, should look squarely through the optical centers of the lenses," says Dr. Lancaster, "or slightly above the centers, especially if the patient is tall and looks down more than up. But if one eye looks through its lens above and the other more or less below the center, as is the case when the glasses are tipped, one up and the other down, the result may be to cause eye strain. So may trouble be caused when the lenses are farther apart, or nearer together than the eyes are. If the lenses are weak, the last fault does not often cause perceptible trouble, but is better avoided. Sometimes a little departure from this rule is allowable in the interest of a better appearance, but only with the consent of the oculist. Sometimes it is intentionally ordered to relieve some muscular strain."

Close Fitting Lenses.

As a rule though, the lenses should be as near the eyes as possible. Dr. Lancaster offers several good reasons for this: the optical effect is better; the wearer is less likely to look around the glasses; he notices the rims less; they are less likely to be knocked off accidentally; the appearance is better—so much so that it often pays to have the lashes clipped a little when they are so long they touch the lenses when these are mounted as near as they ought to be. This contact of lashes with the glasses should always be avoided, because they soil the glass.

A common mistake our attention is called to by the Boston authority is tilting the glasses too far back at the top. They should be vertical or tipped slightly forward. There should not be a space between the lower edge of the lenses and the cheeks wide enough to admit a larger finger tip. It gives a bad appearance and is bad optically, as is any excessive tipping in any direction. The usefulness of well selected lenses may be destroyed if the wearer looks through them obliquely rather than squarely. The fact that one can see through them better when they are tilted, as may sometimes be true, does not prove the effect is a good one.

The wise oculist in selecting glasses for a patient does not in all cases choose the lenses with which the patient sees the best, but rather those with which he can use his eyes with the least strain. Large lenses have a special merit in ordinary cases. There are some who persist in looking over or around their glasses if they are small, and there are many who are annoyed by seeing the edges. For these, large lenses are more desirable. For ordinary cases the size that looks best is the one to select—neither too large nor too small.

Readjusting the Eyes.

In getting used to glasses, Dr. Lancaster advises that it be borne in mind that glasses are often ordered to make the eyes do their seeing in a different way. If glasses were given, as they easily could be, which did not make the eyes see differently, they would cause the wearer no trouble in getting used to them. On the other hand they would do no good if what was really needed was something to make the eyes change from a bad way to using them to a new and better way.

When a person gets a new pair of glasses which are either the first he ever wore, or which differ materially from what he has been wearing, the eyes have to adjust themselves in a different way from their confirmed habit. Sometimes the reason the new glasses are so hard to get used to is because they are wrong. The glasses should be inspected and their correctness verified before wearing. If, after a fair trial, they still seem wrong, do not hesitate to tell the one who prescribed them, and if necessary have a retest.

Remember the eye is a living thing, alive and active; that there is nothing more characteristic of living things than change. It is not to be wondered at that results obtained one day may not exactly tally with those found the next day, particularly in eyes that are irritated by strain, overuse, ill health or the like.

It is impossible to set a definite time and say all eyes should be examined every six months, or every other months, or any other period that will fit all cases. Some must come in a few days, others a few months, often a few years.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

VELOUR HATS ARE SMART.

FELT hats are still worn both for business and sport, but at some of the smart country club affairs velour hats are much seen. They come in all the late shades, such as pablo—a peach that shades into tan reseda, peppermint and apple green, petunia, purple and pansy, Copenhagen, Murillo and pencil blue, wet sand, pheasant, cinnamon and dark brown, Castillian and tes red, black and frost gray. Navy is seldom seen. The turn off the face hat is worn more now that the sun's rays are not so strong. Others turn up on the left side. Mushroom or turn down brims are not so good.

The crowns are plain and skull fitting and cut as illustrated. The piece coming over the front of the brim is bound with a narrow ribbon the color of the hat. The edge of the brim is not wired but just left raw. Little trimming is required, as the hats are so rich in themselves. The brims are short in the back, extending about one and one-half inch, so as to not interfere with the large fur collars worn on the coats.

The long haired silk beaver worn several years ago can be worn again this year. The crowns can be reshaped at shops where men's hats are reblocked.

Cut the crown off the brim one inch above the head size. If the crown is too shallow, a bias piece of willow or buckram can be sewed to the bottom to raise it the desired height. The crown should measure at least fifteen and one-half inches from front to back.

To make the brim, cut an inch wide bias band of willow large enough to go around the head. Allow one inch for lapping in the back. Wire this with a heavy frame wire. If the brim is large as they were worn when they were in style before, it can be cut. Begin in the back and pin the brim into the head band. Hold over a steaming tea kettle; the steam softens it and makes it easy to pull into shape. In the back have it curve up a little. On the left side, hold it in quite full so it will have the rounding effect needed for the smart turnup on that side. Across the front a little fullness is needed. On the right side it can be held in flat, as it turns down on that side. Lap it on right side back about one inch deep.

Arrange the trimming or end of ribbon to cover the joining. Trim with a moire grosgrain ribbon wide enough to cover the false bottom of crown. Make four loops of ribbon on the side crown and let the ends fall over the brim. One and one-half yards of ribbon are used.

The care of velour and beaver hats is the life of them. When the hat is finished, go all over it with a stiff brush such as is used on vegetables to raise the pile or nap. Sand paper is used for the same purpose. As a final touch to make it soft and fluffy, apply compressed air. This may be accomplished by holding it a few minutes before an air tube by which auto tires are filled. The same result may be gained with a small bicycle pump.

WONDERING.

DEAREST: Could it be that you were tired of me that you went away? Had I changed so in the last few years? Or is there another whose lips called you away from me so soon? I ask myself these questions over and over, only to arrive at no conclusion; all I am conscious of is that I long for you—yearn for the smile of a man whose heart will never grow old—and love you, my dearest.

Sometimes I dare to think you love me, but left me because you thought I loved another. Could it be that you thought I loved Will, dear old Will, who is as a brother to me? Why, I have told him all my joys and sorrows since, as children, we played together; he is my only confidant—he knows I love you.

Only one word from you and I will be content. I cannot believe my trust was wrongly placed. I can see those dear blue eyes of yours shining with affection for me, as I laughed and chatted gay nonsense for you; did you think I was a doll incapable of a deep affection? How little do you know me then. When I am with you I cannot but be gay and glad, for I can so easily forget the world and its sorrows within the clasp of your dear arms.

Darling, I cannot believe you don't care for me; you are too fine, too tender, to be false to a girl whose heart I am sure you know is yours.

All I ask is but to laugh with you, sorrow with you, and to share every sadness or gladness of my own with you.

Please write once again to your own

IN MR. NICKELDICK'S BED

WITH HIS BOOTS ON TOO.

BY Wm. DONAHEY.

...ed Mr. Nickeldick's breakfast to his bedroom.

MR. NICKELDICK'S colored cat Tilly was up before daylight. It was a great day for the colored cats, for it was the day of the Colored Cats' barbecue and picnic.

Tilly was extremely neat and there were many things she had to do before she could leave for the picnic.

Mr. Nickeldick had to have his breakfast, her lunch had to be packed, and all Mr. Nickeldick's meals had to be left ready, for she would be gone for the entire day.

When all the little things had been done, Tilly carried up Mr. Nickeldick's breakfast to his bedroom.

The Rabbit was sitting by a window in a crushed strawberry dressing gown.

"Tilly," he said, "I'm going to be most lonely today. I hate to be all alone in this big house—it's hard on one's spirits."

"Mistah Nickeldick, yo' all make me feel like bellowin', yo' all is so downish."

"Thank you for those kind words, Tilly," murmured Mr. Nickeldick.

"Yo' all will done find yo' meals set up fo' de day. Yo' dinnah is on de table. All yo' have to do is fo' to make a little fire under de pot of beans on de stove. There's a carrot loaf in de ice chest fo' yo' suppah, and ah will be home fo' to get yo' breakfast in de mo'nin'."

Mr. Nickeldick was just a little timid. He hated to be left alone, and when he heard Tilly leave for the picnic he was quite blue.

He wandered about the house and tried to be cheerful. He thought of all the funny jokes he had ever heard, but somehow he couldn't laugh at them.

"I think I'll go over and visit a bit with Billy Skittels. It's too dull around here," he muttered to himself.

It looked as though he was wearing a window sash around his fat neck.

He dressed in a stylish morning suit and set off for Billy Skittels'.

Billy Skittels' door was locked tight—no one was at home.

Mr. Nickeldick thought about going to call on the Sligs, but he remembered Mrs. Slig sometimes argued with the poker, so he preferred to be lonesome.

He started for the club, but he suddenly recalled that the place was to be closed for the day, as all the colored cat cooks and waiters were to be off for the barbecue and picnic.

"I'll go over to the store and sit awhile with the boys. There is always a gang of fellows loafing there," he said to himself.

It certainly was a dull day. The storekeeper was asleep on a cracker barrel and only two old rabbits sat out in front of the place. They were disgusting old fellows—they chewed tobacco and told coarse stories, so Mr. Nickeldick stayed only a few minutes.

"Well," he said, looking at his watch, "I'll take a little walk and then it will be time for dinner.". He strolled along the river bank for almost an hour and then cut across a field for home.

He noticed fresh tracks going up the walk toward the house.

"Some one has been here," he muttered. Then he stopped and stared.

The living room window was open—he trembled in his gaiters.

Cautiously he tiptoed up and peered over the window sill. A globe of gold fish had been knocked over—the fish were gone.

Mr. Nickeldick listened for a long time. Not a sound could he hear.

He quietly unlocked the front door and pushed it open with his cane.

No one was in sight, but a sofa pillow had been sat on.

Cautiously Mr. Nickeldick peered into the dining room. The table Tilly had left set for Mr. Nickeldick's dinner was a mess. A jar of pickels had been emptied on the floor. A dish of apple sauce had a jug of mustard sitting in the middle of it. Some one had wiped his mouth on the table cloth. Half a cookie lay on the phonograph.

With chattering teeth, Mr. Nickeldick looked into the kitchen. The ice chest doors were open. A cream bottle lay on its side in the open door, a puddle of cream under it. A carrot loaf was crumbled all over the floor. Six empty egg shells lay under the sink. Somebody had wiped his hands on the dish towel.

Mr. Nickeldick crept upstairs. A board squeaked under his feet—he turned and jumped down the stairs. He crawled into the clothes basket and drew a dirty sheet over his head. He listened for a long time, but not a sound could be heard except the beating of Mr. Nickeldick's heart.

At last he crawled out and tiptoed up the stairs again. The bedroom door was open—he peered in. A muddy pair of shoes hung over the footboard of the bed. Some one had gone to sleep in Mr. Nickeldick's bed with his boots on. A chair had been upset and one of the gold fish lay on the dresser. The figure in bed wore a crushed strawberry dressing gown. Mr. Nickeldick stepped a little closer and looked over the foot of the bed.

He could see one ear and a huge mouth. It was Johnny Wattels, the badger.

He had slipped on Mr. Nickeldick's favorite crushed strawberry dressing gown—he lay in Mr. Nickeldick's very own bed.

Mr. Nickeldick was too scared to be angry. He jumped downstairs and ran out into the yard, for he wanted to be as far away as possible from Johnny Wattel.

Johnny Wattel was a shady character. He never carried a handkerchief or washed his neck. He had a nasty temper, and it had been reported that several young rabbits had been last seen in Johnny's company.

Mr. Nickeldick sat out in the front yard and tried to think, but his ears twitched so violently he couldn't think, so he just sat and sat.

The afternoon passed away, and when it began to get dark Mr. Nickeldick moved farther away from the house. By the time Tilly, the colored cat, came home, Mr. Nickeldick was sitting under the lamp post on the curbstone.

"Mr. Nickeldick!" cried Tilly when she saw her master. "What de mattah?"

"Johnny Wattel, Johnny Wattel," wailed Mr. Nickeldick, pointing toward the house. "He's in MY house. Sleeping in MY dressing gown—in MY bed, with his boots on."

"WITH HIS BOOTS ON!" gasped Tilly.

"Yes!" cried Mr. Nickeldick. "IN MY BED!"

"De good fo' nothin' houn'!" hissed Tilly as she dashed into the house.

Mr. Nickeldick, peering through the front door, could see Tilly light a candle. She ran into the kitchen and caught up what Mr. Nickeldick thought looked like a wooden potato masher. Then he saw her disappear up the stairs. Mr. Nickeldick turned cold, although his ears burned like fire. He waited for what seemed like hours, but it was really only one jump of a colored cat—then there was a great disturbance in Mr. Nickeldick's bedroom. It sounded like a hundred little boys were being beaten with a hundred slippers. Shivers ran down to the very end of Mr. Nickeldick's tail. Presently there was an extra loud crash and Johnny Wattel dashed around the side of the house. It looked as though he was wearing a window sash around his fat neck. Mr. Nickeldick was not quite sure about the sash, for Mr. Wattel was traveling exceedingly fast.

Mr. Nickeldick was sitting under a lamp post.

When Mr. Nickeldick boldly entered the house he found Tilly sitting on the floor weeping.

"Did he hurt you?" asked Mr. Nickeldick.

"N-n-no," wept Tilly. "I's just weepin' because I's disappointed—dat Wattel pusson didn't stay long enough fo' me to give him all de beatin' what was done comin' to him."

Mr. Nickeldick was forced to sleep in the parlor for the rest of the night. His bedroom was a mess. The next morning Tilly had to air the mattress, wash the bedding, and generally disinfect the whole house.

"It's all right fo' a pusson to done eat de gold fish and to set de mustard in de apple sauce," Tilly told Mr. Nickeldick. "It's all right fo' to go to bed fo' a snooze, but I's gwine fo' to have no scallawag badgah done go to bed with his dirty boots on."

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that the scientists should be able to find animals living today that have backbones in different stages of development and so should be able to arrive at conclusions as to how they came about in the beginning!

There is the garden slug, for instance, which sleeps under the garbage can by the back gate. It is a snail that has thrown away its shell. It has no backbone, but is by way of needing one.

Then there is the lancelet, a lowly animal that lives in the mud at the bottom of Chesapeake bay. It is far slower along than the slug. It is actually setting about the making of a backbone as a stiffener. It has a backbone just beginning to take form.

The next step above the lancelet is seen in the old fashioned fishes. Take the shark, for instance. It is an early form of fish, just as the opossum is an early form of mammal, or as the toad is an early form of quadruped. Instead of gills like the modern fishes, the shark has five slits in the side of the neck through which it breathes. It does not have scales like the later fishes. It comes down from an earlier line that has no scales. It has no ribs.

But, finally, the shark has a backbone that is not yet quite a backbone. It has not yet hardened into bone. It is merely stiff gristle. It can be cut with a knife.

The next stage in the development of the backbone is to be seen in the higher order of fishes. It is the fishes that actually complete the evolution of the backbone. They hardened it, divided it up into joints, fixed up a neat channel through it for the spinal cord.

This backbone has become the support of all the higher forms of animal life. Wherever it is found in nature it is built on the same plan. Joints from the spinal columns of snakes, birds, cows, man, are all much alike. So unmistakable is the design that there seems to be little question that all that use it tie back to a common ancestor there in the water. This ancestor found that it needed a backbone, but is by way of needing one. Then there is the lancelet, a lowly animal that lives in the mud at the bottom of Chesapeake bay. 2404 2407 2490

2404—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 40 inch material.

2407—Woman's and misses' dress. Size 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅞ yards of 42 inch material with ⅞ yard of 27 inch contrasting. The hot iron transfer pattern, 702, comes in blue and yellow and costs 15 cents extra.

2490—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 40 inch material with 2 yards of ribbon.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

THE circular godets that are inserted in the sides of the pretty one piece dress pattern No. 2404, are cut rounding instead of in the usual pointed outline at the top. This difference will appeal to many, and they may be set in plain or with a narrow piping.

Any of the crêpes or silks will make up prettily in this design, and while, of course, the sleeves may be long or short, the full length sleeves are to be much worn this fall and winter and the dress will be smarter looking with long sleeves. These sleeves are perfectly plain, and made close fitting by means of a dart up the outside from the wrist to just below the elbow.

The dress closes on the left shoulder; this will make it easier to get into and out of. Finish the back part of this shoulder seam with a small extension hem, and finish the front with a faced one. Use the smallest sized snaps for closing, setting them on three-quarters of an inch apart, and one-eighth of an inch in from the edge. If this closing is nicely finished it will be practically invisible.

A tie string is sewed across the back of the neck, and ends in the front in rather a long tie. Of course this is made double, and the distance across the back of the neck of the dress should be accurately measured, and the same distance marked off in the middle of the length of the tie. Then, turning this tie to the wrong side, sew the edges together in a narrow seam, up to the marks. Clip the seam edges to the sewing and turn right side out. Then sew one edge to the neck of the dress—making a wrong side seam, and hem the remaining edge down over the seam. The neck across the front should be bound.

Pattern No. 2490 is for a pretty one piece slip-on dress for a young girl. There are short kimono sleeves, seamed on the shoulders, a seaming that offers an opportunity for trimming. Sometimes the seam has a piping of a contrasting color, sometimes it is covered with a half inch wide bias strip of the contrasting material, and sometimes the seam is vertically covered with tiny buttons sewed on close together.

The neck line in the front is a slight "V" shape; and this neck and the sleeve edges should be finished with a binding. At the side of the skirt there are inverted plaits. These are not cut separately; but, as the picture shows, the material extends beyond the seams and is brought back and pressed in place. A narrow tie string or sash is worn at a low waist line and finished in a bow and ends at the left side. It seems there is always some excuse for a new dress being quite necessary, for girls as well as grown folks, and an attractive design like this is sure to please. Then, too, if it is made at home, so small a quantity of material is needed that the cost seems negligible.

Pattern No. 2407 is for a one piece dress that is decidedly smart looking. Roshanara crepe, satin, or almost any material that isn't too light weight will make up nicely. It is a design that is particularly becoming to slender, straight figures, and is not hard to make. The back is cut in one piece, and the fronts in two. If there is a right and wrong side to the material be careful in laying the fronts on, to see that left and right sides are laid on properly. Then, too, see that you allow sufficient length at the bottom for a good hem. The right front laps by to the left side, and the closing is there. The fronts of the dress are underfaced and rolled, forming revers. They join to a collar that goes across the back. Inside the fronts is a vest, which can be made of the material that is used for facing the fronts. It will look well to use buttons down the right side closing of the skirt part, or they may be used in a group of four at the top of the joining.

The pattern provides for long or short sleeves, and it will doubtless depend somewhat on the material used, as well as the sort of dress it is to be, whether one uses the long or short ones.

ASSAILING MAN'S FIDELITY

by Doris Blake

Here's a Subject that Almost Always Provokes an Argument.

MISS EDITH, a fair correspondent and recent victim of a broken troth, asks if there is a man alive who could be firm and true, faithful to the death, and beyond?

This revives the question, old as Adam, as to which is the more fickle sex. Like religion and politics, it furnishes a lively topic, if not a unanimous agreement.

Assailing man's fidelity is assuredly one of woman's favorite indoor sports. "To hear women tell about it," says a light hearted friend, "you'd think in man's life fidelity was the thing apart, and woman's whole existence."

Elinor Glyn, in her advice on how to hold a man, says, quite baldly: "Remember that Nature made man a polygamous animal, or the human race would cease to be."

The worm will turn if you prod him long enough. "Mere Man" is fed up on all this chatter about man's faithlessness, and he would like to inject a little remark or two.

"I am fully convinced," he says, "that when a man is not faithful to his wife, there are usually two women at fault; his wife and the other woman!"

I guess that ought to jar us out of our smugness a trifle, eh, what?

"Don't be so ever ready to condemn us," he continues, "because some woman was instrumental in our being fickle or unfaithful to another woman!" One broad generalization doesn't apply to man any more than to women. I know from personal observation and from a business of which I am a part, and where this information is part of the records, that there are a large number of men who are faithful and true.

Dividing the Blame.

"In my hotel business I long ago learned that fickleness and unfaithfulness is not necessarily a fault found only in men. Some woman, unchivalrous as it may be to say so, and quite a few, at that, have their shortcomings, too. In checking over a list, I found the unfaithfulness between women and men quite evenly divided.

"Incidentally," he continues, "this is a reason that I, for one, have never married. Who knows but I might pick a woman with the fault all men are pictured as having?"

A "drummer," who heartily resents the implication too frequently directed against commercial men, adds a word to the hotel man's on the subject. "Being one of them, I am quite familiar with the most misunderstood and maligned class of men. Yet I know hundreds of fellow travelers and I can name on the fingers of one hand those whom I know are unfaithful. We, as a whole, are away from our homes more than we are with the folk. Temptation is tossed our way every day. But to the average traveling man, the thought of being unfaithful is decidedly repulsive, and as a matter of fact, he does not care for the companionship of a man who is.

"I don't think the traveling man any lily white example, but I do think that women look at the average man the way they do at us—always looking for something to be shocked about. I have long ago given up all hope of ever understanding what goes on in a woman's mind. It is rottenly unfair to accuse us decent fellows when doubt is expressed as to whether or not any man is sincere and faithful to his trust."

I suppose the psychology of woman's abiding interest in the topic of man's fidelity or faithlessness is in her keen anxiety to have him remain true to her. It might be much better psychology for her to talk less about it, doubt less, and trust more, and be rewarded, like the wife of "Homo Sinceritas," who takes up the subject of man's fidelity thus:

"The question of fidelity in love," says Homo Sinceritas, "and conduct, is so hard for a man to prove that it often seems to be futile for him to make any assertion on behalf of himself. It is one of those innermost secrets men keep to themselves, and every woman knows how hard it is to gain entrance into that inner life of the man she loves and meets daily.

His Own Experience.

"All the good and true men are not dead yet; I know any number of them. But do the girls of today go to the right places to choose their mates? Do they look for men worthwhile? I have been married nearly thirty years, and my wife and I love each other today more than we ever did. I can faithfully say I never desired any other woman. My wife was my first and only love. This may seem queer to what you call the up to date man of today who blames nature for his perverse point of view. Nevertheless, it is true.

"The result of our union is two lovely daughters, lovely in character, intelligence, perfect in physique and health. We always encouraged them to bring their men friends home, with the result that they are both married to excellent fellows. The trifler and the faithless kind of men are not likely to want to mix in with family life.

"I think the thing that has helped me to be true and clean my dear father put into my heart. He taught me that the sanctity of womanhood was to be defended, if necessary, with my life. If fathers would teach their sons, early in life, this wonderful secret of strength and help we should have a better world and happier one. I thank God that today, after fifty years of life, and nearly thirty years of married life, I can look every woman in the face with the knowledge I have never trifled with any woman's affections.

"I don't like this cynicism about men. I think it criminal for mothers to advise girls to bank on a man's love 'with reservations.' Tell her instead to pick a man with character and bank on him without reservations."

AFTER THE COLONIAL.

FOR those who are interested in furnishing their homes, or even a room or two, with furniture that will never go out of date, colonial pieces—either in real antiques or in reproductions—are a safe and sure investment. Many of us are not so fortunate as to be able to furnish throughout with the genuine pieces used by our forefathers, but we may get reproductions which embody the same beauty of line and durability.

There is a lovely apartment in an eastern city which carries out this idea. The entrance hall is small but charmingly arranged. Woodwork and wainscoting are painted ivory, in the old manner, and there is a figured wall paper—light green background, with figures in ivory and deeper shades of green. Directly across from the front door, against the longest wall space, is a graceful Chippendale sofa, above which hangs an old mirror in a dull gilded pillar frame. A large grandfather clock commands one corner.

In the opposite wall a door leads to the living room. Here, as in the hall, woodwork, wainscoting, and the mantel are painted ivory. The wall paper is done in tones of French gray and white. Draperies at the windows are of old striped damask in soft blue, green, rose, and gold. These hang to the floor from beneath brass cornices and are caught back over decorated brass knobs. There are a lovely old tambour desk in the room and several dainty, Hepplewhite side chairs.

Flanking the fireplace, as shown in today's illustration, are two comfortable armchairs, one upholstered in glazed chintz, the other in a material similar to calico, in a deep red, sprinkled with tiny white stars. Against the wall opposite the fireplace is a Hepplewhite sofa, unholstered in green velvet finely striped in gold color and hairlines of black. At one end stands a delightful, tip top table which holds an old white glass lamp, electrified and fitted with a shade made of parchmentized fashion plates of the colonial age. Nearby is placed a Buckingham armchair, suplemented by an odd, square tip top table on which an old set of teacups and saucers and a pewter teapot are kept.

At one side of the living room is a doorway leading to a small library. Two walls are lined with bookshelves. The woodwork is old ivory and the wall paper ecru with gold medallions. There are no glass curtains, but long draperies of chintz in a splashy flowered pattern on an ecru background. A spinet desk is accompanied by a ladderback chair. In addition there are a comb-back Windsor and a large armchair upholstered in deep green leather at each side of the fireplace. Besides the arm chair is a little table holding a lamp and smoking accessories.

Adjoining the living room by means of a double doorway is the dining room. There is old ivory woodwork and wainscoting. Old Japanese rice paper dully gilded, covers the walls above the wainscoting. This produces a most unusual and pleasing effect. At the windows there are gold colored silk gauze glass curtains under figured draperies of black and gold.

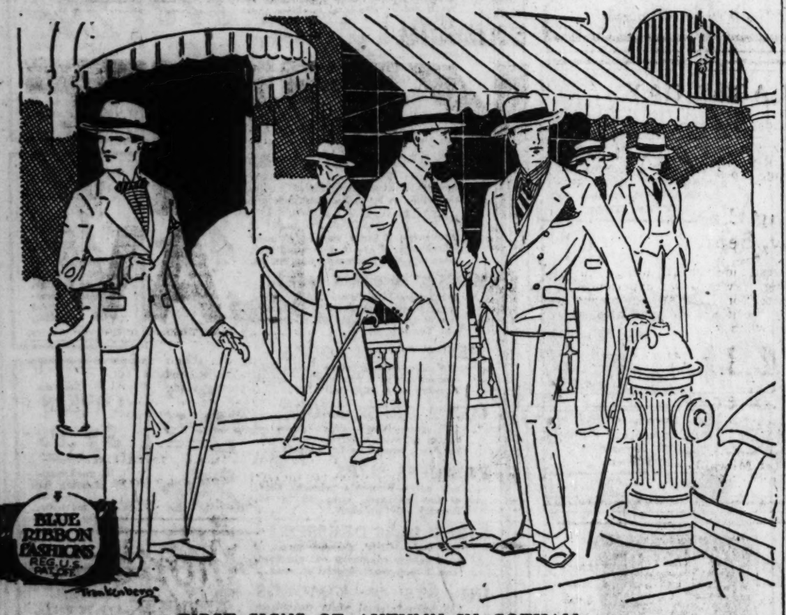
All of the furniture is old maple in its soft, mellow gold tone. The table is long and narrow, of the drop-leaf type, and there are six rush-bottomed ladderback chairs. At one end of the room is a maple lowboy with brass hardware, and at the other end a convenient serving table. Built in corner cabinets hold rare pieces of old china. Before the open fireplace is an old fashioned painted screen.

Separating the living and dining rooms from the bedrooms is a small hallway leading past the kitchen which is modern in every detail.

One bedroom has ivory woodwork and flowered wall paper. Glass curtains are of square meshed net with striped silk draperies in leaf green, ivory, and amethyst the green dominating. A large maple bureau-top gilt mirror hung above it. In one corner there is a great chest-on-chest with brass handles and locks. Near a window is a rush bottom rocker supplemented by an old sewing stand and a quaint footstool. The four poster has an old ivory, tufted candlewick spread, with square meshed net canopy valance and draperies edged in ball tassel fringe. At one side stands a ladder back chair, and at the other a little night table on which a glass lamp and an old fashioned water bottle are placed. There are hooked rugs on the floor.

Completing the layout of this apartment is a second bedroom. The walls are plain, calcimined raspberry pink. Draperies at the windows are of striped flowered chintz, over ivory glass curtains. All of the furniture is brown mahogany. On the bed is a cover of raspberry pink rep, with a valance of the chintz. An old Martha Washington chair is upholstered in a heavy striped material, repeating the above colors. The rug is a dull, soft green.

MEN'S FASHIONS



FIRST SIGNS OF AUTUMN IN GOTHAM

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped addressed envelope for personal reply.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Back from a survey of what the well dressed man is wearing in London and Paris, and little old New York doesn't look so bad sartorially at all. There may not be any gray derbies and gray top hats and there may not be tail coats and silk hats at every street corner, but as far as spruceness and good taste and style are concerned, the home town has no reason to hang its head and wear an inferiority complex. For although we have our poorly dressed men here, so have they on the other side of the water.

Although this fashion writer has been away from home several months, there don't seem to be any tremendously noticeable changes in styles since his departure. But, at the time of writing, there is still the spirit of summer, which was starting in when I left, and there will be nothing especially new in the way of fashion until the men begin to get their fall wardrobes and get away from the influence of summer sport clothes.

Nevertheless, there is some intimation that the summer negligee mood is waning, and the sprucing up process of autumn is on. There are more stiff collars to be noticed, more derbies, more spats. One sees fewer sartorial sins committed in the urban district, such as the wearing of sport shoes, with the wrong kind of suit, and the intrusion of knickers in the city avenues.

As far as any difference in colors is concerned, there won't be much in that, for the habit of wearing dark colors in the fall and winter and light in the spring and summer has disappeared. Men don't get into drab colors as soon as the weather changes from hot to cool.

As a matter of fact, although one is apt to say that a certain color has led in the march of fashion from season to season, color will always be more a question of personal preference than a style note. Of course, there is sometimes a run on brown, or on a certain shade of gray which will be noticeably a style fancy, but the personal element is far more important.

If you hear that brown suits, for instance, will be popular for winter wear, and if you have found that brown suits are unbecoming to you, there is no reason on earth why you should wear a brown suit. If every one wore brown suits, what an uninteresting outlook the fashion rows would give. There's got to be a variety in colors in men's clothes and so the best way is for every man to wear the color that becomes him best.

That is, as far as suits and coats are concerned. When it comes to shirts and ties, and socks and shoes, smaller parts of clothing which do not show up so strongly against one's complexion, more attention may be paid to what is in and what is out of fashion's favor. And, even then, it is more important that a pleasing color harmony is achieved between shirt, tie and suit, than that one wears a mauve shirt, or a blue tie that has been stamped with fashion's approval. It is quite possible to have both style and artistic arrangement of color, if thought is used, and that is what one must seek in the planning of a wardrobe.

There is one color that is always fashionable and that is always becoming to any man, be he red haired, yellow haired, brown haired, or black haired. And that is blue, blue of any shade. And it is a color that will blend in with any color of accessory, shirt or tie. Since I have been back I have seen enough to be able to report that there is no decrease in the popularity of blue for suitings. Besides the staple gray blues, blues with a hint of lavender, and the brighter Prussian blue.

There's a greenish gray suiting I have seen in one of the smart clothing shops, which is an excellent background for combinations of colors using green and gray in the accessories. One of these suits was displayed with white shirt, stiff white collar, green and gray small regular figured four in hand, green and white figured lawn handerchief, and dark green lisle socks.

A blue gray harmony was suggested in the window of the same smart shop. The suit was one of those off shades of blue, made soft by a good deal of gray in the color. A grayish blue shirt with starched collar to match, the same color as the suit, only a few shades lighter, was combined with the suit. The suggested tie was a blue foulard with gray polka dots. Socks were dark blue lisle, with gray clocks. A dark red silk handkerchief in the breast pocket made a spot of color which offset any tendency to monotony the color scheme might have had.

I think we're going to see plenty of double breasteds this autumn season on the well dressed men. There's no getting away from the fact that this style is a smart one, when the coat is well cut, and the man is well built.

Hat tendencies would seem to favor the curled brim, which came into its own again last winter. But more in detail on the fall hat at a near date.

One thing you must do now at this stage of the sartorial game, and that is to get it into your mind that a certain amount of formality of dress is required of every man at some time, and that he can't get into the swim of a social life without the proper accoutrements. Therefore, don't imagine your'e going to get away with your sport shirt when you go to a little affair in the evening, or an afternoon, no matter how unimportant it may seem. If you never did it before, turn over a new leaf this season, and have a wardrobe that will see you properly dressed for every occasion.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Write from Sanitarium.

"We are a group of girls confined in a tuberculosis sanitarium. We would appreciate very much if some of your readers have a phonograph to give away. We will arrange to have it called for. W. W."

If you have a phonograph to spare, it would be a kindly act to place it where it will bring so much enjoyment.

Sunday School Papers.

"There are Sunday school papers, the Classmate and Picture Story Paper, stored in the Sunday school. Perhaps some Sunday school that is just getting a start or some place that cannot afford papers would like them. We would be glad to pay the postage. "B. L. B."

We will be glad to let you know of any one interested in your thoughtful offer.

Asks for Riding Boots.

"You have helped others so much, I wonder if you would kindly help me. I have been offered the use of a horse when I go to a little country town, not far from here, but one cannot ride barelegged, as the sides of the horse bruise your legs so badly, it makes it torture instead of pleasure. Is there not some one among your readers who has an old pair of boots—no longer being used—size 6B or C, or even larger? I cannot tell you how much I would appreciate this kindness, as I positively cannot afford to buy any. J. G."

We hope the boots will be forthcoming soon, so you will be able to have the pleasure of riding in comfort.

Icebox a Necessity.

"I am coming to you with a request for an icebox, as I am in need of one badly. I'm trying to get a little home together after living in furnished rooms, and would also appreciate curtains, dishes, or anything that would furnish a home. H. B."

The remaining warm days make an icebox a necessity. Any other little article you can spare to add cheer or comfort to the little home our correspondent is endeavoring to make will be gratefully received.

Patient Two Years.

"I have been in a sanitarium for two years and am unable to work. I would like to get some winter pajamas and a pair of shoes size 3½, and also a pair of trousers size 36 waist, 32 length. If you can obtain these for me I'll be happy. H. B."

I'm sure there are many correspondents who will take pleasure in supplying your need.

HOW to MAKE SURE You want a Maytag

Do This—

Call the MAYTAG dealer. Have him bring a MAYTAG to your home. Not a mite of obligation.

Make this test. Weigh your clothes. Look at your watch. Start the MAYTAG.

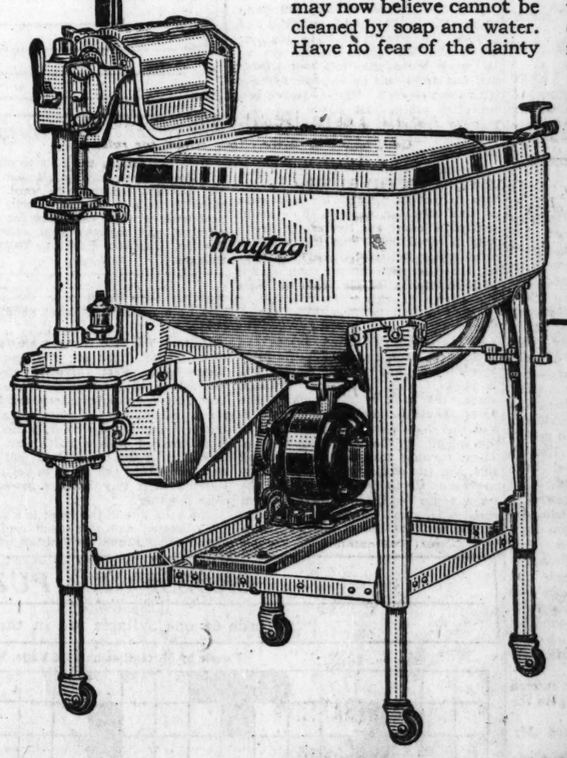
Wash with it—everything you have—even those things you may now believe cannot be cleaned by soap and water. Have no fear of the dainty fabrics. Don't help along the bulky pieces. And by all means throw in the overalls and cleaning rags loaded and stiff with grime and grease.

Follow the action of the turbulent, soap-laden, penetrating water. Look over each washed piece carefully. See how perfectly clean each piece is washed. See how the satin-smooth, cast-aluminum tub cleans itself—almost instantly. Watch how the wringer does its work.

Time for an entire wash of 50 pounds dry weight, when done—one hour.

There's your proof—positive proof—that you want a MAYTAG.

THE MAYTAG COMPANY
Newton, Iowa



9 Outstanding Maytag Features

1—Washes faster. The Gyrafoam Principle creates a more highly energized, turbulent and continuously effective water action. No idle water.
2—Washes cleaner. The Gyrafoam Principle mixes the soap evenly through the water, and forces the super-cleansing, soapier washing solution through the meshes of the clothes. No idle suds.
3—Largest hourly capacity in the world—50 lbs. ordinary family wash per hour. Tub holds 21 gallons—4 gallons more than ordinary washers.
4—Most compact washer made—takes floor space only 25 inches square.
5—Cast aluminum tub—can't warp, rust, rot, swell, split nor corrode.
6—Easily adjusted to your height, and height of tubs.
7—Clothes can be put in or taken out while washer is running.
8—Tub cleans itself in thirty seconds.
9—Metal swinging wringer. Low. Swings into 7 positions. Adjusts itself automatically for handkerchiefs or blankets. Automatic drainboard. Instant tension-release. All parts enclosed.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington, with current market materials, and are indorsed by her.

THE CUCUMBER.

There are all sorts of entertaining and picturesque allusions to the cucumber in literature and history. It would take us far afield to give even a few of these, but both wit and wisdom have circulated around the cucumber for centuries. For instance, if a man's farm was small it has been spoken of as not acre enough to grow one cucumber.

One value of these allusions is that they show in how many ways the cucumber may be prepared and eaten. The English seem to be devoted to cucumber sandwiches. Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick in her novel, "The Kinsmen," says, "Mr. Gammage ate cucumber sandwiches and waited for his opening." There are some exceedingly entertaining facts about the growing of cucumbers in some of the novels of Dickens, and one may get the idea from various mentions of the cucumber in English writings that there might be something fantastic in the mind of a man who would retire from active life to grow cucumbers.

Too Often Indigestible.

The cucumber pickle has become almost as staple with us as it was with the people of Scandinavian countries. In fact, a large volume of the cucumbers raised in the United States are pickled, and the growers even speak of "raising pickles." But a dietician can hardly tolerate a cucumber pickle, and a doctor who wrote a most successful cook book a hundred years ago said, "These sponges of vinegar are often very indigestible, especially in the crisp state in which they are most admired. The Indian fashion of pounding pickles is an excellent one. We recommend those who have any regard for their stomach, yet still wish to indulge their tongue, instead of eating pickles, which are really merely vehicles for taking a certain portion of vinegar and spice, etc., to use the flavored vinegars, such as burnett, horseradish, tarragon, mint, cress, etc. By combinations of these a relish may easily be composed exactly in harmony with the palate of the eater."

Substitutes for Pickle.

The old doctor suggests as substitutes for cucumber pickle the use of the flavored vinegars, and such a practice as that has been frequently advocated in this column. It is astonishing how nearly and superior a substitute to cucumber pickle is a simple mixture of salad ingredients with a small amount of French dressing, and that dressing will have but one-third vinegar. A dill vinegar or one with some caper vinegar may prove a novelty and agreeable.

As to the cucumber in salad, there are people who will say that almost any salad will be improved by it, and that none should be served without it. But to drown cucumbers whether cut up alone or mixed with other ingredients in vinegar is a great mistake and the reputation that fresh cucumbers have some time had for being indigestible has been due to the fact that they have been soaked in vinegar. The proper dressing for cucumber salad is one that is delicate, mild, and creamy such as is mentioned below as a Pennsylvania Dutch cucumber salad.

In mixing a combination salad—with onion, radish and tomato—we may put each of these ingredients through a food chopper or the cucumber alone through the chopper, season it slightly and use it for a sandwich filling. Another less usual way is to peel the cucumber, cut it in four or more pieces the long way and then cut these across at every half inch, making small dice. Served on leaf lettuce shredded as in making sauerkraut this makes an attractive salad with, perhaps, a small tomato or something similar at the side for a garnish.

The Sambal.

The dictionary gives as a definition for sambal a curry sauce, but an English epicure, who had been in India, gives the following description of how to prepare a sambal: "Take the finest and straightest cucumber, cut off both ends, and divide the remainder into two inch lengths. Peel these, then take each length in succession and with a sharp, small knife pare it from surface to center, until it has become one long curly shred. Curl it up tightly, cut the length through from end to end until you have made numerous long, thin shreds. Treat each length in the same way and place in a glass dish. Add three green chilies chopped fine, a few chopped spring onions, and some tiny shreds of the blue fish of Java. Having performed a pilgrimage in search of this curiosity, you will naturally fall back on the common or Italian anchovy, which, after extracting the brine and bone and cleansing, chop fine. Pour a little vinegar over the mixture." Of course, this salad may be virulently strong and objectionable. It has been given here mainly to show how a cucumber may be cut up for salad in a way out of the ordinary.

Pennsylvania Dutch Salad 1.

The Philadelphia version of this salad as used by my friends, the Clements—being commended by the doctor as "better than ice cream"—is made by his wife as follows: Peel and cut three cucumbers in the thinnest possible slices, and cut one onion in the same way and add to them. Add salt to make a heavy brine, a small handful at least with a quart of water, and a piece of ice. Let the cut up cucumber stand in this form from half to three-quarters of an hour then pour into a colander and squeeze water out with a potato masher. Put them into a serving dish, add a little pepper and a dash or two of vinegar, and cover with a thick, sweet cream, not a thin one, although one "on the blink," or just turning, may be used.

Pennsylvania Dutch Salad 2.

The following recipe (tried out) is to be found in the book of Pennsylvania Dutch recipes, "Mary at the Farm and Book of Recipes," under the title "Dutch Cucumber Salad": "Finely slice one large green cucumber and one medium sized onion, a head. Sprinkle over about one teaspoonful of salt. Allow to stand a short time, then place in a piece of cheesecloth and squeeze out all the moisture possible. Place cucumbers when drained in the dish in which they are to be served, add two tablespoons of sour vinegar, mix well. Then pour over enough thick sour cream to half cover, and a dust of pepper. Cucumbers are considered less unwholesome when prepared in this manner." Try this with one tablespoon of vinegar only and see if you do not find it an excellent and exceptionally good way to prepare cucumbers.

Russian Cucumber Salad.

In the Borzoi Cook Book containing four hundred and sixteen Russian recipes there is the following recipe with the title "Cucumber with Sour Cream": "Twelve cucumbers, three eggs, three fourths cup sour cream, one-half tablespoon vinegar, pepper and salt. Clean and peel twelve young cucumbers, cut into small dice, and slightly salt. Rub three hard-boiled egg yolks with salt and gradually add sour cream, and one-half tablespoon vinegar and a dash of pepper. Mix well."

Cooking Cucumbers.

Quickly cooked cucumbers keep their characteristic flavor and are the pleasantest sort of rival of the vegetable marrow—both keep hot like a soapstone. The large ripe yellow cucumbers can be cooked in exactly the same way with meat sauces and stuffed with vegetable and meat seasonings. In European cookery we find many recipes for cooking the cucumber, but in the United States little progress has been made in using it in this fashion although recipes for baking it, stewing it, scalloping it, stuffing it, fricasseeing it appear now and then.

Blanching the Cucumber.

Whether we put the cucumber into a stew or make a stew of it or use it for other purposes, it is in most cases a good plan to drop it into boiling water for about five minutes. Either cut it in short lengths—perhaps two inch long pieces—or slice it lengthwise before blanching it, according to the demand of the second part of the recipe. After it is blanched, the cucumber may be egged and crumbed or cooked in butter or finished in a sauce, or how you will.

Stewed Cucumber.

Cucumbers blanched and then stewed for five minutes retain the flavor of the uncooked vegetable, and when sprinkled with a little chopped parsley they are a pretty vegetable, prettier than most. Or they may be gently stewed in a little white sauce, made partly of the water in which they were blanched, and with little bits of butter added at the last. In five minutes after being put into the white sauce the cucumber is ready to serve, but be sure the white sauce is cooked from fifteen to twenty minutes before the cucumber is added. When the cucumbers are large, with seeds too ripe for salad use, wash and peel them carefully and remove only the thin inner shaving of peel. Then cut in quarters and remove the seeds and dice the rest. Put these dice to cook in a small, closely covered aluminum kettle in only a little water and over a minimum fire.

Fried Cucumbers.

Cut in rather thin slices the cucumber may be fried as the Italians fry any of the long green gourds, with an onion cut thin and a sliced tomato to each cucumber. The cucumber cooks slowly in this way and the work must be done over a low fire.

Cucumber Sauces.

The great chefs use cucumbers for sauces in quite a fancy way. Some of these are not greatly different from the Pennsylvania Dutch salads. Others may be more like a mayonnaise with chopped cucumbers. These sauces are mainly used with cold meat and cold fish dishes.

A Record of Leadership

Maintained by the

BUSH CONSERVATORY

CHICAGO

Kenneth M. Bradley, President — Edgar A. Nelson, Vice-President

THE retrospect of the past year's successes is well in keeping with the traditions of the Bush Conservatory. Its mission has always been one of leadership—evidenced in many ways. It was the first to establish a Master School—first to install student dormitories, and the prestige of its Symphony Orchestra is enough alone to give premier standing to any school of music and dramatic art.

It is not only an accredited institution offering all departments of music, with courses leading to certificates, diplomas and degrees; by constant expansion, such as the absorption of the Lyceum Arts Conservatory, it has developed from field to field through the range of the expressional arts.

THE DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC
Has Pupils from All Over the World

This department has attracted pupils from forty-three states in this country and from twenty-one foreign nations.

Free Tuition in the Master School

Under the patronage of Mr. Samuel E. Moist, the Master School offers free tuition to advanced students in Piano, Voice, Violin and Composition. The students are taught by artists of international reputation.

Free and Partial Scholarships will be awarded this season to a large number of talented music students whose means are limited, and who are not sufficiently advanced to qualify for the Master School.

DRAMATIC DEPARTMENT
Graduates in Demand

Elias Day, Director, Department of Dramatic Art and Stagecraft, and formerly President of the Lyceum Arts Conservatory, has placed 26 dramatic companies on the road in the last 3 years, and a larger number of concert companies. These professional appointments are mentioned simply as an illustration of the character and quality of the instruction given.

Day and Evening Instruction

Private and class instruction in all branches of Music, Dramatic Art, Stagecraft, Expression, Public School Music, Opera, Dancing and Languages. Special instruction for children.

Accountancy

Downtown Night Classes Now Forming

Here is an exceptional opportunity to prepare yourself for a high salaried accounting position or for the degree of C. P. A.

LaSalle Extension University has so long dominated the field of Higher Accountancy training that its standing in this field is generally recognized as supreme.

Points of Superiority:

1 COMPREHENSIVENESS: The LaSalle course is the most comprehensive because it embraces the entire range of accounting—with electives covering all the principal types of business, industry, and organization.

2 INSTRUCTION STAFF: No other institution approaches LaSalle in the size and standing of its Accountancy Instruction Staff, which is composed of over seventy-five instructors—thirty-one Certified Public Accountants, including men of the highest standing in the profession. The staff is headed by Wm. B. Castenholz, C. P. A., M. A. I. A., author of Cost Accounting Procedure, and Auditing Procedure.

3 EXPERIENCE: Having for many years held first rank in the Accountancy field, LaSalle has trained a far greater number of executive Accountants, including C. P. A.'s, than any other business training institution. Its graduates are holding high salaried positions with business firms in every American and Canadian city.

4 PRACTICAL METHOD: LaSalle training can be had without interruption to a man's present work. The LaSalle Problem Method hurls the student right against the actual problems of the factory, office, store, bank, etc., and he solves these problems by actually doing them under the direction of experts. The big propositions of business are open to the men who can solve the problems of business.

5 STANDING WITH BIG BUSINESS: On account of the widely recognized standing of La Salle in the Accountancy field, and the wide range of its students, it is the first source of supply turned to by Public Accountants and business executives when in need of all kinds of Accountants, from cost clerks and auditors at moderate salaries up to treasurers and comptrollers at very handsome salaries.

6 PLACEMENT SERVICE: LaSalle maintains a Placement Department to give employment service free to both students and employers.

7 SAVING IN TIME: It has been abundantly demonstrated that nowhere else can you develop such practical and quick application of your abilities to insure your greater business success as through the LaSalle Problem Method of training and service. Training for junior and senior positions in Accountancy consumes less than two-thirds the time required by any other practical and thorough advanced Accountancy training.

8 GUARANTEED RESULTS: LaSalle guarantees to train you to pass the C. P. A. examination in any state. Failing to pass, LaSalle will continue coaching you without cost until you do succeed in passing.

LEARN ELECTRICITY

Prepare for a Future

It makes no difference whether you are doing office work, sales work, mechanical work, clerical or any other line of work. Electricity offers you a chance, right here in your own home, away from dirt and grease, where you will learn a trade where salaries as you grow older and where there are no layoffs in bad weather or dull times. Electricity is used in sales work, power houses, radio, construction work and many other branches.

COMPLETE ELECTRICAL TRAINING
in Short Time—Practical, Personal Training

For 37 years COYNE, AMERICA'S GREATEST ELECTRICAL SCHOOL, has been training men for positions in electrical work—not by correspondence school methods, but by actual practice on electrical machinery right in the great Coyne shops. We are splendidly equipped, we do not employ theorists, we do not attempt to teach any other subject. We do not use books, but study by practice—by actual installation on thousands of dollars worth of electrical machinery and apparatus.

Coyne's Employment Dept. Backs Up Graduates for Life

We not only assist you to a big paying job on graduation, but back you up this line and give you employment and aid other service and help when needed.

VISIT THE GREAT COYNE SHOPS

Learn by doing on the actual electrical machinery used in the electrical industry. Come to Coyne and learn with your own eyes how we do it. Or write us for the free, "Coyne Opportunity" Book and Special Offer. Do it today. Don't delay. Act now. No salesmen to see you.

HIGH SCHOOL for YOUNG MEN

Diploma in 3 to 4 Years

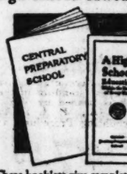
Central Preparatory School is the largest non-public high school in the Chicago Loop. More than 1250 men are enrolled for day and evening classes each semester. Faculty consists of 45 experienced men teachers, all college graduates. The student organizations and physical activities will appeal to the young man who wants to combine education with recreation.

Fully Accredited

Credits of the Day and Evening High School are accepted fully without examination by the University of Illinois, Chicago, Northwestern and all other middle west universities and state examining boards.

The School is a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

These booklets will point the way to a high school education



These booklets give complete information about the day or evening high school courses, and a list of the entrance requirements of the leading colleges and universities in and about Chicago. Full information is also given about the Y. M. C. A. easy payment plan. For a copy of booklet

Call at the office, Phone or write to Principal O. N. Wing, about day school classes and booklet T-2.
Principal H. L. Buck, about evening school classes and booklet T-3.

These men and the educational advisers will be glad to answer questions about high school credits and help you arrange your registration.

Day and Evening Classes

The day classes of Central Preparatory School will appeal to the young man who is too old to attend the public high schools or who needs the special individual attention only possible in a private school. A capable student can secure a high school diploma in three to four years or in even less time than that.

The Evening High School enables those employed during the day to secure a standard high school diploma in 3½ to 4 years by attending classes during the ten-week summer term in addition to the regular fall and spring semesters of twenty weeks each. Classes meet three evenings a week. A complete Program consisting of every accredited high school subject is offered.

MOLER

Work That Women Love to Do!

WHY do so many women handcuff themselves to work that pays so poorly and which they so heartily detest? It is so unnecessary!

For never was there such a demand for expert Beauty Culture operators.

Women naturally love the work and it requires so little good training. It is so easily and quickly learned. How well it pays!

But don't forget, the important thing is to enroll where you get practical MOLER training under actual shop conditions. It is so vital to learn more before you can expect to really EARN more.

That is why the best is the cheapest!

All around operators make the most money! The complete MOLER course includes Hairdressing, Shingle Bobbing, Marcelling, Permanent Waving, Facial Treatments, Manicuring, Electrolysis and Hair Manufacture. Day and evening classes.

Won't you come in for a Beauty treatment and see how we operate?

Send for the Moler Blue Book of Beauty Culture. T.

On the Enlightenment of Our Modern Youth

By H. L. Mencken.

It is a curious fact that, in all the vast literature of so-called sex hygiene that has poured from the presses for twenty years past, there is scarcely a book of any sound and practical value. I have been through, I should say, at least a hundred such volumes, and I can't remember three that were even honest.

H. L. MENCKEN

The rest are full of evasions, with now and then a descent to false pretenses, and it is difficult to imagine them deceiving the adolescents to whom they are mainly addressed. For youth, though it may lack knowledge, is certainly not devoid of intelligence. When a schoolmaster is an ass, which happens only too often, you may be sure that his pupils are well aware of it.

The teachers of sex hygiene, I fear, fall very largely into that melancholy category. Very few such books appear to be written by adults of wide experience and sound sense. They are, like the products of authors cursed with the pedagogical mind—which is to say, of authors whose yearning to teach is unaccompanied by any stock of useful knowledge. I have read such books that were downright idiotic, and I have read others that were palpably dangerous. What ails most of them is simply the fact that their authors are moralists first and scientists only afterward. Dealing with a subject in which only the plain and unequivocal facts can be of any imaginable value, they swathe those facts in such endless yards of pious rubbish that not even a curious puella, sharp though her wits may be, can be expected to penetrate to them.

Irrelevant Conclusions.

Several common defects run through these lamentable tomes. One is the thumping non sequitur that is in them—the gross disparity between their premises and their conclusions. They start off with attempts to show that the phenomena of sex in the lower organisms—usually dahlias, herring or frogs—are beautiful and instructive, and they close with horrible warnings that the phenomena of sex in man are ugly and not to be mentioned. I do not forget, of course, their frequent high praise of maternity, their florid descriptions of the ineffable joys of philoprogenitiveness. But maternity, as they picture it, is scarcely more sexual than playing the piano. It is, in fact, set up as something definitely anti-sexual—as a boon that must be forfeited if sex is yielded to.

I do not know how this conflict is to be got around. It may present, indeed, a difficulty that no one will ever surmount. All I presume to do is to point out that the authors of the sex hygiene books have certainly not disposed of it, and that most of them seem to be happily unaware that it exists. First they describe romantically the mating of the calla lilies and the June bugs, and then they plunge furiously into their revolting treatises upon ophthalmia neonatorum, lues, kissing games, necking, and the dance. First they paint a

GOOD Morning!

Memories of the month's best movies
Glide across our minds today.
Memories now, but each helped brighten
One hour of a busy day.

How's that for poetry? (Not so good? Sorry, but it's the best we have this morning.) Taking to prose—played the demure heroine in "Not So Long Ago."

BETTY BRONSON

"NOT SO LONG AGO" was a pleasant, old fashioned conceit, wasn't it? Ricardo Cortez and Betty Bronson, coiffed, sideburned, and costumed as was the fashion in the early '50s, made a charmingly romantic pair, and the picture as a whole had a sort of grandmother's garden fragrance.

"THE DESERT FLOWER" was Colleen Moore's latest—the picture she almost broke her neck making, if you remember. It gave here the sort of hoydenish, Cinderella rôle she loves to play, and her Maggie of the box car was a lovable gamin. The Colleen fans loved it, and it was a pretty nice, interesting little comedy drama.

"WILD, WILD SUSAN" presented Bebe Daniels and Rod La Rocque in hilarious comedy, enjoying themselves and their picture a lot and bringing laughs to the lips of laughter lovers. (THAT is a good line, if you want to know it!)

"SIEGE" was one of those unexpectedly good program pictures that emerge now and then to rejoice eyes that have been gazing on a horde of mediocre offerings. It was from the novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams and was, I quote myself, "a swift and dramatic offering full of meat and good acting." The honors for acting went to Mary Alden, but a fine cast headed by Virginia Valli and Eugene O'Brien helped her put the picture over with a bang.

"DON Q., SON OF ZORRO"—Douglas Fairbanks in what many will say is his greatest picture. Sequel to "The Mark of Zorro" and chockful of remarkable action and peppy romance that transpires for the most part in Spain. Thrilling, really!

* *

"THE TALKER" you will remember as the picture in which a married woman, discontented with her quiet suburban life, takes her discontent out in saying a lot of things she doesn't in the least mean. Mere words that a young sister-in-law believes to be gospel and takes for her creed and code. A serious little program photoplay with a moral

Choir and Concert Are Berlin Summer

By Edward Moore.

BERLIN.—[Special Correspondence.]—Berlin, like the rest of Europe, is taking its summer siesta in music just at present. Consequently there is little to hear, but quite a little to hear about. The Dom choir sings each Sunday here. It is under the care of the same Hugo Ruedel whom I spoke about in my last communication as having accomplished such marvels with the chorus at Bayreuth, and it does as much in sacred music as the Bayreuth organization does with Wagnerian scores. That, and the public concerts by orchestras and bands in the Tiergarten and other parks, constitute about the only music to be heard just now.

CLAIRE DUX,
Just now one of the busiest of Berlin musicians.

Wherever one goes in France or Germany, one is told of the surprisingly small amount of promising operatic talent. Judging by what performances I have been able to hear, the report seems to be correct. Just why the condition should be so nearly universal is a little difficult to figure out. Of course, the war made an appalling slaughter among the young men and gave the survivors a nervous shock that keeps many from being musically fit even now, but the same condition applies to the women.

Out of all the people that sing in opera during ten months of the year in Germany, I am told of only one who shows signs of being outstanding. She is Gertrude Geyersbach, a young soprano who came from humble beginnings and is pushing herself forward by sheer talent and personality. One of these days she may be with the Chicago Opera company, but probably not this year. By the way, I am told that Gabriel Grovlez, the conductor of the Paris opera, he with the exceedingly calm manner before the orchestra, is coming back to Chicago this season to conduct the French works.

One thing is certain. You will hear far better solo singing at the Chicago opera, infinitely better at Ravinia as it was during the two weeks before I left, than you will in wandering up and down the length and breadth of France and Germany. I have not had a look at Italy yet, but there is reason to believe that there is little very different there.

Yes, It's the Place for Young Artists.

But I am beginning to realize that the people who say Europe is a better place than America for young artists are absolutely correct. There are means for getting operatic training here such as American never heard of. In Germany alone there are no less than 142 opera houses which, as I have just said, run for ten months in the year. Each is in effect a stock company, and each presents a highly varied repertoire. A member of one of those companies will get some invaluable routine and a salary which, while not large, is a good deal better now than it was two years ago, and runs for the full year.

Opera as an industry is certainly not on a decline. The Berlin Volksoper, it is true, had to close for lack of funds, but Bruno Walter is taking over the large theater in Charlottenburg, which will be opened this fall under the name of

GIVING A NEW ANGLE TO THE FALL OF EVE

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—John Emerson and Anita Loos, who work mostly with the other medium, the cinema, occasionally stop long enough in their interesting careers to write a play.

Last year, you may remember, they did one called "The Whole Town's Talking." This week they produced another entitled "The Fall of Eve."

In this new play, which is a pertinent and timely comedy brightly overwritten, they create rather an amusing situation and present an interesting query. Why, they ask in effect, why should opportunity invariably spell consent and circumstances always be accepted as convincing evidence of guilt in certain social sets?

RUTH GORDON plays the dumb wife in "The Fall of Eve."
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

Why should the unmarried man and woman, unmarried to each other at least, placed in circumstances conceivably suspicious but actually harmless, always be suspected of the worst that could happen? Is it not possible that such a pair could spend an entire night practically unchaperoned in any house and emerge next day with honor intact and consciences clear?

This Is How the Story Goes.

The story of Eve is that of an amusing dumb Dora married to an ambitious and loyal young lawyer who numbers the most wiggly of the movie vamps among his clients and is forced to spend much time with her adjusting her income tax and things like that. The fact that these meetings occur in Great Neck, L. I., is not reassuring.

Eve finally suspects the worst and, egged on by her catty and sexy friends, leaves her Ted. To bridge the quarrel and keep Eve from running home to her mother, two bachelor friends of the couple hold her in their apartment by doubling the gin in her cocktails before dinner and giving her champagne afterward.

She falls asleep on the davenport in the arms of one friendly bachelor, awakes later to imagine she is home, is unable to remember details next day, and immediately suspects she has been seriously compromised. It takes two acts to convince her that she is not violating all the moral codes if she goes back to the husband she loves.

Ruth Gordon is largely responsible for the success of the piece to date. The smart crowd likes her, and she is unapproachable in playing the dumb but loyal child wife. Her mask is that of a miniature Siddons, and her comedy is so pathetically true that it clings tenuously to the fringe of tragedy. In the cast with her are Reginald Mason, Claude King, Cora Witherspoon, and Arthur Albertson.

Why the Title?

That rascal of the boulevards, Albert Herman Woods, has made his season's bow with a farce called "The Kiss in the Taxi," which, as you might know, has little to do with kissing and nothing at all with the popular custom as it is practiced in taxis.

Formerly, and in France, the piece was known as "The

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

SOME of the agreeable identities of the stage are returned to Chicago in the week's new entertainments, joining Miss Janis, the Misses Duncan, and Mr. Hitchcock in the current assemblage of somebodies. . . .

For one, there is Ed Wynn, a better Bailiff of nonsense than Bailiff, himself, and my pet buffoon. That is, of course, he is my pet buffoon when I'm in attendance on him: that is the way with most of us when we are seeking to isolate and index the performers. And the labels we paste on them depend on what they happen to be doing. Miss Barrymore seems to us to be the First Actress when she has a rôle she plays better than anybody else could play it; and that is true of Miss Laurette Taylor, of Mrs. Fiske, of Miss Grace George, and of all of them: each is the First Actress in like conditions. . . .

MISS FLORENCE PARKER
She's with Ed Wynn in his new show, "The Grab-Bag."

That is true of the jesters, also: that one is the best who happens to be pleasing us when we make up the list. Nobody else on earth—no: not even Arthur Brisbane—seems as funny to me as William Collier when William Collier is at his best in a good part. He goes his way; and then I swear by Sam Bernard, or Miss Beatrice Lillie, or Al Jolson, or Mr. Hitchcock, or whoever is making me laugh at the time I'm swearing. It may be Weber and Fields, whom I have ever regarded as a single identity: neither is complete in himself. . . .

I know that this week the First Jester will be Mr. Wynn, who has many advantages. One is that he doesn't come round too often: by the time he returns, appetite for him is again on edge. Another is that he doesn't undertake what he can't do;—and I doubt that he ever will, although there is no telling about a funny-man. It is a long, long time since I first encountered Mr. Wynn: 'twas in a variety-show, wherein he was teamed with a blond chap whose name, I think, was Lewis; and I don't yet know whether Mr. Wynn is able to sing or to dance. As to his jesting, it is, in its implications, more complimentary to the public than that of any other buffoon in our theater. Lest this seem to be going too far, it is to be kept in mind that, in the lingo of his calling, "he writes his own stuff."

Other Somebodies of the Week.

Little Mr. Truex is surely high among the somebodies—not because good rôles come along to accommodate his physique, but because he is a good actor when he goes into those rôles. He would be a sad performer if told off to play Macbeth or Charles Surface or Œdipus or the poet in "Candida"; and he is pretty much all that God means an actor to be when he has rôles such as he acted in "The Dummy," "New Toys," "The Very Idea!" and "Six-Cylinder Love." . . .

Mitzi, too, is a somebody by virtue of talents shrewdly used. Give a soubrette's part to her, and she will do wonders

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

APPLIED SCIENCE—FLYING.

MODERN aircraft are capable of astounding performances. They can carry loads of upwards of 24 tons, fly at 200 miles an hour, over distances of over 1,000 miles without stopping, rise to heights as great as Mount Everest. Daily they fly from end to end of Europe and from the Atlantic to the Pacific across the United States of America.

The state of the weather is a certain handicap to airmen, but immense strides are being made both in the organization of local reports and also in overcoming difficulties. The only real weather danger when flying is fog. On several occasions when the wind has been so rough that the cross-channel steamers have been storm bound in harbor aircraft have safely made the journey between London and Paris. When the country is fog bound flying becomes a different matter. It is not the actual flying that is interfered with, for pilots can control machines perfectly well while in the air, even in foggy weather, but it is the danger of not being able to see the ground beneath, and therefore not being able to choose a safe spot in the event of a forced landing, that makes flying in fog dangerous. Even when the journey is accomplished, as is normally the case, without a forced landing, the pilot finds it impossible to pick out the aerodrome, and may quite well hit a building or a hedge or overshoot the mark when endeavoring to land.

The system of weather reporting employed on the airways between London and Paris is simple in the extreme. Reports are sent in from the intermediate stations by wireless at frequent intervals and are posted up at all the aerodromes en route. Before starting on any particular flight the pilot can always obtain the exact report of the weather conditions then prevailing at all points on his route. As in other things, it is the man who counts as much as the machine. The difficulties encountered sometimes demand courage, skill, and resource on the part of the pilot. We may give one instance. On an occasion during the winter of 1921 when the weather was extremely foggy on the London-Paris route meteorological information come through to the aerodrome at Paris that the route was covered in mist, but there was a chance of it clearing later.

Three machines, two British and one French, decided to attempt the journey, and with full loads of passengers left Le Bourget aerodrome. The French machine landed at Poix when less than a third of the journey had been done, the pilot being unable to stand the strain of flying with only occasional glimpses of the ground and not knowing where he would land if his engine cut out. The two British machines continued their journey until the channel was reached, when the fog descended lower and lower until both were crossing the water at a height where the machines almost grazed the masts of the occasional ships over which they passed. Mackintosh, the pilot of the Handley Page, decided as it was so foggy a few feet from the earth he would be no worse off higher up. He pushed up the nose of his machine and climbed some thousands of feet into the fog filled air. The other machine crept on, feeling its way across the channel, until it crossed the coast near Folkestone. By that time the suspense had almost worn out the pilot, and having accomplished the most important part of his journey and got his passengers across the channel, he landed at Lympne.

Landing in Fog.

By means of steering on a compass course, and by the guidance he received through his wireless, Mackintosh flew on with his load of passengers until he was over Croydon aerodrome. He knew he was over the aerodrome by the wireless signals he was receiving from below, so he throttled back his engine, pushed down the nose of his machine, and hoped that as he dropped to earth the fog would become clearer and he would be able to sight the aerodrome and land gradually. The altimeter dropped to 3,000, 2,000, 1,000, and 500 feet, but still he was wrapped in a dense mist. On his wireless he was conversing continually with the people on the ground who were endeavoring to guide him to earth. On the ground the sound of the motors could be plainly heard as the Handley Page circled 'round and 'round, vainly endeavoring to get a glimpse of the earth so that it could come down. Rockets were fired into the air to give some guidance, but without success. All they could do was to wait and hope for the best.

The men waiting by the motor ambulance started up the engine and got ready their first aid appliances. As the fog extended right down to the surface of the ground, it did not appear possible that Mackintosh would be able to bring down the machine in safety, and with nine people on board there seemed every likelihood of a dangerous crash. For some twenty minutes the drone of the engines continued, getting fainter as the machine moved away and growing stronger as it came back to the aerodrome under the guidance of the wireless.

At last the roar suddenly died down to a whisper, and as the waiting officials looked at each other, expecting every minute to hear the sound of the crash, the huge machine suddenly loomed out of the fog and landed literally at their feet outside the custom house. When the door of the aeroplane was unlocked the passengers came out one by one, quite unperturbed, not realizing that they had been in any danger, and wondering what all the fuss was about.

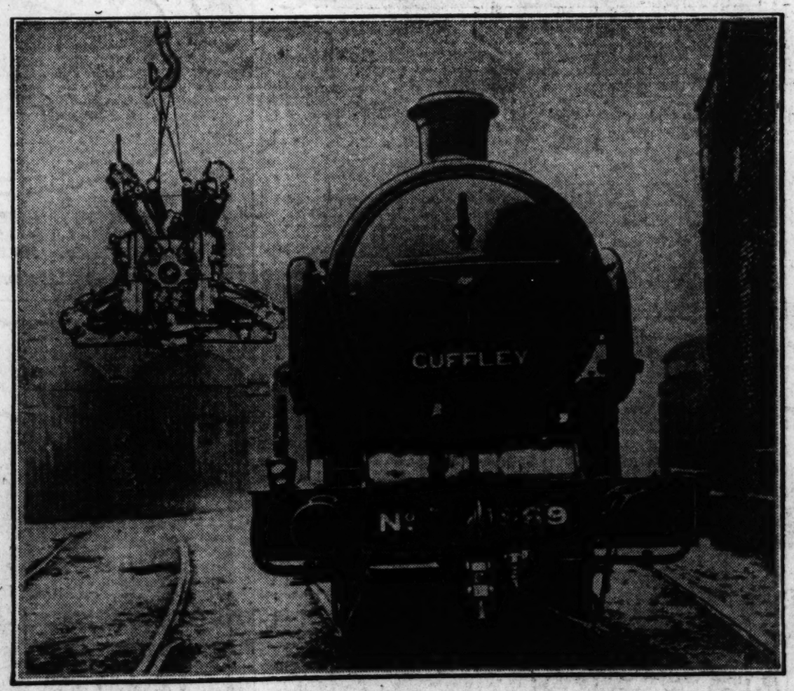
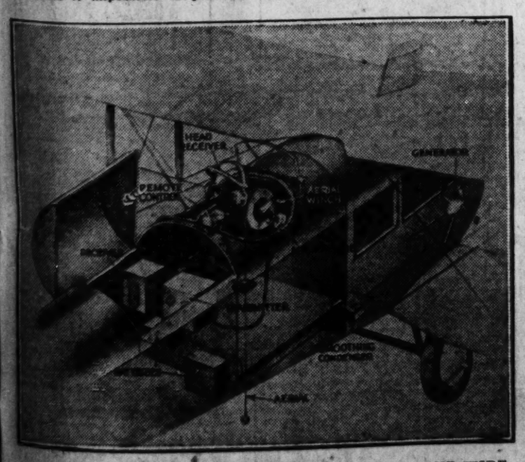
Wireless and Civil Aviation.

Wireless telegraphy and telephony, of course, are important factors in modern flying. The civilian pilot resorts to them before commencing a flight, to find out weather conditions along the route; he reports progress by wireless from the air as he flies at 100 m. p. h.; he announces the time of his probable arrival if he wants the ground illuminated for a night landing; he is guided on his way by wireless if he flies in fog; he converses with the pilots of other aircraft by means of his wireless telephone. In the future it is quite possible that aircraft will be entirely controlled by wireless from the ground, whilst motive power may well be transmitted from ground stations to the machine in flight. The future of flying and wireless are bound together.

The first requisite of a good commercial airplane is the ability to carry a heavy load at low cost. In other words, the weight carried must be kept up whilst the engine power is kept down. The next essential is speed; then comes slow landing, so that the machine may be brought down safely at any spot in the event of a forced landing. Rapidity of climbing power, the quality of being easy to maneuver, and ability to fly to great altitudes need not be considered when commercial aircraft are being designed.



A COMPARISON IN SIZES, SHOWING THE 1,000 H. P. NAPIER "CUB" AERO ENGINE WHICH WEIGHS ABOUT 1,700 POUNDS, AND A 1,000 H. P. LOCOMOTIVE WEIGHING SEVERAL TONS.—The eventual aero engine will probably be of a new type—possibly an electric motor, to which power will be transmitted by wireless from stations on the ground.



THE ARRANGEMENT OF WIRELESS TELEPHONE AND WIRELESS-TELEGRAPH APPARATUS IN AN AIRPLANE.—The aerial wire is kept rolled up on a drum, and is paid out by the pilot when he wishes to send or receive a message. Speech can be transmitted from such apparatus for fifty miles or more. The electric current required is supplied by the generator, which is driven by the air rushing past the airplane. To obviate the terrific noise of the engine, the observer wears a helmet, and the telephone receivers fit over his ears in india rubber cups.

[By permission of Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Co., Ltd.]

Though aircraft are undoubtedly growing more and more essential as military weapons of defense and offense, there is no doubt that their greatest future lies in civilian spheres. At the present time we are gradually feeling our way, until the time when better machines, better knowledge of the air, better organizations, and more public support enable us to cover the earth with a net work of airways. There is reasonable hope that in the not distant future all mails will be air borne and much of the long distance passenger traffic will be by air. The carriage of heavy goods and short distance passenger traffic is another matter; it is probable that for many years to come the bulk of this traffic will be carried by older methods of transport.

Finding the Way in the Air.

The first thing to be done before civil flying becomes an everyday matter is the marking out of the aerial routes which will be used. These should be provided with small emergency landing grounds at intervals of ten to twenty miles, so that aircraft can always have a clear spot in which to land, no matter what the emergency. These aerodomes must be fitted up with ground lights so that pilots in charge of night flying machines will have the same advantages as pilots flying by day. There is little need to signpost the air by means of kite balloons or searchlight signals, as has sometimes been suggested, for with the development of wireless for direction finding and of efficient maps, any pilot can find his way with ease.

There are several methods of finding the way in the air. The first of these is for the pilot to compare the ground over which he flies with his map. This is the simplest and most accurate, but can only be used when the atmosphere is clear and the ground beneath visible. The second method is to work out the correct compass bearing before starting a flight, and then proceed solely by means of compass guidance until the destination is reached. Unfortunately the currents of air tend to make an airplane drift out of its course, so that the pilot flying on a compass course has occasionally to check his position by comparing his map and the ground. The third and most up-to-date method is by wireless direction finding, by means of which signals are sent out when requested by the pilot from one or more ground stations and the direction of the currents marked by the pilot on the map; the point where these lines intersect is his position at the time.

How an Airplane Flies.

One serious problem which confronts the man who is likely to use a private airplane is the question of aerodrome accommodation. An aerodrome large enough to accommodate all types of aircraft must have a minimum area of about sixty acres. Needless to say, each man cannot have his own aerodrome, but it is suggested that each village will have its own landing ground and that the users of private airplanes will proceed to the aerodrome when they wish to fly.

The method by which an airplane flies is similar to that which maintains a kite in the air. A kite is pulled against the wind by a string to get air pressure, the wind tending to blow the kite away and the string to hold it back. The result is that as long as the wind and the pull remain constant, the kite tends to rise. In an airplane the "string" which pulls the kite is replaced by an airscrew. With a kite, if the center of the pressure is altered, it dips and swerves. In an airplane a similar thing happens, causing the airplane to be "bumped." Birds have this trouble also. Rooks landing on a windy day are often tilted off their balance and have either to try again or "land" badly. In the air they may be noticed adjusting themselves to the "bumps" caused by sudden alteration in the center of air pressure.

So far as flying is concerned, the wings are the most important part of an airplane. They may be one, two, or more sets of planes according to the type of machine—monoplane, biplane, triplane, etc. These planes are slightly curved, the apex of the curve being nearer the front edge than the rear edge of the wing. The thickness of the plane also varies, for it gains in breadth somewhat abruptly from the front to the apex of the curve, and then narrows down gradually to the rear of the plane.

When in flight this wing is not absolutely parallel to the path of flight, but is slightly tilted so that the wind blows against its undersurface. The rush of air round the wing sets up pressure on the underside and suction on the top surface, the so-called "lift" of a wing being about two-thirds suction and one-third pressure. In order to keep up the flow of air round the wings an airplane has to be fitted with a motor, an internal combustion engine built on similar principles to the engine of a motor car. This engine revolves the air-screw which either pulls or pushes the wings through the air and so causes the necessary lift to be set up.

What the Pilot Does.

The control of an airplane is simple in the extreme. There are two levers for the use of the pilot, one an upright control lever known as the "joy-stick," which works the elevator and ailerons or wing-flaps, the other a rudder bar, set near the floor of the machine and operated by the pilot's feet. In addition there are the ordinary switch, and ignition, and throttle controls for the engine, which at present is always of the internal combustion type.

The principle of the internal combustion aero engine is as follows: Though types vary in themselves, all work on the four stroke or Otto cycle principle. The action of the engine is divided into four operations, each operation occupying one stroke of the piston. The first stroke sucks a mixture of petrol gas and air into the cylinder, the second compresses the gas as the piston moves up the cylinder.

Just before the compression is at its greatest, an electric spark, produced by a magneto, or batteries, and conducted to the cylinder through a sparking plug, explodes the compressed gas, and the expansion of the burnt gas forces the piston down the cylinder again, the energy being transmitted to a flywheel which keeps the revolutions regular. The fourth action of the piston expels the burnt gas from the cylinder. At the fifth stroke the cycle of operations recommences. These strokes are called, in the order given above, the induction or sucking-in stroke, the compression stroke, the ignition or power stroke, and the exhaust stroke. Aero engines are of three main types, stationary, radial, and rotating cylinder, generally called rotary.

In rising, a pilot opens out his engine until the airplane is moving across the ground at a sufficient speed; he then gently draws the control lever in towards him, and in so doing moves the elevator which causes the airplane to rise into the air. When sufficient height has been attained, a slight movement forward of the control lever causes the airplane to flattan out and fly on an even keel. When turning, the pilot simultaneously presses his foot on the rudder bar, thus moving over the rudder, and at the same time moves the control level in the same direction. This movement of the control lever operates the ailerons or wing flaps, so that the airplane tilts up slightly on one wing tip, and is therefore able to turn more easily and more safely than if it made a flat turn with the rudder alone. When the turn has been made, the operations are reversed and the airplane again brought on an even keel. To descend, the pilot throttles back the engine, simultaneously pushing forward the control lever, this moving the elevator so that the machine dips downwards and glides towards earth. When a few feet from the ground he gently moves back the control lever, so that the airplane assumes a horizontal position, and as it loses speed with the engine throttled right back and the propeller turning very slowly, it sinks gently to earth and runs along the ground to a standstill.

A glide can be made in any direction, but the landing itself should be made "up wind." The landing speed of airplanes varies according to the type, some coming to earth at about 30 m. p. h. and others at nearly 100 m. p. h. Probably an average is 50-55 m. p. h.

ACTING ONE OF THE BAD 'UNS

MISS EDNA HIBBARD

SHE has been in Chicago in one thing and another—but one thing and another that didn't hold up. Thus, she was in "Rock-a-Bye Baby!" and in "The Rear Car" and in "Peacocks"; and these were not important at the box-office. . . . Miss Hibbard comes now in "Ladies of the Evening," wherein she was cast as an outcast in its New-York run, last season.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

in subjugating it to a personality that seemed hopelessly alien when first she came among us. She seems to yearn at times to be something else than a soubrette,—as if she preferred, maybe, to be an ingénue with emotional trim and a sideline of heroics,—although a soubrette is a pretty-good thing for an actress to be: we haven't so many who are in the lotta-catnip grade. . . .

Miss Wood, who comes to be Candida, is a somebody when the reporters in New-York write about her; but she has, as yet, managed to escape me when she has been manifesting importantly. Anyway, here's hoping that she will be good in Shaw's comedy, which I have seen played well, fairly well, and badly, although to play it badly requires a special technique, so knowingly and astutely does the Irishman write for the actors. . . . And here's hoping you will like Mr. Lupino, a stranger. I have seen him in many parts in London, where he is adored. He is a Cockney variant of what Eddie Foy was twenty years ago—a loose, untidy funmaker whose precept of performing is to get the laughs.

Question.

George M. Cohan, who seems to make most of his announcements in Chicago these days, is now talking about a Cohan revue. He adds, however, that he will probably produce it first in Chicago; since that city would understand it better than New-York. It is hard to figure just what kind of revue that would be. Maybe, somebody from Chicago can explain.—George S. Kaufman in today's New-York Times.

Mr. Cohan is from Chicago—as far from Chicago as New-York: why not ask him? I should not care to undertake the explanation: whenever (which has been often in the last fifteen years) I talk to anybody about a Chicago revue, I'm always told that the idea would be no good "down there," meaning New-York. . . . Besides, I don't believe Mr. Cohan said anything of the kind.

Miscellany.

Mr. Gest, back from the Salzburg Festival, sends about a thousand words to tell me that he expects to bring the opera-wing of the Moscow Art Theater to this country in December, and that Max Reinhardt will not come over this season. Also, that "American art and the American theater lead the world today!"

Miss Mary Newcomb reëmerges from domesticity to take over the principal part in something named "Tsu-Tsan; or, The Bridge of Distance," by John and Ella Scrymgour, English persons who have resided long in China. . . . Miss Newcomb's rôle is one proffered to Miss Francine Larrimore.

More Chinese stuff for the new season is named "Flower of Heaven," to be done in New-York in one of that city's ever-increasing supply of hide-aways.

It is told that James Gleason and Ernest Truex are joining up as a firm of producers, and will start with a play called "The Sheep-Herder." . . . Numerous actors seem to be writing plays; numerous actors seem to thfnk they would be successful as producers; and numerous actors are apparently of the belief that the Almighty really put them on earth to be directors of other actors. Mr. Gleason's success since the New-York première, last Winter, of "Is Zat-So?" appears to have gone to the head of all his colleagues.

And Wilton Lackaye is in the new issue of Variety with an ad saying that he is setting up an atelier wherein he will give lessons to other actors who may feel the need of his tuition. . . . I know no actor who knows more than Mr. Lackaye knows about the part of acting; and that isn't to say that he possesses the important faculty of being able to impart what he knows to those who know less. Indeed, he hasn't been as successful as I should wish him to have been in imparting his knowledge of acting to the public my high regard for his talent isn't shared by many theater-goers, so far as I know. I've always felt that Opportunity made a hostile call when it knocked at his door to tell him that he might have the rôle of Svengali when the play of "Trilby" was in preparation. The actor engaged for the rôle, the late E. J. Henley, was temporarily out of voice; and Mr. Lackaye was next choice. Others who try to write the annals of the theater will tell you that the part made him; but I know that it unmade him. It was an actor-proof part. Not only has he been a better actor in other parts without the public's realizing it: other actors (including the late Beerbohm Tree) who played Svengali better than Lackaye played it never got the credit for doing it so well as he did it.

Moreover, Augustus Thomas, who has been a good dramatist and a good director of the actors engaged for his plays, is about to resume an earlier vocation, and take up the principal man's part in his new piece, "Still Water." Bulletins on the subject explain that this will be his first appearance as an actor in thirty-five years; and that isn't just so. Chance took me about four years ago, in New-York, to see a play of his, "Nemesis," one of the string of nights when he was acting the principal part in the illness of Emmett Corrigan. . . . I thought Mr. Thomas rather ham as an actor. Of course, the occasion was an emergency; but, then, persons who saw him when acting was his method of livelihood tell me that he was rather ham.

The Messrs. Shubert say they will have not fewer than eight casts singing "The Student-Prince" this season. . . . This, I should guess, is the record for operetta since the merry days when any manager with a ten-dollar bill organized a company to sing "The Mikado."

Ravinia's Season Closes Tomorrow

By Martin Stevers.

TOMORROW night's gala performance, with which Ravinia closes until next June, is Chicago's last chance for the year to hear opera under the delightful conditions obtaining at Louis Eckstein's north shore summer haven for music lovers—a statement which is no news to anybody. But also it closes a season which, from the more technical viewpoint, has amounted almost to a landmark in the annals of opera. For this has been the season in which Ravinia has solved, with complete success, that problem of problems in American opera giving—the problem of packing the house night after night, and week after week, with average Americans who come for the sheer pleasure they get out of it.

And that, perhaps, is the greatest achievement of all, in a season of many triumphs, for by achieving it Ravinia has proved to the world that opera can and will be made a native American entertainment whenever the bugaboo of opera giving is attacked in the way Ravinia has attacked it this year.

What is this secret of attracting Americans to opera and how has Ravinia solved it so successfully this summer?

The story has many angles—some of them features of this season, some of them reaching far back into the years when Mr. Eckstein first took hold out on the north shore. Foremost among them is the all-important matter of the company, for without artists of the first order there can be no opera worth hearing. And on this feature Mr. Eckstein, after years spent in winning one artist from summer connections here, getting another there and holding them year after year against competition from South American and other centers, has achieved a company which really is incomparable.

Masterly Casting.

Another element of Mr. Eckstein's genius as an impresario was his lavish casting of principals. Consider the case of Martinelli, for one example. Traveled music lovers will tell of most exorbitant prices offered vainly for chances to hear him in New York and Paris. But Mr. Eckstein cast him, and Martinelli gave himself enthusiastically, for twenty-two full length performances—which meant that Chicago music lovers could hear the supreme genius of dramatic song and action at popular prices as often as his iron strength permitted him to appear. Likewise Lucrezia Bori, Rosa Raisa, Titto Schipa, Mario Chamlee, Ina Bourskaya, Leon Rothier—all worked to the limit of human endurance with approximately twenty full length appearances or more apiece, to help give superlative value to the performances.

And last but by no means least in the artistic ingredients of the season, what opera house could ask better than the Chicago Symphony orchestra, with Gennaro Papi and Louis Hasselmans as operatic conductors, to provide the instrumental music? Or the services of Armando Agnini, with his remarkable ability in devising settings and chorus work?

Using Them Well.

But it is one thing to have artists and another to use them well in the all-important matter of répertoire. But here is where Mr. Eckstein's genius as an impresario revealed itself to greatest effect—and his dynamic ability to get things done as well. In a season of ten weeks and three days Ravinia presented twenty-eight different operas, featuring several world debuts in rôles by outstanding artists, and added four works to its répertoire—three of them practically new to modern Chicago—as well. These were Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," a flourishing work which Chicago has not heard in something like fifteen years; Verdi's "Il Ballo in Maschera," and the all-too-neglected opera bouffe, "Don Pasquale."

These are some of the easily understood factors in Ravinia's triumphal season. But they are not all, by any means. Even with outstanding artists, broad répertoire, and superlative orchestra, an opera season might be a failure—particularly in America, where the appeal of opera is comparatively limited.

Ravinia's success this year rests upon something more—a mysterious something which, for lack of a better name, I call showmanship. It was in showmanship, I believe, more than in anything else, that Ravinia this year achieved its triumph.

Feats in Showmanship.

Then there were the novelties, particularly "Manon Lescaut" and "Masked Ball." In both of these Martinelli carried the tenor lead with amazing power, vis-à-vis Bori in one and Raisa in the other. But the other principals also lent amazing power to the effect. One of Rimini's outstanding performances was his work as Lescaut, and D'Angelo gave rare conviction to Geronte, in the former opus, while ensemble never had better bass support than Lazzari gave in the latter, and Danise's Renato, Macbeth's Oscar, and Bourskaya's Ulrica were superb.

And for a final example of Ravinia's showmanship let me cite the delightful treatment of comedies. Of these Ravinia used five—"Martha," "Barber of Seville," "Elixir of Love," "Tales of Hoffman," and "Don Pasquale"—with a total of twelve performances, exclusive of gala presentations. And the artistry showed not merely in generous provision of such works but even more in the treatment of them, in the intense joy the company took in evoking the heartiest laughter at every opportunity.

And that is what Americans want in comedy. After all, comedy is comedy, whether on the grand opera stage or anywhere else, and the measure of its success is the laughs it gets. And there was laughter a-plenty at Ravinia—so there you have one last facet of the way in which Mr. Eckstein and his artists grip the average American with their performances.

And perhaps, after all, the season was an outstanding success because of the sheer artistry of the principals and performances. Those who heard the exquisite song and saw the irresistible appeal of Bori in her many performances; felt the power of Raisa in her world premiere as Cio-Cio-San in "Madame Butterfly"; heard Martinelli scale the heights of dramatic tenority in "Pagliacci," revoled in the beauty of Schipa's renditions, need no explanation of the season. It was a season of beauty supreme—and what more need be said than that?

DEBUT IN MILAN

EDITH MASON POLACCO AND GRAZIA.

HERE is the first picture of Grazia Edith Polacco, daughter of Giorgio Polacco and Edith Mason of the Chicago Civic opera. It was snapped in hospital at Milan, Italy, two days after the young woman's arrival on June 23, and was sent here by Edward Moore, music critic of The Tribune, who is writing a weekly letter from abroad this summer.

the Stadt-Oper, and which is an entirely different organization from the Staatsoper, the former royal opera down on Unter den Linden. That one is under the control of Schillings, and has his wife, Barbara Kemp, as principal singer.

Doubt About Bayreuth.

Bayreuth has also been doing its educational bit. Quite a number of students and young artists, several Americans among them, are taken for the chorus and occasional small parts, given board and room but no salary, gaining, however, invaluable training in the rehearsals and four weeks' season.

There seems to be a bit of doubt as to whether Bayreuth will ever open again after this season. If it does, it will quite possibly be in other hands than those of the Wagner family. Frau Cosima is so old and feeble as to be entirely and permanently out of the picture, and Siegfried's executive ability has not been so marked as to make him a distinguished figure among operatic directors. There is a growing desire to have the concern taken over by other musicians and run according to the Wagner traditions, but with new blood. It will also require some new financing, another rather serious problem.

Dux Hard at Work.

One of the busiest people among Berlin musicians is Germany's most favored singer, Claire Dux, who has laid out a season for herself as artist and manager that would tax the most vigorous. Just now she is starting rehearsals with her own company in the Lecocq comic opera called here "Mamselle Angot," and elsewhere "La Fille de Mme. Angot." It will open at the Metropol theater early in September. Miss Dux will sing fifty performances, then turn over her rôle to another singer and go concertizing. About thirty appearances between here and Spain are on her schedule. If there is any spare time in between these she will make other occasional appearances in "Mamselle Angot," and she has been invited to do a number of special radio concerts, which, by the way, are run on a quite different basis from those in America.

About the middle of December she will sail for America, where forty more concerts and recitals are awaiting her. In May she plans to use the Metropol theater again for a season of French and Italian opera with international casts, herself included. After that I am not sure, but I think she plans to take a vacation.

Radio Under Control.

The radio-concerts, in fact all radio activities, are under the control of the postoffice department here. Each owner of a machine must have it registered and pay a tax, and if he tries to cheat and put up his own amateur device he is liable to a prison term on the charge of defrauding the government. Miss Dux tells me that artists are engaged for their full concert fee or even higher to give full programs of the best in their répertoires. Paderewski and several others of the same standing have been broadcast and the idea is constantly getting more popular. Just now negotiations are going on for a combination of artistic resources between the radio stations here and those of England, where much the same policy obtains.

Berlin, in fact all Germany, seems to be going quite mad over light music. I just spoke of Miss Dux and "Ma'm'selle Angot." Her personal manager, Arthur Hirsch, has possession of another piece which, though old, is almost a novelty. It is called "Fatme," and it is by the same Flotow who wrote "Martha." From what I can learn, it was produced once in Paris years ago, and was a failure, whereupon Flotow, with a magnificent gesture, threw his manuscript into the fire. There was, however, another copy in the hands of Flotow's copyist, which was not destroyed, and Mr. Hirsch bought this manuscript from a poverty stricken descendant of that copyist in Paris a few months ago. The piece will be brought out in Berlin some time this fall.

American musical pieces also are being eagerly sought. I learned only the other night that German rights to "Rose Marie" had been secured that same day. There are also negotiations for "No, No, Nanette."

One Act Enough.

I saw a German musical comedy a few nights ago at the ancient Berliner theater; that is, I saw part of it. At the end of one act the nerves of Miss Dux, Mrs. Moore, and myself were exhausted, and we left. It is called "Anne Liese von Dessau," with music by one Robert Winterberg, and Marcella Roeseler of the Metropolitan Opera company was singing the leading part.

It is, I am firmly convinced, the worst musical play I ever saw, the most tiresome, draggy, and generally unnecessary. Yet it has run for 250 nights, is still going, and has been bought for American consumption. If "Anne Liese" is a standard, "Rose Marie" and "No, No, Nanette" ought to run about 250 months on the most conservative calculations.

The Germans are also taking most kindly to what they call "yahss," and what we know as jazz. All the hotel orchestras are playing at it and the dance halls do little else. Some of it, I must admit, is a pretty bad imitation of the genuine article, and even the best is in need of a few object lessons by Paul Whiteman. By the way, there is talk of bringing him over, too. I said they were playing at it, which is the correct term, because the art of surprise by unexpected accents and cross rhythms is little known here, though they have imported most of the noise making devices. There is every reason to believe that Whiteman will make the hit of his life if, or when, he comes, for many things American are as popular here as they are in America itself.

I neglected to say in speaking of "Mamselle Angot" that ballet is also on the wave of popularity. Miss Dux has engaged Thamara Karsavina and her dancing partner, Popoff, to head the "Angot" ballet, and advance notices are going up of the coming of Pavlowa and her company, their proceedings to start late this month.

Odds-and-Ends of News About Plays and Players

THE second cast of "Desire Under the Elms," with Frank McGlynn in the principal part, goes into New York: the original cast, headed by Walter Huston, will be sent on tour. . . . Eugene O'Neill's play is expected to be among the things that will "clean-up" this season through the country: its success in New York has been of the so-so kind, with high-brow propoganda, boob curiosity, and the cut-rates as the sustaining factors.

Glenn Hunter's hopes now rest on a play named "Young Woodley," by an Englishman whose pen-name is John Van Druten; and Miss Kathleen McDonell is to have the one feminine part. . . . "The Dark Chapter," the play designed for Mr. Hunter's use this season, seems to have been a hopeless mess when tried out by him.

"The Poor Fish," a play that is said to have taken the interest of various managers without tempting them into the costs of production, is added to the long list of things promised for early exhibition. . . . It appears that an earlier title was "Cyril" (which, somehow, seems to be a more suggestive one than "The Poor Fish"), and that the plan is a satirical tale of a successful business-man.

A piece named "Barnum Was Right," acted two or three years ago in New-York, is being made into a song-play by Philip Bartholomae. . . . And Miss Queenie Smith, who was so good in "Be Yourself!" is soon to do her stuff in a new piece: the title and such are not yet made known.

Novelties in Manhattan.

New things this week in New-York are:

"Outside Looking In," a dramatization by Maxwell Anderson of Jim Tully's autobiographic book about a tramp, "Beggars of Life," with Miss Blyth Daly, Reginald Barlow, and Charles Bickford.

"Mister Pie-Eye," by Don Marquis, author of "The Old Soak," with Charles Lawrence and Mrs. Mina Gleason.

"Cradle-Snatchers," by Russell G. Medcraft and Miss Norma Mitchell, with Miss Mary Boland, Miss Margaret Dale, Miss Edna May Oliver, Humphrey Bogart, Raymond Hackett, and Raymond Guion. . . . The authors are actors.

"Canary Dutch," by Willard Mack, with the author, John Miltern, Ralph Sipperly, Sidney Toler, John Harrington, and Miss Catherine Dale Owen. . . . This is the play which, under its former name of "Alias Santa-Claus," was said to be Mr. Belasco's notion of a new vehicle for David Warfield: the part intended for him is that now acted by Mr. Mack.

"Captain Jinks," Clyde Fitch's comedy made over into a song-play by Laurence Schwab and Frank Mandel, with music by Lewis Gensler and Stephen Jones. Miss Louise Brown, Joe E. Brown, Arthur West, and J. Harold Murray are in the cast. . . . The piece is reported from Philadelphia to be a success.

"All Dressed Up," by Arthur Richman, with Norman Trevor, Louis Bennison, Miss Kay Johnson, James Crane, Miss Lillian Kemble-Cooper, and T. Wygney Percival.

"The Dagger," by Miss Marian Wightman, with Ralph Morgan, Miss Sara Sothern, Charles Richman, John F. Hamilton, Orlando Daly, and Miss Isabel Leighton.

"Love's Call," by Joseph Byron Totten, with Miss Galina Kopernak, Miss Norma Phillips, and Mitchell Harris.

"Courting," by A. Kenward Mathews, with a company of imported players said to be expert in the use of the Scottish dialects.

NEW PLAYBILLS IN CHICAGO

"Easy Terms" in the Playhouse.—A comedy about the trials of a family-man who buys on instalments in the effort to keep pace with his wife's exactions. Crane Wilbur, author of "The Monster," wrote it; and he is in the cast, with Miss Suzanne Caubet [Mrs. Wilbur], Donald Meek, Miss Mabel Montgomery, and Miss Jeffreys Lewis. . . . Opened last night.

"Naughty Riquette," with Mitzi, in the Apollo.—An operetta with music by Oscar Straus, who composed "The Chocolate Soldier" and "The Waltz-Dream." Harry B. Smith has made the libretto over from a German original. The piece has been tried out in Detroit, where Mitzi went into the cast last week. Stanley Lupino, a comedian popular in London, makes his first Chicago appearance in the cast. . . . Opens tonight.

"The Fall-Guy," with Ernest Truex, in the Adelphi.—A play of Manhattan low-life by James Gleason and George Abbott which has been through a run in New-York. The critics there said it was good. Miss Beatrice Noyes is one of the original cast retained for the Chicago engagement. . . . Opens tonight.

Ed Wynn in "The Grab-Bag" in the Illinois.—Another of the entertainments devised and put together by the star, who has not been in Chicago since the Autumn of 1922. The New-York reporters said "The Grab-Bag" was even better than "The Perfect Fool." . . . Opens tonight.

"Candida" in the Princess.—Shaw's comedy as revived by the Actors' Theater of New-York, with Miss Peggy Wood in the title-rôle, Morgan Farley as the poet, and Harry C. Browne as the preacher. . . . Opens tomorrow night. (Is Zat So?" will be acted tonight in the Princess for the final time in a run of twenty-eight weeks.)

"Ladies of the Evening" in the Blackstone.—A play by Milton Herbert Gropper about a retrieved street-walker. It was highly successful last season in New-York, where Mr. Belasco was called upon to defend it at the time when there was so much fun about a play-jury and about the district-attorney as a censor of the theaters. Miss Beth Merrill, Miss Edna Hibbard, Leslie Austen, and Vernon Steele are in it. . . . Opens tonight.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14:

"Kosher Kitty Kelly" in the Cort.—This is a play, with songs, by Leon De Costa that has been running in New-York since mid-June. The ingredients were some time since described in THE TRIBUNE by Mr. Mantle as those of "Abie's Irish Rose."

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20:

"Tell Me More!" in the Selwyn.—A song-play with music by George Gershwin which has had a showing in New-York. Lou Holtz appears to have the principal part.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 27:

Eddie Cantor in "Kid Boots" in the Woods.—A show that ran a year or so in New York, where it was in high favor. Miss Mary Eaton and Miss Jobyna Howland are in it.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 5:

"Rain," with Miss Jane Eagels, in the Harris.—This at length is a definite bulletin on a play first acted in New-York three years ago.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 12:

"What Price Glory!" in the Studebaker.—The celebrated piece by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson about the Marines in France, with, it is promised, the New-York cast.

AND SHE HASN'T ONE SONG!

MISS PEGGY WOOD

SHE'S known hereabout by those who know her at all as of the song-shows, although she acted in the songless piece named "Young America." She was the singer of the principal part in "Maytime" in its long New-York run, and in the venture there with a song-piece based on "Pomander Walk." She was last in Chicago two years ago in "The Clinging Vine." . . . Miss Wood comes back tomorrow night to act the title-part in "Candida," wherein she replaced Miss Katharine Cornell part-way through the New-York run when the latter got out of Shaw's comedy to go into "The Green Hat."

and some comedy to lighten it. Pretty well played.

"THE LUCKY HORSESHOE" was Tom Mix, presented by his producers in the new and alluring guise of a lady's man. He was quite beautiful and the picture full of stuff and quite exciting.

"THE GOLD RUSH"—Charlie Chaplin's newest, saddest, ofttimes funniest, and, HE thinks, his BEST photoplay. I was kinda crazy about it myself, and from all reports the Chaplin regulars think it's a world beater.

"THE MAKING OF O'MALLEY" told the tale of a big and, O, so handsome policeman whom a little child did lead into all sorts of trouble and—happiness. A picture that made the average woman look her escort over and wonder why ALL males were not made in the mold of O'Malley. O'Malley? Milton Sills.

* *

"THE MAN WHO FOUND HIMSELF" was Mr. Thomas Meighan as most of us like him. A regular guy in a "regular" rôle playing in what can certainly be classed as a regular program picture.

* *

"LIGHTNIN'" gave you Jay Hunt doing his best with Frank Bacon's illustrious rôle. The picture, though not on a par with the stage play, passed muster beautifully and is one I'd see if I were you and hadn't.

* *

"SEVEN DAYS"? Riot of laughter! From the story and play by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

* *

"THE UNHOLY THREE"—One of the best photoplays you ever saw in your lives! If you never appreciated Lon Chaney and Mae Busch before, you'll do it this time with a vengeance. DON'T MISS "The Unholy Three"!

See you tomorrow!

BACK IN A GOOD PART

MISS BEATRICE NOYES

SHE was here last Autumn with nothing much to do in "Seventh Heaven," although she has shown in other plays that she can do things if things are provided for her to do. There was "The Five Million," in case you recall it. . . . Miss Noyes has the principal feminine part in "The Fall-Guy," and is said by those who have seen her in it that she is just the actress for it.

Noah Beery Shows Life to a Navajo Injun Brave

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD. — [Special Correspondence.]—Noah Beery has been having the time of his life with a house guest he has been entertaining for the last couple of weeks. The guest is a Navajo youth, aged 23, whom Noah brought back with him from location in Arizona.

The boy had never been off the reservation near Flagstaff, which is in an inaccessible and barren part of the country, and Noah relates with great gusto some of the treats he has had watching this particular "vanishing American" get his first impressions of civilization.

A chocolate ice cream soda proved a great hit after the foam died down and the wily Indian sneaked up on it with his trusty straw. A railroad train proved a pretty big shock, for at first he wouldn't believe it at all and chased it with his cow pony.

The high light of the trip so far has been the seaplane trip to Catalina, on which Noah and his Navajo friend were passengers. The brave covered his eyes with his hands as the plane took off, but once they were going good was persuaded to look out, after which he became very cocky. Noah gives a funny pantomime of this bit and tells how the event was registered in the Indian's diary later, "Fly like eagle 18 minutes. Stay 4 hours; fly again back."

The good living out at Noah's ranch in the San Fernando valley has fattened up the scrawny cow pony, and this also receives mention in the diary. The brave is loth to go back to the reservation and figures on going back only to get a nice young squaw and return to the intriguing life of Hollywood.

Bebe Hard at Work.

Bebe Daniels is hard at work on her new picture, "Martinique," at Lasky's, and on Wednesday was discovered in a fetching silk saronge and tightly wrapped jacket of brightly colored silk, silver belted bracelets, and anklets and straw sandals. During a lull in the action she joined the colored boys who were furnishing the music and did her stuff on a steel guitar while the boys sang, showing broad expanses of white teeth in delighted grins.

Josephine, Bebe's monkey, also came in for a share of attention from her mistress, and when Bebe gave her a nickel the outraged monkey corked her right in the eye with it.

Bebe complained of the wicked ways of monkeys in general and said that she had bought a daughter of this same wicked Josephine a year ago. The young limb proved so affectionate that she would moan for hours every time Bebe went out, and if she could get at her would hang on her neck and refuse to let go. Bebe finally gave her to her favorite uncle, and now, says Bebe, the uncle won't speak to her.

Notes and Gossip.

Pola Negri is proving to be a great little breath snatcher. Paul Bern will say so after what happened this week. For the purpose of the picture, "Flower of the Night," that Pola is working in now, she appears breathless and excited in a certain scene. To get this effect Paul Bern who is directing it, suggested that he and Pola run a race up and back one of the side streets on the set. Paul clutched Pola by the arm and off they started. After about twenty feet Paul began to lag, but the doughty Pola grabbed him firmly by the arm and dragged him nilly-willy for a hundred yards at top speed. Paul was somewhat damaged from the rapid transit, and has been using a cane to help along the strained ankle.

Harold Lloyd is telling about a distinguished caller he received at his studio this week, no one less than Allen Moskins, "Farina" of "Our Gang." Harold made friends with Farina back in the days when he was working at the Roach lot. After Farina had gazed with rapt orbs for some time at his favorite comedian, he said in a burst of emotional confidence that his ambition when he grew up was not to be a fireman or policeman, but "something important; I want to be a saxophone player in a jazz band."

Harold himself has been working on some nifty plans for his family residence. Fifteen acres up Benedict cañon in Beverly Hills, not far from Gloria Swanson's and Corinne Griffiths' places is to be the site and there will be a three story Italian French renaissance house, a nine hole golf course, a stream fifteen hundred feet long for canoeing and fishing, an outdoor theater, a bowling green, the largest private swimming pool on the coast, sunken gardens, a wading pool for Mildred Gloria, and playground too. All to cost a cool million.

Bill Hart's "Tumbleweed" furnished an elaborate and interesting scene on Friday night. A large outdoor street set, with 500 extras, was used to show how they celebrated back in '89, the night before the last piece of valuable homestead land called the Cherokee strip in Oklahoma was thrown open to homesteaders. An old fashioned band of fiddles and banjos furnished the music for the square dances and circlings around three enormous street bonfires. Homesteaders in buckboards, on horseback and in prairie schooners were piling into the town's celebration; and old fashioned traveling yarb doctor with his wagon of bottles had his wares set up on one side; the bars overflowed into the street. The arrival of the United States cavalry to arrest Bill for supposed "sooner" operating, that is, grabbing a claim before the appointed time, helped to make it an exciting affair.

The celuloid toaster for the week's best wise crack goes to Robert Vignola, bon vivant and director. He's a bachelor—in fact, Hollywood's professional bachelor. "A courtship," says he, "is a man running after a woman until she catches him."

On the Enlightenment of Our Modern Youth

By H. L. Mencken.

beautiful picture, and then they turn it around and show a panorama of jails, gutters, and dissecting rooms.

It is the old error of trying to put down crime by increasing the punishment. I don't believe it works. Personally, I do not frequent juvenile society, but, if those who do do so are to be believed, it is looser today than it ever was before. That is to say, the era of sex hygiene books—pouring from the presses by the million—is an era of rapidly increasing sexual recklessness. Is there any relation of cause and effect here? I incline to think that there may be. Youth, with its acute eyes, sees that some of the calla lilies and the June bugs, and then dangers described are enormously exaggerated. What more natural than for it to conclude that the rest are, too?

Evading Plain Facts.

There is another defect common to most of these books, and it is quite as serious as the first. They evade the plain fact that sex would be unimportant if it were not for its capacity to produce a thrilling and overwhelming sort of joy—that the average human being seldom thinks of it in any other aspect, and almost never hears of it. This joy, of course, does not have to be taught; it is known by every flapper who has kissed her first beau. But when, in a treatise upon the subject, it is not mentioned at all—or, if mentioned, passed over gingerly—then it is certainly not surprising if the young reader drops the book as ignorant and fraudulent, and is lost to the moral lessons it inculcates.

Sexual experience, as it is depicted in the sex hygiene literature, is either something quite inert, like getting one's hair cut, or something inordinately horrible and dangerous, like bull fighting. There is, on the one hand, the chaste, automatic philandering of the rose and the honey bee, and there is, on the other hand, the appalling pathological fate of sinful homo sapiens. Both lie outside the actual experience of the reader, and are thus dim and unconvincing. What interests that reader primarily is the fact that it is intensely agreeable to kiss or be kissed—that sexual contacts somehow bring on an order of experience unknown in any other sphere.

There lies the fundamental mystery of sex, as the young confront it—and precisely there the sex hygiene books are least illuminating. They are full of alarming news about the remotest and most improbable consequences of a phenomenon, and leave the phenomenon itself undescribed. Thus they fail to satisfy the very curiosity that ostensibly brought them into being—the very curiosity they so ineptly inflame. Is it any wonder that intelligent young readers—and even a moron, at twelve, is intelligent—cast them aside as buncombe, and carry away nothing from them save the notion that what is so dangerously must be immensely fascinating, else the human race would have committed suicide long ago by avoiding the risk?

May Be Done.

As I have hinted, it may be that these defects in the sex hygiene books—and I could list many more—are inescapable. It may be that the subject is inherently and incurably resistant to pedagogical science. But I prefer to take a more optimistic view. The human mind is a pliant and puissant organ. It has solved many occult and vexatious problems. Perhaps, in the long run, it will solve this one, too. Perhaps, indeed, the solution would be possible tomorrow—if only the higher powers of the mind were applied to it.

In the sex hygiene books, so far as I can make out, only the lower powers are in action. Such books, it appears, are not ordinarily written by persons of sound information and noticeable sense. On the contrary, they seem to be mainly the product of persons who know very little about the subject they discuss, and have nothing to say about it that is apposite and worth hearing. They are moral exhorters, not seekers of the truth. Their aim is hortatory, not scientific, nor even, strictly speaking, pedagogical. They apply themselves to what ought to be, not to what is.

I believe the remedy lies in trying to enlist performers of a better grade—that is, performers who have taken the trouble to investigate the matters they deal with calmly and thoroughly, and who have the degree of common sense that one ordinarily looks for in a railroad conductor or an ice man. There must be plenty of such men, not to mention women. Their writings, indeed, are already available—pursued by the Comstocks, but not yet quite scotched. I offer Havelock Ellis as an example. But these authors, of course, address adults—what is more, highly sophisticated adults. All that remains is for them to bring their knowledge down to the comprehension of the young. I believe that it can be done, and that on some near tomorrow it will be done.

When the day comes at least nine-tenths of the sex hygiene books that now stand in the book shops will be thrown out as rubbish.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MISS JEANETTE REYNOLDS.

MISS MARY CLAIRE EASTMAN.
[H. S. Reick photo.]

A debutante, Miss Jeanette Reynolds; a bride-to-be, Miss Mary Claire Eastman, and a bride, Mrs. James B. Waller, the former Miss Sarah Isabel Given, are of interest just now to Chicago society.

Miss Reynolds is to be presented to society at a tea this month to be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds of Lake Forest.

The engagement of Miss Eastman, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair Eastman of 511 Brompton place, to Kenneth Curtis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus D. Curtis of Chicago and Lake Geneva, is announced, and her wedding date is Sept. 25. The wedding will take place at the Evanston Country club.

The former Miss Given's marriage to Mr. Waller, who has been one of the most eligible and popular of Chicago's smart bachelors, took place on Tuesday at the summer residence in Manchester, Vt., of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Given of New York.

Threads of News About Wanderers

By Mme. X.

IT was with a sigh that we turned the calendar last Tuesday from registering summer months to those of autumn. Autumn is a pleasant season, warm and invigorating, but it marks the end of the months that for many spell leisure, out of door sports, garden joys, long days, balmy nights, and so forth and so on.

Gathering up a few threads of news as to what is happening to Chicagoites who are sojourning in remote corners of the earth, I find that that enterprising young couple, the Owen Joneses, who since last autumn have been exploring the little known regions of northern India, really did make that reported 700 mile hike in the upper Himalayas, with big escort and two young Englishmen as companions. The first Britisher accompanied them when they left this part of the world last autumn on their globe girdling, and the second one was called from England so as to give them a bridge quartette on their travels.

Even among the everlasting snows and on those majestic heights, bridge, that most captivating of games, keeps its hold on its devotees. Fancy sitting down in those upper regions, with wild mountain goats and wilder mountain tribes looking on, as one bids a no trump hand and plays it to a successful conclusion.

Seven hundred miles afoot for so slender and fragile looking a young woman as Mrs. Owen Jones, is no easy stunt, yet word comes that she, as well as her husband, are in the finest of health and that after a visit to Ceylon, where they now are, and a trip to Java they will turn their faces homeward. In reply to a cable from a would-be purchaser of his house at Lake Forest, Owen Jones cabled back that it was not for sale and that he and his wife were returning to it in a few months.

Meanwhile, notices for the opening of the Lake Forest hunt came last week, which means excitement for all who take part in these cross country runs and those others who look on at this not a little dangerous sport. There are sixty or more persons on the list of those riding to hounds, and each run brings out twenty to forty riders.

Wasting Nature's Gifts.

Apropos of Lake Forest, there is a good deal of discussion going on in that prosperous and ornamental suburb as to what to do about bridges that cross those lovely ravines, which are, next to the lake itself, the most beautiful natural feature of the landscape thereabouts. Most of the bridges were built a generation or two ago, when the only traffic that crossed them was that of horse drawn vehicles and not such a crowd of them either. Today's enormous concourse of heavy and swift motor cars was not anticipated by the original builders. Many of the structures spanning the heavily timbered ravines are becoming a menace to life and limb. The question is up to the village council of Lake Forest for solution and there are some economical souls who propose to fill up the ravines and so make permanent thoroughfares over them. The local contractors are reported to have said that it is less expensive to fill in than to rebuild the bridges.

It would give these same contractors who are excavating for the many buildings going up there, a profitable place in which to dump the earth coming from these excavations. Instead of having to pay for its removal, they would be paid for its use in these ravine fillings, at least, that is what the element says that opposes such elimination of this great natural beauty, the esthetic folk who want to preserve what we have that is lovely and beautiful, even if it cost something to retain it.

Meanwhile, the wayfarer must run carefully across some of the bridges, especially that in Sheridan road near the Presbyterian church. On a fair Saturday or Sunday it is often crowded with heavy cars, on their way northward or southward, which cars all together weigh much more than the tonnage the bridge was designed to carry. Being a feeble minded believer in preserving nature's gifts to us, the writer is of those who hope that some other solution will be found for the problem than that of filling up these green and sweet little valleys with their ancient trees and their shy and fragrant wild flowers; these haunts of birds, squirrels, rabbits, chipmunks, and other wild creatures who are fast being driven out by our rampant civilization.

We have successfully exterminated the vast flocks of wild fowl that once, and that not so many years ago, filled the country about here with the sound of their wings and the clamor of their cries. Even the ring doves and mourning doves, those gentlest of God's creatures, are being killed off in those open days in the autumn when it is permitted the small boy and other brave hunters to shoot them. Our record in the direction of destroying the natural beauties and the wild life which once prevailed along this north shore is not much to our credit. Wasteful and improvident, those who come after us will perhaps call us. At any rate it is to be hoped that the powers that be will pause before they carry out their fell intent of filling up these beauty spots.

Highland Park sets a higher value on our native landscape and has built solid and handsome bridges where roads cross her ravines. Is it because Highland Parkers are wealthier than their Lake Forest neighbors? There are some quite well to do people still living in Lake Forest, unless rumor is mistaken.

Home of the Stonehills.

Our north shore is a lovely region, with its winding and shady roads, its large and well laid out estates, its delicious gardens, its glimpses of the lake in all its moods, and last but not least, its wonderful opera. It is no hardship to live in that region that extends from Evanston to the Great Lakes Naval Training station, even if one's friends are roaming the earth, seeing strange scenes, hearing strange languages and, above all, smelling strange smells.

One of the most beautiful of the north shore places is that belonging to the Stonehills in Glencoe. The house was built and the grounds laid out ten or twelve years ago, so by this time the vines have covered the walls, the clipped hedges and topiary adornments are in their prime, the gardens are in full swing, the orangeries and greenhouses are full of rich verdure. The North Shore Garden club's flower show, which was held in the Stonehill house a fortnight ago, was one of the best shows of its kind ever seen in this part of the country. The Lake Forest Garden club and others near by that have supposed up to now that they were the final word in this high art will have to look to their laurels. Not only were the flowers extremely beautiful and highly developed, but they were also arranged with exquisite taste, both in the vases provided and in the scheme of table decoration for which prizes were offered. The house itself is a charming setting for such an exhibit. The main entrance hall, spacious and high ceilinged, and the adjacent glassed in corridor overlooking the gardens and the lake, were devoted to the show.

Mrs. Stonehill herself, looking extremely chic with her silver hair and a pale gray frock straight from Paris, received those who came to the show, and there were crowds.

There is nothing in our country architecture handsomer than the entrance to the Stonehill place as the passerby gets a glimpse of it from Sheridan road. Looking through high red brick gate posts, one sees a long, straight driveway leading to a circular grassed plot, with a pair of rampant griffins guarding the end of the drive at the point where it divides to go around the two sides of the circle and meet again at the front door. The house itself is, I should say, of distinctly Georgian architecture, though my architect friends say I am atrociously inaccurate in defining the various types of architecture which meet us at every step of the way along our highways and byways.

The terrace on the lake side of the house is a charmingly designed bit of ground, with neatly clipped hedges, flowers not too profuse, many rare bits of shrubbery, a marble balustrade on which one can lean and look across the expanses of the lake or up the curving shore line to where Waukegan's industries stain the skies.

Chicago's Newest Hostelry.

What amazing strides have been made in all our standards and ways of doing things since Mark Beaubien ran Chicago's first hotel in 1823 on the north branch of the Chicago river! What would he think of Chicago's latest hostelry now a-building, the Palmer house? A few statistics were given me the other day which struck my fancy and may attract the attention of some readers of this column. And, mind you, this is not an advertisement; it is merely a chronicle of something that is picturesque and striking to those who know anything of Chicago's brief and close at hand past.

This successor to the Sauganash house has twenty-three stories. The first four floors are to be shops. The next four are to be devoted to the salesmen who come to town, drummers, as they are called in this country, though the English term them "bag men." Up above these layers of humanity will be the rest of the hotel, and as each floor is reported to have 130 rooms, if you multiply these figures by the stories devoted to the hotel, which I think are nineteen, it makes quite a formidable total. There are to be three big ballrooms, besides any number of smaller assembly rooms. It will take ten tons of flat silver and sixteen thousand dozen pieces of china and I don't know how much linen to equip the establishment.

There is to be one floor—the twenty-third, I think—entirely devoted to women, with some features quite new to this part of the world. There will be, of course, a beauty parlor, and reading and reception rooms; and there will be a department to look after any children whose parents bring them to town without nurses. There will also be a hospital with an operating room for emergency cases, and a doctor and nurse at hand. There will be arrangements especially made to meet young girls who come to town alone and will need chaperoning. A well known woman, a great favorite in Chicago's smart set, will be in charge of the woman's department. This is a new line of activity for women, and, therefore, worthy of note.

As you take a survey of the huge building operations going on in and about Chicago it seems as if overbuilding were inevitable, with the consequent lowering of real estate values. Especially do we seem to be overdoing it in the matter of hotels. But experience has been that as fast as a new hostelry is finished it is filled to the brim with guests without depleting the other hotels. Of late years the Chicago Association of Commerce has had great difficulty in finding accommodation for the vast number of people who come up here to attend conventions or to transact business. Boarding houses, lodging houses, rooms in private houses have been at a premium when hotels were congested. And the cry has ever been: "Give us more room for the throngs of transients who come to town."

When one sees the big new apartment buildings that are springing up on every hand, the wonder grows where are all the people coming from who can pay the large rents required in these elegant palaces? But they do come, and the new buildings are filled up without emptying the old ones, and the town grows apace. There are many folk waiting for that new structure in Lake Shore drive, next to 999, to be finished. Among those who are hoping against hope that they can get in before snow flies are the Watson Armours, the Charles Garfield Kings, and Mrs. Patrick Valentine and her son.

In Lake View Avenue.

The Walter Brewsters are busy setting their new house on Lake View avenue in order for occupancy by MISS VIVIAN DROZDOWITZ.

Dr. and Mrs. E. D. Klopper of 556 Roscoe street announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Vivian Drozdowitz, to Harry R. Schultz of 6312 Glenwood avenue. Miss Drozdowitz is a junior at the University of Illinois and is a member of Theta Nu sorority.

November. It was originally built by Abram Poole, who lived there on and off for several years until his marriage to Mercedes D'Acosta of New York drew him permanently to that metropolis. The young Edward Cudahys have been occupying it for the last two years.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson is the Brewsters' next door neighbor to the south. She will be in her attractive mansion this winter, and will as usual keep open house there. She almost always has some wandering celebrity stopping a few days with her en route from one scene of adventure to another. From all nations and from all sorts of interesting activities these guests of Mrs. Ryerson gather here and open windows for such of her friends as have an opportunity to meet them, windows that open out on a larger, much more complicated and less comfortable world than anything we Chicagoites know.

Miss Mary Nixon, that enterprising young Chicagoan who has founded a school for girls in a villa overlooking Florence and the Arno and having a garden in which under a morose little myrtle tree Dante used to sit and muse, is soon returning to Italy with this year's batch of young girls. Among them are several from Chicago. Miss Ellen Borden II., Miss Glee Louise Viles, daughter of the Lawrence Vileses; Miss Betty James, daughter of the Philip L. Jameses, who once lived in a pretty little white house in Lake Forest, and Miss Minna Lindsay, granddaughter of Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, who was a sister of Bryan Lathrop and daughter of those fine old pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop, whose big house at Elmhurst was once the rallying place for Chicago's élite. Miss Minna Lindsay is also a granddaughter of Henry Field, who was a brother of Marshall Field, the first of his name in Chicago.

All who know the Cecil Barnesses, the Clay Judsons, and Arthur Aldis, who were members of that unfortunate motor party in France that was in a serious smashup, will be glad to hear that the severely injured ones, Mrs. Barnes and Mr. Aldis, are making good progress to recovery. Mrs. Aldis, who was on the point of stepping on to a ship to hasten to her husband, was persuaded by cables from him not to do so, as he expected to be at home within a few weeks. The Barnesses cable that their injuries were not so serious as at first reported, and that all are in good spirits. The Clay Judsons, who sailed Aug. 28, on the Ryndam of the Holland-American line, are expected to land today in New York, the Ryndam being, evidently, a boat of deliberate and stately gait.

Retreat for Musicians.

Meanwhile Mrs. Aldis has joined the McDowell Musical colony at Peterboro, Vt., where she generally manages to spend a few weeks each season. This settlement was founded in memory of the well known musician of that name, and it aims to provide suitable surroundings for those who wish to compose music, to write poems, to evolve some inner message that requires silence, an absence of interruptions, and a present with sweet surroundings. Little cottages are built in a forest, primitive abodes, but weatherproof, where poets, musicians, and others can spend their days either in work or meditation.

The midday meal is brought and set silently on the little front porch. With windows open, with soft breezes blowing the perfume of the woods into the houses, with long hours of unmolested quiet it would seem as if inspiration would be always at hand to uphold and lead one on. It sounds quite idyllic to any one who lives where telephones are constantly on the go and where the sound of motor horns tears the air to shreds every few minutes.

Treasures and Promises.

Did you hear the story told by an employé in one of New York's largest jewelry shops, the tale of the little clerk or stenographer who picked up in a large department shop what she thought was an imitation pearl necklace? She looked about for an owner for it, and, not finding any, snapped it around her own fair throat. She wore it until it broke, when she took it to a local jeweler's to have it mended.

"Where did you get this?" he asked, surprised.

"I picked it up from the floor of so-and-so's, where somebody had dropped it."

"Do you know they are real?" asked the jeweler. "O, get out! They're not," she replied.

"Sure thing," he asserted. "You just ask anybody."

So she took them to Tiffany's and showed them to the clerk at the counter where they sold strings of pearls. He examined them carefully and said that they were identical with a string which a New York woman had lost and for which she had offered a reward of $2,500.

"Will I get that?" asked the astonished girl. "Indeed, you will," said the clerk. But alas for the brilliant [illegible] the dazzling dreams of what could be done with this princely sum if it were in the hands of one who had never been far from genuine poverty! When the pearls were returned to the owner of wealth by the jewelry firm, with an explanation of the circumstances she refused to pay the offered reward of return, saying that if the girl had kept them for four months without seeking an owner for them she must be dishonest. No representations on the part of the intermediaries had any influence on her. I should like to know the name of this woman, for the story is vouched for as true and she is said to be one of the social leaders in New York's smartest set. But I think of that moment of ecstasy on the part of the poor and humble finder who had just a fleeting vision was vouchsafed her of a land of promise, which disappearition was as quickly withdrawn. She will probably never again find such a treasure, but if she should, do you think she would so willingly surrender it?

I have two errors in last Sunday's copy to correct. Col. George [illegible] sky's operatic concert at the Congress hotel is going to be given on Thursday, Oct. 27, not 23. Another misstatement was speaking of Palmyra as a member of the Chicago Civic opera when he is not, but is of the New York Metropolitan company. Apologies for both mistakes.

INDEPENDENCE!

A BETTER INCOME—OR A BUSINESS OF YOUR OWN

"Ready in a jiffy!"

SHE had just finished a vigorous round at tennis when some friends drove by and invited her:

"Peggy, can you join us right away—big party out at Dorothy's in the country."

Most girls would have demurred; but she had learned the secret of freshening up quickly with Listerine, the safe antiseptic. She was ready to go with them in just a few moments.

Listerine really is delightfully refreshing and effective as a perspiration deodorant.

And there are many occasions for using it this way, particularly in summer: when you feel hot and uncomfortable—maybe after shopping; when you want to freshen up quickly after exercising; when traveling on trains makes you wish for the old tub back home.

It does the trick—and it's safe. Listerine won't irritate the skin or stain garments. You'll be delighted with it.

To test the deodorizing properties of Listerine, simply try this some day: Rub a little fresh onion on your hand. Then douse on Listerine. The onion odor immediately disappears.

You'll say it's remarkable—and it is.—Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, U. S. A.

LISTERINE ...the safe antiseptic

LISTERINE Throat Tablets are now available. Please do not make the mistake of expecting them to correct bad breath. Rely on the liquid Listerine. Containing all of the antiseptic essential oils of Listerine, however, they are very valuable as a relief for throat irritations—25 cents.

Overheard.

I am a telephone operator on a private exchange. The other morning a traveling salesman came in in a hurry and as a special favor asked me to put through a couple of long distance calls for him. This I did, taking special pains to hurry his calls and give him quick service. When I had finished and had told him what the calls amounted to, and he had paid me, he remarked as he turned to leave: "You will get your rakeoff out of this I suppose."

Thinking, of course, that he meant I had overcharged him intending to keep the difference for myself, I expressed my opinion to a girl standing by.

"Of all the ungrateful creatures! To think after the way I worked for him he would accuse me of overcharging him! Some people——"

I turned to find him behind me with a little cedar chest in his hand. He had evidently overheard me for his face was very red. "I am selling these," he said, "and I wish you would take this one as a token of appreciation for your service."

Was I embarrassed? I blush even as I write this. M. B.

His Mistake.

My fiancée worked in a town not far from where I lived. One morning I made a business trip to this town at an early hour. I thought I would drop into the office where she was employed and surprise her. There were a number of other girls who worked in the same office and I did not know, at that time, that one of them resembled my fiancée.

I walked quietly up back of her and instead of giving the usual greeting said, "I'll bet I was up before you were this morning."

Instead my great embarrassment when a stranger turned around and looked up at me. I glanced across the room and saw my friend bursting with laughter at my silly mistake. I have never been in that office since and I'm not contemplating ever entering it again. F. H.

Caught.

I like my husband to accompany me to church on Sunday, but have a quite dreadful time getting him up in time, so each Sunday I resort to a new ruse to get him out of bed.

A number of his golf companions often ring him to arrange a game, so I made up my mind that when the first one called I would use such endearing terms over the wire that his curiosity, and I hoped his jealousy, would bring him to the phone. Once up, the rest is easy.

The phone rang. I turned to answer it in most honeyed accents, and when a familiar masculine voice greeted me I continued, "How are you, dear?"

The voice I then recognized as that of my husband's boss and I was so covered with confusion I did not even call my husband to the phone but talked a few minutes in a different strain, I assure you, and hung up.

ART NOTES

The following paintings have been sold from the summer shows of one man exhibits which will close next Sunday at the Art institute: "Glowering," by William Owen Jr.; "Spanish Onion," "Towers of Alhambra," and "Garden Pillage," by Anna Lynch; three landscapes, numbers 4, 10, and 12, by J. Wellington Reynolds; "From the Heights," by Cornelius Botke; "The Iconstand of Great Seclusion," "Arrival of Officers," "Tavern in Moscow," "Kremlin of Novgorod," "After Vespers," "A Church Pageant," and "To the Gypsies in Three Horse Span," by the Russian painter, L. M. Brailousky.

Miss Helen M. Gardner, supervisor of survey of art courses in the school of the Art institute, will spend the month of September near Boulder, Colo. Miss Gardner's book, "History of Art," will be published early in November.

Miss Dorothea Davis Burch, who was graduated from the department of teacher training of the school of the Art institute in June, has been appointed assistant to the head of the art department in the Wisconsin State Normal school of Whitewater, Wis.

Edward J. F. Timmons has received a commission to paint the portrait of the late Gov. Ross of Wyoming. It will be remembered that Gov. Ross died while in office and that his wife, Mrs. Nellie Ross, was elected to succeed her husband as governor. Mr. Timmons, who for twelve years was an instructor in the Art institute art school, will paint the portrait from photographs and verbal descriptions—not an altogether easy assignment.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Theodore Johnson—Mrs. Johnson was Mary Trankla—advanced students in the department of drawing, painting, and illustration of the school of the Art institute, will sail on Sept. 16 on the Berengaria for a year of study and travel in Europe. Mr. Johnson, who was awarded the Bryan Lathrop traveling scholarship of $800 in 1925 and the American traveling scholarship last year, has already done work of such conspicuous merit that much is expected of him in the coming years.

The Art institute has received as a gift from the Friends of American art a beautiful little statue, "Night" by Josef Mario Korbel. Mr. Korbel, though an American, was born in Czecho-Slovakia in 1882, and received his art education in Munich and Paris. He is now living in New York. He won the John C. Shaffer prize at the Art institute in a recent exhibition for an ideal conception in sculpture.

Another piece of sculpture by him, a lovely marble head of "Miss W. Cranmer," was given to the Art institute by Mrs. G. Korbel Co.

"The Clear Soap for Clear Complexion"

Take a Lesson from Nature

Keep Pores Clean to the Very Roots

~only a completely dissolving soap can do this

Nature intended that pores be kept clean and open that health and beauty might be maintained. Mealy soaps cannot do this.

Avoid Coarse Soaps that Clog

They clog pore openings and the tiny pores themselves. Blemishes develop. One beauty expert estimates that one-fourth of all bad complexions are caused by inferior soaps.

JAP ROSE Gets Into the Pores

Don't tolerate bad skin. Get Jap Rose and improve it. This wonderful soap is so fine and pure that it completely dissolves in water and therefore can enter the tiniest pores.

Once inside, it cleanses them full length. Blemishes, discolorations, disappear. Then it stimulates — it's a real tonic.

Welcome that Tingle!

When you first use Jap Rose your skin may tingle.

Count yourself lucky if it does—it is a sign that pores are awakening to new health, new vigor — forerunners of beauty.

Begin using Jap Rose regularly. And note how your skin improves.

JAMES S. KIRK & COMPANY, CHICAGO

JAP ROSE

hair looks natural the same day you shampoo

Try Jap Rose for shampoo—it leaves the hair soft, clean and natural looking, removing none of the natural oils that give life and color to the hair.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Labor Day Sermons in Pulpits Today

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

LABOR DAY sermons will be preached in the pulpits today and outings of many church organizations will be held tomorrow.

Probably the most largely attended outing under church auspices will be the picnic tomorrow at Foss park, North Chicago, on Lake Michigan, under the auspices of the Holy Name society of the Chicago Catholic diocese. Athletic sports of all kinds will be provided. At 3 the Lake county Holy Name society will hold its annual meeting. Bishop E. F. Hoban and other general offices of the union will be present. Admission to the grounds is free. The Holy Name office, telephone, State 5430, will answer all questions.

An outing of the Epworth Leaguers of the Chicago Swedish Methodist churches will be held at the Des Plaines camp ground. A devotional meeting will be held this evening at 7:30 with Mrs. George W. Barton of Columbus, N. M., as speaker. An athletic and recreational program will be staged tomorrow. The week-end celebration really began last evening at 8 when a camp fire service with games and recreation was held and the Rev. Eric P. Swan, district superintendent, made an address.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing thirty denominations, the Presbyterian and Methodist Episcopal denominations, have issued appeals to the churches to foster coöperation between capital and labor.

THE REV. ALBERT CASEY, O. P.

The Rev. Albert Casey, O. P., is the new superior of the new Dominican college of St. Thomas at Harlem avenue and Division street, River Forest, where a three day celebration begins Thursday. Father Casey was formerly pastor of St. Pius church, Ashland avenue and West 19th street. The college already has 105 students of philosophy studying for mission work.

The first event at 5 p. m. on Thursday will be a reception to the officials of Chicago, Oak Park, River Forest and Cook county. Dinner will be served at 6. There will be solemn high mass at 11 o'clock Saturday with a sermon by the Very Rev. M. J. Ripple, O. P., Washington, D. C., national director of the Holy Name society. This service will be for all the sisters of the Chicago archdiocese. A luncheon will be served for them in the college refectory at 12:30. Invitations have been sent to all orders of sisters, teaching, hospital, orphanage, and others, to attend.

His eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, will bless the college at 10 a. m. next Sunday. The sermon will be preached by the Rt. Rev. Archbishop McNicholas of Cincinnati, who is the first archbishop of the Dominican order in the United States. At 4 p. m. there will be solemn compline with a sermon by the Rev. J. H. Healy, O. P., New York, superior of the Eastern Dominican missions.

Temple Sholom, Dr. Abram Hirschberger, rabbi, has engaged Medinah temple, Cass and Ohio streets, for the Jewish services of Rosh Hashonah and Yom Kippur. A new feature will be the broadcasting of the services from station W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE'S broadcasting station on the Drake hotel. The music will be in charge of Prof. Joseph Schwickerath, who is training a large choir for the services. Of the 4,500 chairs in Medinah temple, 1,600 will be reserved for the free use of visitors. Services for the junior congregation will be held in the temple at Pine Grove avenue and Grace street. Rosh Hashana, New Year, will be observed the evening of Friday, Sept. 18, and Saturday morning, Sept. 19. Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, will be observed Sunday evening, Sept. 27, and Monday morning, Sept. 28.

"We are making another effort to democratize the synagogue," said Benjamin M. Engelhard, president of the Temple Sholom congregation.

Word comes from Rome, Italy, that the Rt. Rev. Mgr. W. D. O'Brien of Chicago was present in the ducal palace when the pope celebrated mass and later was granted a private audience by the pope. Mgr. O'Brien also celebrated mass in Cardinal Mundelein's titular church, Santa Maria del Populo. He presented the pope with an embossed volume of the history of the Catholic Church Extension society of which Mgr. O'Brien is the superintendent. The pope imparted his blessing to the Church Extension society and its workers.

The national conference of Catholic charities will be held at the Catholic university, Washington, D. C., beginning Thursday and continuing to the following Monday. An attendance of 2,000 is expected. The delegation from Chicago will contain the Rev. William Cummings, Judge Timothy D. Hurley, Mrs. Thomas Burns, Mrs. George B. McIntyre, Mrs. Mathias Benner, Mrs. Philip McCormick, Miss Julia Deal, Dr. Joseph M. Skeffington, and James Kennedy.

The celebration of the golden jubilee of the Society of the Divine Word, will begin today at Techny, Ill., and will continue tomorrow and Tuesday. Tomorrow has been designated as laymen's day. On Tuesday Bishop E. F. Hoban will celebrate pontifical mass. Bishop Hoban today at 3:30 will bless the new school building of St. Matthias parish at Ainslie street and Clarendon avenue.

Church extension workers of the Chicago presbytery will hold a conference beginning tomorrow at Camp Gray, Saugatuck, Mich. Next Thursday and Friday will be observed at the same place by the presbytery as a retreat.

St. Luke's Episcopal church, Evanston, Dr. George Craig Stewart, rector, has purchased property adjoining the church at a cost of $20,000.

The Austin Boulevard Christian church, Austin boulevard and Superior street, has been redecorated and was reopened last Sunday with special services.

The Wheaton Catholic association will hold a Labor day celebration tomorrow near the Wiesbrook station of the Aurora and Elgin railroad. The grove is three miles west of Wheaton. Sports and a chicken dinner will be features.

The Moody Bible institute, Chicago avenue and North La Salle street, will begin its fall term next Thursday. Ministers from abroad who are announced as speakers during the term will be the Rev. J. Russell Howden, vicar of St. Peter's, Southborough, Kent, Eng.; the Rev. D. H. Dolman, Bethel Mission house, Wandsbek, Germany, and Dr. Henry Howard, Australia. The Rev. E. Jaderquist, Ph. D., a former missionary, has been added to the institute faculty. The evening school will open Friday evening.

The St. Lawrence Episcopal church, Libertyville, Ill., the Rev. Herbert B. Gwyn, rector, announces its mortgage indebtedness on the church and parish house, amounting to $5,000, has been raised in cash and pledges. The rector, who is well known in Chicago because of his editorship of the official monthly magazine of the diocese and his position as correspondent for the Living Church and other activities, has been rector of the parish for a little more than two years.

The Epworth leagues of the three Chicago districts of the Methodist Episcopal church, including the English, Swedish, Norwegian-Danish, and German organizations, will hold their annual boat ride to Michigan City, Ind., next Saturday. The boats will leave from the Goodrich pier at the Michigan avenue bridge at 1:30.

The forty-seventh state convention of the Illinois Young Men's Christian convention which began yesterday at Camp Seymour, near Decatur, will continue today and tomorrow. United States Senator William B. McKinley will speak today on "Observations of European Conditions," and W. F. Hypes, president of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., will speak on "Association Work in Foreign Lands." A. J. Parker, general secretary of the Chicago association, and President W. J. Davidson of Illinois Wesleyan university, will be among the other speakers.

ART

"The Joyous Carnival in a Russian Province" by L. N. Brailousky, is part of the exhibition of work by modern Russian painters now on view at the Art institute in the east wing galleries. This exhibit is one of the summer shows, all of which draw to a close next week. There is color to be found among the Russians, and humor and life. Brailousky enjoys himself in painting and makes you enjoy him, too, with a particularly brilliant, sardonic touch of iconoclastic sentiment.

Water Color Show Is Ultra-Modern

Two there were who lived and loved.
And sang songs by the sea.
Can you not tell which road she took,
And which road beckoned me?

There were bright stars that shone at night,
And a red sun that struck
Across the veil of tears she wove—
Was it, perhaps, just—luck?

One road was by the hill and wood,
And one was by the sea.
She sank her adieu in a kiss—
Now who will walk with me? E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE exhibition of modern French and Japanese water colors, lent by Martin A. Ryerson and on exhibit for another ten days in the east wing gallery of the Art institute, has about as much continuity of thought as the least inspired of current free verse, which makes a cult of vagueness. One imagines there is something underneath but, at trial, the something evades the questioning clutch and a shivery, slithering, sliding flow of cold substance [use quicksilver as a simile] is apparently the total of the thought involved.

It is not early love they sing about, these modern poets. It is not really beauty or horror or dreams or life. They manufacture emotions and substitutes, moments that might or might not be of importance. They deck the incidentals with adjectives; decorate the commonplace with exclamations; ravage the altars and worship the fallen clay. Artists, some of them, are doing the same thing. Experimenters in bad taste, for the most part, these are.

The exhibit of modern French and Japanese water colors scarcely takes us so far. The Japanese, possibly, come the nearest to the artificial, the posed, the strained. The paintings resemble the Persian miniatures of centuries back. They are rather theatrical and forced. One sees in them where other of our moderns have found ideas—Marie Laurencin, for example, with her long, slim ladies, slant eyed and long featured.

It is too bad to allow any one to go thinking this Japanese group illustrative of modern Japanese art as a whole. But one man is responsible for the pictures—Foujita.

Similarly, counted among the French artists is a Belgian, Vlaminck, and his work is the best of the lot. It thunders with life. There is a sweep and a roll to his painting like the roar of a sea after a storm. A swift, dramatic undercurrent of emotion washes the commonplace from his most ordinary sketches. An empty road, lined with shells of houses, is, under the dominance of his brush, an avenue that has been roughed out by victory, chained to the triumphant wheels of hell belching guns.

Vlaminck can stir a thousand tears to daggers within your breast by a painting of a field crucified with stunted trees. A corner of white houses, solitary and impassable, are places of insolent adventure, painted by him. His is the power of thrusting vivid, turbulent life into the dead. With him there is no dead. There is no commonplace. There is no trivial. Everything is vital, worth while, important, blowing with power. Vlaminck stood out as strongly from the rut of painters some seven years ago, when first I met him in a one man show in Paris, as he does today, though he be dead, in this little exhibit at the Art institute. His genius is as dominant as the more graceful witchery of Odilon Redon. One cannot compare the two, but they stand, nevertheless, on parallel lines of achievement.

Beside Vlaminck, the Frenchmen, Signac and Maufra, are but little stars. Signac shows us bright and cheerful water scenes. He skims the froth. He is summer fiction, entertaining, not enduring. Maufra has a sterner wit. His paintings are done in a lower key. They, too, are coast scenes, but stronger and darker. The ocean is a dark, relentless force. One can sum up these three artists rapidly in three apt words of description—Signac, Maufra, Vlaminck: gay, stern, passionate.

Marie Laurencin, whom I have caught myself several times recently dragging in as a possible figure of comparison, is meeting with great success in London with her costumes and settings for a ballet, presented by the Russian dancers, called "The House Party." Last season her designs for the ballet, "Les Biches," were the sensation of Paris. The Arts club has given us several opportunities to see her work in Chicago, and a few months ago a group of her paintings created an interested stir when they were exhibited in the Arts club room at the Art institute. She is a modern French painter who is significant of her time.

Prof. Carl von Marr, late director of the Academy of Fine Arts in Munich, is at present in the United States, painting portraits. The German artist is the "master" of many of Chicago's best painters, so I am told, and for their sakes this little paragraph is written. Just now Prof. von Marr is painting in Milwaukee. He is expected in Chicago in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund M. Kopietz will spend September in Santa Fé and Taos, N. M. Mr. Kopietz plans to do a goodly bit of painting among the beautiful scenes for which this country is famous. He is an instructor in the school of the Art institute, and will return to his duties late in the month.

SYMPOSIUM ON NEW EDUCATION HELD BY RADIO

General Public Shows a Deep Interest.

Conducting a symposium of the new education over radio has been accomplished at KGO, the General Electric Pacific coast station, by the Cora L. Williams Institute, Berkeley, with the assistance of prominent world educators speaking before the microphones and thousands of listeners who wrote in their ideas.

The object of the symposium was to bring before the microphone university professors, men and women of the highest educational standing, who have been lecturing in Berkeley at the University of California summer session.

Leaders of education are surprised at the interest taken by the general public in the discussions of new educational ideas, shown by results thus far classified. Even listeners, not in the "so-called educated class" were warmly interested.

Hungry for Knowledge.

It was found that "college professors are very conservative," according to Miss Williams, head of the Williams institute. "They feel that what they have to say concerns only those whose interest in such topics as they represent is highly specialized, and that the radio public as a whole, has little interest in such things," according to Miss Williams.

But radio listeners today include many thousands who are deeply interested in new educational ideas, especially ideas which affect so profoundly the welfare of their children.

In her summary of the results of the symposium read over KGO Miss Williams said:

"A careful study will show, I believe, that mankind is demanding a new education on four major counts. The first of these demands comes from the everyday world of practical affairs. Where, a short time since, men were related to one another as industrials, they now have their relationship largely through the group.

Each Individual a Cog.

"The second demand arises from our changing concept of the state. Before the war we looked upon ourselves as an aggregate of a set of individuals who fulfilled their whole duty to each other by living and letting live. But we are gradually coming to see that human societies are organisms, that our lives are physically and psychically bound with the lives of our fellow components.

"The third fundamental demand upon the new education is that it keeps pace with the development of thought. As a result of recent discoveries in science, what we have taken to be absolute standards of thought and conduct, are giving way one after another to the principle of relativity. Education has more than to make ready for a new world; it has to prepare for a new universe.

"The fourth demand that a suffering humanity is making of a new education is that it should be, along with all else, a spiritual education. The International League for New Education has put itself on record to the effect that 'the essential object of all education should be to train the child to desire supremacy of mind over matter and to express that supremacy in daily life.'"

MEDICAL HELP IS PROMISED AT SEA BY RADIO FIRM

An unusual feature of the new high power commercial wireless station of the Tropical Radio Telegraph company of Boston, erected near Miami, Fla., will be free medical service to all ships within its range.

The station will maintain communication with Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Colombia, Panama, the Bahamas, Honduras, and Guatemala. It has an operating crew of 45 men and is said to have cost about $800,000.

J. A. White to Have Charge of Radio Show Announcing

New York, Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Maj. J. Andrew White, pioneer broadcast announcer, whose descriptions of principal American sporting events have thrilled millions, will be in charge of broadcasting from the Radio World's Fair at the 258th Field Artillery armory, New York City, from Sept. 14 to 19. Ten metropolitan stations will participate in this great program of entertainment for America's radio fans. Maj. White will announce the opening ceremonies, at which Governor Smith will play the leading rôle, and will introduce to the visible and invisible audience America's Miss Radio [as yet unselected], the champion woman fan, and scores of notables in civic and industrial life, the stage, the screen, and in the radio field.

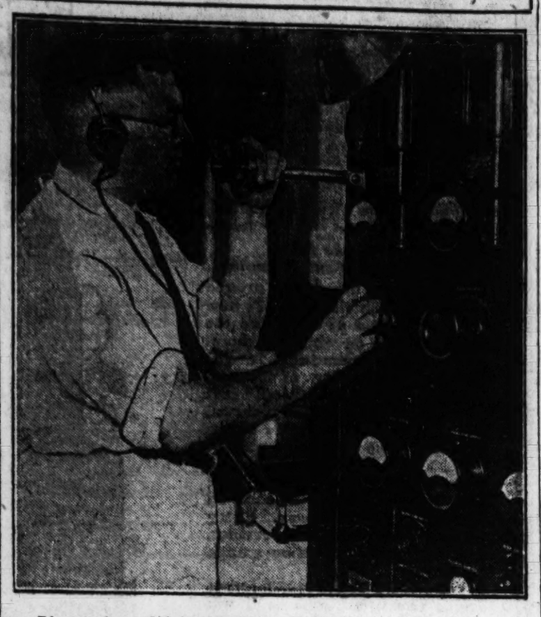
Scientists Off Now to View Eclipse on Jan. 14

Not taking any chances on being late, radio experts have sailed on the United States transport Chaumont from San Francisco with the government expedition to observe the solar eclipse from Sumatra, Jan. 14 next. Capt. F. B. Littel of the naval observatory heads the party. The radio observations will have to do with fadings, atmospheric disturbances, and other little known phenomena.

Opening of New Brazilian Station Is Announced

Opening of the new naval radio station on the Ilha de Governador, in the Bay of Rio de Janeiro, is announced by Assistant Trade Commissioner J. J. Mariman at Rio de Janeiro. This station is equipped with Telefunken apparatus having a normal estimated range of 4,000 miles. An effort will be made to communicate with naval radio stations in the United States, on the coast, and at Panama and Porto Rico.

U. S. BROADCASTS, TOO



Picture shows Chief L. C. Bertos, U. S. N., at the microphone of the naval station at Arlington, Va. This is a 500 watt set with a 435 meter wave length. The weather, market reports from the department of agriculture, and health talks are broadcast daily.

Inside the Loud Speaker

with Quin A. Ryan, the Voice of W-G-N

THE radio operators—who work unseen and unheard behind the scenes of the broadcasting stations—have nearly all been to sea at some time as ship operators, and it is they who are responsible for the nautical terms we used in radio.

"Stand by," the ancient boatswain's warning, is the most familiar of the maritime phrases that the operators have incorporated into the radio lingo.

The radio station's book recording the times of coming on the air and of signing off is still called "the log." The labyrinthian aerial they call the "antenna rigging."

The operators do not work day shifts or night shifts, but they "stand watch." Their clock isn't a clock, but a chronometer, in the same little brown mahogany case you find on shipboard.

We wonder how many people like "readings" on the radio.

If you, as chairman of the entertainment committee, had the duty of arranging a program of entertainment for your club or your home, or if you were billing the artists for a theater or recital hall, how much time do you think you would allot for "readings"? And radio programs should be considered in the same light, shouldn't they?

If you were one of the managers of a vaudeville circuit, would you schedule a lady to recite Browning's "Herve Riel" or something by Edgar Guest? An impersonation or a monologue, yes; but not a piece of dramatic or descriptive elocution.

We are not disparaging or even disapproving of good recitations, but we suspect that readings are a bit too mid-Victorian to hold the varied and rapid dial turning audience of the radio.

Have you heard Clarence Darrow's comment on radio: "The more radios you get, the more sermons you hear, and I won't let any preachers come into my house uninvited."

Or the New York News': "Sweet are the uses and abuses of radio. Especially sweet, however, to the numerous corporations which are quick to capitalize the air opportunities afforded by New York's fourteen stations. Orchestras are named after hotels and eating places and comedians for various soaps and pickle brands. The radio fans plug in night after night only to hear the jazz babies plug the same old songs. Rice and coffee recipes are freely thrown on the ether, while bedtime stories and sports talks, ostensibly given for entertainment purposes, turn out as propaganda for a new kind of onion sauce or face massage. . . . The perfect radio program will be reached only when it is shorn of its too evident commercialism."

Here's a new slant on the Religion vs. Science turmoil. A correspondent writes that radio stations should not broadcast anything of a religious character, "because religion is thus employing an offspring of science to further her propaganda."

There are many other humorous possibilities of such a boycott. The scientists might even be urged to cease the scientific construction of roofs on churches.

Last week's feature at a London broadcasting station was the "love song" that a beetle makes when he is singing to his mate. To illustrate a point in a lecture on natural history, the beetle was permitted to broadcast through a special microphone.

Next week's headliner will be a duet by the Walrus and the Mad Hatter.

"3 O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING" HEARD 15 MINUTES LATE

Awakened at 3:15 in the morning by "Three o'Clock in the Morning," intended for Australia, was the experience of Howard Gamble, postmaster at Sheridan Lake, Colo. In a letter to WLS he tells of the episode, which took place on Aug. 18. Here is his letter just as he wrote it:

"Gentleman

"this Morning about three 15 You fellows was slinging the juce around so careless that it woke Me up I live in an Iron House and sleep in an Iron bed apparently You were the only people on the air at that time You were playing three o clock in the morning then said You were trying to reach Australia then plaid a jazz peice music was coming in all O. K. but never knew of so mutch juce in the air

"Yours Truly

"HOWARD GAMBLE, P. M.,

BROADCAST OF PEOPLE'S CHURCH TALKS TO BEGIN

WBCN'S Sunday morning church service, after being discontinued during the summer, will be resumed, commencing Sept. 13, at 10:30 a. m., it has been officially announced.

The service will be broadcast again from the People's Liberal church, 65th street and Stewart avenue, from which services were put into the air, via the WBCN operating room, all last winter and spring.

Dr. Rufus A. White, pastor of the church, will give an address each Sunday as the big feature of each service. Dr. White is a nationally known figure, especially in Masonic circles, having lectured extensively.

HIGHER POWER PUTS PEP INTO LOWLY CRYSTAL

Reception Range Is Increased Markedly.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—The increase of power in many of the broadcasting stations throughout the country is greeted gleefully by the user of the crystal set. It has been predicted that this general strengthening of signals will bring about a revival of the humble crystal, which, by the way, in spite of the great strides in tube set development, has held its own pretty well.

There are crystal users who declare they prefer a crystal to a tube set. The program director of one of the best known stations in the country was recently asked what set he had for his personal use.

No Static in Crystal.

"I use a crystal," was the surprising answer, "when I want to listen critically to an orchestra or a singer being tried out. There is never any static nor amplification or covering up of defects. For work of that kind the crystal is the thing."

Range Is Increased.

The reception range of a crystal set from a 500 wat station under the best conditions is usually between fifteen and twenty miles. It is then reasonable to suppose that when such a station goes up to 1,000 watts or more that the crystal reception range will increase accordingly. Likewise with superpower stations being located outside of cities, listeners in the country, who heretofore could not have considered a crystal, are now able to use one.

BRITISH PLAN RADIO TREATS FOR U. S. FANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—International radio entertainment on the largest scale yet attempted is planed for the coming winter by the British Broadcasting company, with an unusual exchange of programs between England, American and European stations in view.

The company is erecting at Hayes, near Bromley, Kent, a "super-receiving station" which will pick up items from foreign broadcasting stations for British listeners.

The B. B. C. will send its programs to the United States six weeks in advance. The Radio Corporation of America will decide what items it wants to have broadcast across the Atlantic. These items will be transmitted from the powerful Daventry station to America, where they will be relayed to various large stations throughout the country.

The British company similarly will make a selection from American programs to be broadcast over the Atlantic from the new high-power station which the Radio corporation is building on the coast of Maine.

Continental programs, particularly French, German and Spanish, will be picked up at Hayes station, relayed to Daventry and then sent to America.

42 NATIONS TO PARTICIPATE IN '26 CONFERENCE

Albania, added to the list, brings the number of governments invited to the International Radio conference to be held in Washington next spring up to forty-two. The state department already has elaborate plans under way for this important gathering, inasmuch as congress at its last session appropriated close to $100,000 to defray expenses.

The subjects to be discussed at the Washington conference will include revision of the international radiotelegraph convention and regulations, signed at London on July 5, 1912, and the discussion of measures for the international supervision of communication by radio between the large fixed stations, broadcasting, including the handling of press messages; radio telephony; measures for the elimination of interference; distress messages so as to take cognisance of increased uses and classes of service; radio aids to navigation; and other purposes for which radio has been used as a result of the development of the art since 1912.

A. P. Reported to Plan Receiving Station

It is reported that the Associated Press plans to have a specially built radio receiving station for its use in New York City. The A. P. at present has a receiving set on the roof of its building, and it is used for emergency occasions.

RADIO MONOPOLY HEARING WILL START ON OCT. 20

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Hearings in the federal trade commission's case against the Radio Corporation of America, the American Telephone and Telegraph company, the General Electric company, and others alleging monopoly in radio communication and manufacture, will open on Oct. 20 in New York City.

Eighteen months have elapsed since the commission entered the complaint. The hearing in New York is expected to continue for several weeks, followed by further hearings in Pittsburgh and other cities. Examiner D. H. Sibbett will be the presiding examiner. Edward L. Smith will handle the case for the commission.

Stations to Exchange Wave Lengths in Experiment

Government officials having given WTIC at Hartford and WEEI at Boston permission to exchange wavelengths will watch the outcome of the experiments with interest. According to reports reaching Washington, Hartford, on its wavelength of 349 meters was not getting out very good and Boston, on 476 meters, was said to have been causing some local interference.

WLS Artists to Perform at Indianapolis Show

George D. Hay, chief announcer, and Ralph Emerson, organist of WLS, are to take a leading part in the Indiana radio exposition in Indianapolis. Hay and Emerson are to appear both in the afternoon and evening of Sept. 21, where Emerson will also play the mammoth organ in the exposition building, drawing his selections from the classics and interpolating these with a number of the very latest popular tunes.

LEGIONNAIRES TO GET CONVENTION INFO VIA RADIO

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Radio will demonstrate its usefulness in another way the night of Sept. 14, when the American Legion national convention committee takes over station WOAW here and broadcasts a special musical and informational program to the thousands of American Legionnaires who are planning to attend the annual convention Oct. 5 to 9.

The program, known as "American Legion invitation night," will include musical numbers by the crack 17th infantry band of Fort Crook, Neb.; the "Keno four," national quartet of the American Legion, and the Omaha post American Legion drug corps.

Speakers will include Omaha's "cowboy" mayor, James C. Dahlman, who will invite and welcome Legionnaires to Omaha, and Maj. Gen. George B. Duncan, famous war general and now commanding the 7th army corps area. Gen. Duncan will explain the various military exhibitions and display of German and Austrian war materials the government is sending to Omaha for the convention.

Monster Plane to Have Special Radio Operator

An essential member of the crew of the giant new air cruiser contracted for by the navy department will be the special radio operator. Inasmuch as it will be a seaplane capable of making a 2,500 mile nonstop flight, particular attention will be given to its radio equipment.

RADIO TESTS AT SUPER TENSION GIVE SURPRISES

Analysis Made of 50 KW Experiment.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—[Special.]—Although various conjectures have been made as to the results of the super power tests from WGY experimental station on 50 kw., Secretary Hoover has not as yet committed himself on the subject.

Numerous communications have been received by the department from listeners throughout the country and Mr. Hoover said that so far the reports show that there has been wider range and better reception from higher power. As yet, there have been no complaints with regard to interference. However, Mr. Hoover was careful to add that it was altogether too early to say anything definite and that it would probably be some little time before another statement could be made.

Experts Analyze Super Power.

Experts of the bureau of standards offer a preliminary analysis of the high power radio broadcasting at Schenectady as follows:

"The past summer has witnessed a tenfold increase of power used in many of the broadcasting stations as well as experiments on still higher powers, running up to 50 kilowatts. Measurements on the actual signals delivered by these stations have been made by the bureau of standards and coöperating laboratories. These measurements culminated in special observations on the alternating 50 and 2½ kilowatt transmission of WGY on Aug. 22, 24, and 25. Some surprising conclusions can be announced.

Results Surprising.

"First and foremost, high power has not resulted in signals of overwhelming intensity. Even the 50 kilowatt transmissions reached many listeners with an intensity which was not noticeably greater than that of many other stations on moderate power.

"Excessibe ifterference or blanketing of lower power stations is another element of the people picture of super power which has failed to materialize.

"These results, from the viewpoint of scientific investigation, are regarded as important verification of the calculations of radio engineers, who have consistently maintained that the apprehensions of stifling effects of higher power were wholly unfounded.

Fading Still Present.

"The most startling conclusions are in reference to fading, or signal fluctuation. At all distances greater than about 50 miles from a station actual tests show that the received wave intensity is continually fluctuating, the variation from maximum to minimum being as great as 100 to 1.

"The ear is notoriously insensitive to intensity changes; otherwise the reception of distant broadcast programs would be quite unacceptable. Increasing the power was found to effect no improvement in the degree of fluctuation. It can, therefore, be definitely stated that high power is not the solution of the fading problem.

"For still another reason, the distance over which a broadcast station gives highly satisfactory, dependable service is quite limited. This is the omnipresent background of static and all sorts of electrical disturbance, which requires that the radio wave have more than a certain minimum intensity in order to assure reception free from interference.

There is an area around every broadcast station within which such perfect reception is assured and beyond which it is not possible to rely on night time reception free from disturbance."

WHT'S SUNDAY CHAPEL BRINGS CHURCH TO SICK

A literal sawdust trail through the ether is broadcast by Paul Rader, chaplain of the WHT national radio chapel, every Sunday from the evangelist's tabernacle on North Clark street.

Thousands of letters attesting the fact that Mr. Rader has brought the church into homes throughout the United States and Canada have been received at the tabernacle. Many invalids and aged people have written stating that after having given up the church for years they have been converted by his messages over the air.

ENGLAND, TOO, ON TIPTOE FOR RADIO EXHIBIT

It Will Be Staged in London.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The British and continental radio world is looking forward with keen anticipation to the radio exhibition organized by the National Association of Radio Manufacturers and Trades to be held at Royal Albert hall, London, this month.

The exhibition, which is being heralded as "the greatest radio show ever held in Europe," will open Sept. 12 and continue to Sept. 23. Already requests for space are pouring in on the officials in charge of the affair.

Will Broadcast Evolution Talk.

A series of lectures on evolution, entitled "The Stream of Life," will be broadcast by Prof. Julian Huxley of Oxford university in the near future.

In view of the storm raised over the evolution question at Dayton, Tenn., it is believed that Prof. Huxley will be careful to avoid any dogmatic assertions on religious matters which might provoke a bitter discussion here. The lectures are expected to take the form of "scientific evidence" and listeners will be left to draw their own conclusions.

Queen Victoria, Florence Nightingale, Gladstone, the statesman, and Tennyson, the poet, will speak again to the world by means of radio and the phonograph.

Voices of the Past.

The British Broadcasting company has arranged this interesting feature for the near future under the title, "Voices of the Past." The British Museum has a number of phonograph records preserving the voices of the above named famous people and many others, including Sir Herbert Tree, Henry Irving, Caruso and Madame Patti.

These records will be broadcast, bringing the great figures of the past almost to life for radio listeners. Similar records have been made of the voices of King George, the prince of Wales, Prime Minister Baldwin and other famous personages, to be preserved for the radio listeners of future generations.

Will Confer on Broadcasting.

Sir William Mitchell-Thomson, postmaster general, has succeeded in securing the services of a number of distinguished persons for the special committee to investigate and advise on the proper scope, management, control and finance of broadcasting services.

The committee includes Rudyard Kipling, Lord Rayleigh, the great scientist and radium authority; Lord Blanesburh, the noted judge; Ian Mopherson, M. P.; Sir Thomas Royden, chairman of the Cunard company; William Graham, M. P., and economics expert and Dame Meriel Talbot, director of many women's organizations in the war.

SOAKING THE CRYSTAL USERS.

Owners of crystal sets in England, the number of whom is very large, received quite a jolt with the announcement that they would be required to pay a government license of 10 shillings, or about $2.40, per year.

Giving a New Angle to the Fall of Eve

By Burns Mantle.

Five O'Clock Man," and tha twas a significant title. It was at 5 o'clock each day that the Paris banker, Leon Lambert, proceeding under his own steam but the borrowed name of one of his least suspicious clerks, visited Ginette in the little wine shop he had set up for her in Montmartre.

Now, it transpires that the banker, Lambert, having pursued Ginette and the 5 o'clock custom long enough, is about to return to the bosom of his family when Mme. Lambert, interested in charities and things, and hearing of Ginette as a little "blossom of inadvertence," determines to adopt the child.

You probably can vision the character of both dialogue and situations when I tell you the second act, following a rather dull and set first act, is in the Lambert home the day Ginette calls to be adopted, having not the least idea that her new daddy is to turn out to be the same old daddy, if you will forgive the colloquialism, she has so long been used to.

Well, they do say some pretty snappy things, and those on our side of the lights snigger a lot and wonder how shocked the other fellow is and the other fellow's girl. Fortunately these scenes are played for the most part by Arthur Byron, who, I still insist, is as happy in farce as the best of them and twice as intelligent as most of them, and Janet Beecher, who is never particularly happy in farce, but plays the pure madam, the wisely unsuspecting or unsuspectingly wise wife, with definite charm and understanding.

There is also a new soubrette, Claudette Colbert, playing Ginette prettily and revealing, seeing the new skirts are what they are, the most exciting knees the boulevardiers have talked about since June Walker sat on the piano in "My Lady Friends."

Jolson in Form.

Young Mr. Jolson, the master of the mammy song and the tremulous larynx, has started off again with "Big Boy." He has, you will recall, been off the stage the better part of a year, partly on the advice of his physicians and partly because he grew weary of playing and is rich enough to do whatever he wants to do.

The Jolson vanity is a normal vanity, as such things average in the theater world. Considering his rise from the job of boy soprano, singing the choruses of popular songs from the gallery, through hick shows and minstrels to his current eminence as an artist, with, perhaps, the largest personal following in musical comedy, the Jolson vanity may be said to be something less than what might reasonably be expected. But it is a hungry human vanity, none the less, and must be fed.

Hence that excited and exciting emotional appeal from the apron of the stage out over the orchestra pit directly to the emotions of his audiences. Hence his fondness for songs about big hearted mammies and sentimental April showers. Hence his love of first nights and the adulation of the crowd that knows him best and "gets" him most completely.

But Al declares he will not stay more than fifteen weeks in New York, much as he loves it. He has arrived at that time when he needs frequent change. He craves the excitement of first nights. He wants to meet the Jolsonites of other towns and feel the first hand thrill of their madness for him. So cheer up. Being within the range of his travels, you are not going to be denied your favorite minstrel for such long periods as formerly you have been.

Here Is Melodrama.

There is so much drama in a play called "The Sea Woman" that it rather trips over its own effects. A stage conscious effort, this one. At first you are willing to accept it at its face value and be interested in it. But when the author begins to pile tragedy on tragedy's head and stretch his posture of circumstances this way and that, you feel—or at least I felt—a little like rising in your place and saying: "O, say now, fellow, I'm a good hearted boy and eager to be entertained. But you're putting it on too thick. As a matter of truth, I think you're a darned liar." Which is an impossible attitude in the theater.

This is the situation Willard Robertson has conceived: Molla, a Scandinavian woman, has been saved from a burning ship near a lighthouse in Chesapeake bay. The man who saved her—the lighthouse keeper—was so badly burned that he died a few hours later. On his deathbed he exacted from Molla by the oath of the sea a promise that she would, so help her God, look after his 16 year old daughter, of whom he was the only living guardian.

A year later, at the play's inception, a British freighter anchors off the lighthouse and Molla's lover, whom she had given up ever seeing again, comes to take her home with him his happy bride.

At which moment Molla discovers that the girl who is her charge has been taking seriously the love promises of a scoundrel and is in need of help, and she must either forget her oath or give up her lover.

Molla sticks to the girl and demands the name of the latter's betrayer. The girl lies and Molla shoots the wrong man through the arm to prevent his leaving the lighthouse.

Cast Worth While.

Next we have the bootlegger, who is the true author of what in the old days was known as the girl's shame, putting cigaret ashes in the wounded man's brandy to knock him out so completely he will be unable to defend himself until Molla has haled him to court and married him to her ward.

After which the girl, discovering that her bootlegger friend is a little handicapped by having married another girl some weeks before, blows up the lighthouse and most of the cast, though I believe Molla, breathing heavily through the pink smoke, had some hope of reaching the British freighter before her lover left the harbor.

It is not badly done, any of this. Blanche Yurka is the sea woman, and she is, as you doubtless know, a dependable actress with or without an accent. She does not, I gather, think a lot of this part. Intelligent actors are often in agreement with their critics in such matters.

Paul Kelly is the slimy bootlegger, Rea Martin the rasping, unpleasant child of sin, Roger Pryor the innocent suffering the gunshot wounds.

And That Settled It.

Three tailors, one after another, decided to put up a sign board and it happened that they were all in one block.

The first tailor's sign board said, "Thomas Jones, best tailor in the city."

The next one after reading this put up one saying, "Bob Brown, best tailor in the state."

The third tailor read both of the preceding ones and then put his up, which said, "Dick Rahm, best tailor in this block." D. N.

RESORTS AND HOTELS — ILLINOIS.

"Keeping Pace with the Growth of Chicago"

The New MORRISON HOTEL

To Lead the World In Size, Service and Economy

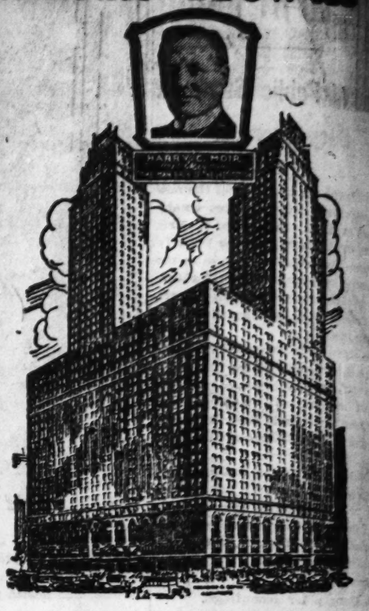
VISIBLE for many miles around the city, Morrison Hotel's new 46-story section proclaims the widened scale on which the hotel will soon be operating. It will continue its policy of renting rooms for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in any other leading hotel, but there will be 890 more rooms to which these economies will apply. Valuable store subleases which pay all the ground rent have long made this moderation possible in a limited way. Every room will have bath and Servidor, and all guests will enjoy garage privileges.

The Morrison's present capacity (1,054 outside rooms, each with bath) will eventually be expanded to 3,400—the largest hotel in existence.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, celebrated throughout America for its cuisine, dance music, and clever entertainments. The following artists will appear during the week beginning Labor Day, Sept. 7:

HENRI THERRIEN
The Sensational Tenor of the Victor Records
LILLIAN BERNARD AND FLO HENRY
In Character and Comedy Song Specialties
RANKS KENNEDY
The Wizard of the Organ
Dancing Between the Acts to the Music of GUS C. EDWARDS AND HIS ORCHESTRA
(A Benson Organization)

Reserve your table by calling State 8700



The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,100 rooms

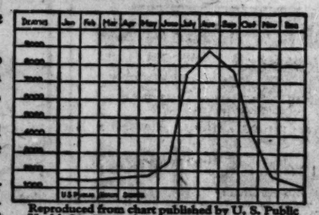
WATCH BABY'S HEALTH CLOSELY IN SUMMER

U. S. Public Health Reports Show Terrific Increase in Infant Mortality From Intestinal Disease During Hot Weather



Reproduced from chart published by U. S. Public Health Service to show appalling increase in the number of infant deaths from intestinal diseases during hot-weather period.

"Summer is the purgatory of motherhood," according to Assistant Surgeon General W. C. Rucker and Surgeon C. C. Pierce of the United States Public Health Service, in a Supplement to the Public Health Reports.

From 12 to 20 out of every 100 babies born in the United States die during the first year, and the majority of these deaths occur during warm weather.

The principal contributing causes are given as improper feeding and intestinal disorders. Many valuable suggestions are made for proper feeding, sanitation and general care of children in summer.

The mother should nurse the child for the first year if possible; if not, modified milk is the best substitute. Keep baby cool during hot weather, especially by proper clothing and frequent bathing in tepid water. Give plenty of boiled water. Keep flies away from baby and all utensils used in preparing its food. Never consider any disturbance of baby's bowels as unimportant, or "only summer complaint."

At the first sign of bowel disorder the disturbance should be immediately remedied. In thousands of homes Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is relied on to correct and regulate the bowels. This mild, pleasant laxative, free from injurious drugs, can be given to even the tiniest babies with perfect safety. It can be bought at any drug store.

Florida and One of Its Great Possibilities

From an authorized interview with Mr. B. G. DAHLBERG, President of The Celotex Company

The story of Florida reads like a fairy tale—so many have made millions of dollars there, and so many millions of people have wanted to go and do likewise.

All of us know people (or our friends know people) who have made thousands or tens of thousands or hundreds of thousands by simply two strokes of a pen. A purchase—a sale.

These tales of sudden riches—or many of them at least—are true. For Florida is the finest playground Nature provides for man. And now that men have "discovered" it, it is fast coming into its own.

But there are 58,666 square miles in Florida—37,546,240 acres.

Something less than one-third of Florida is in the Climate Zone. Something less than ten per cent of this third—this Climate territory, is within a few miles of the ocean or gulf. And very few points in this strip can be reached by transportation or lived upon with ready supplies near at hand. So that only a very small part of Florida is available for playground.

"Three kinds of land in Florida"

Mr. Dahlberg points out these facts about Florida: "There are three kinds of land in Florida.

"The first is worthless land or waste. The second is luxury land which is full of speculation, good and bad. The third is creative land which nothing can keep from being valuable.

"With my associates, I have studied Florida for my business. Not to buy and sell and make money from the activity in real estate. But to create a dependable, controllable and inexhaustive source of supply for the making of Celotex Insulating Lumber.

"In Florida we found the richest sugar cane soil in the World. We bought 15,000 acres. It happens to be located in the best climate section of Florida. It happens to be located surrounding Clewiston, where I would rather build and live than at Miami or Palm Beach or any other salt water resort. It happens that we bought it in 1923 when we saw that the success of Celotex would in a few years make necessary a large increased supply of sugar cane fibre.

"We might have purchased this land ten years before if Celotex had been developed then and needed it. And it would not have changed the result because it has been predicted Clewiston was destined to become the center of a very great wealth-producing community. A few people will make many millions in Florida. But they will take big chances. The surest way of getting rich in Florida is to invest in a creative location like Clewiston, and Clewiston, I think, is the best in the state."

Creative land that activity will help but cannot hurt

Clewiston not only should pay its own way but should also distribute millions of dollars of newly created wealth. Long after Florida land has reached its highest market value, Clewiston should be growing. For Clewiston will be fundamentally sound.

The richest growing soil in all America surrounds it. (Send for Booklet.)

"Sugarland" has been tested by the best sugar experts in the world—Smith & Ames, Consulting Engineers, Havana and New York. In the last paragraph of their report they say:

"In resume, it is our belief that experience will show that Southern Florida will prove as much superior to Cuba as a Sugar Cane district as Cuba has shown itself superior to the other West India Islands."

John Nolen, renowned city planner, writes—

"Clewiston appears destined to become one of the largest and most prosperous of the future central Florida cities. This may seem like a large prediction, but a study of the background against which Clewiston is being built, together with a glance at its strategic location, will convince even the skeptical of the great possibilities under right development that lie ahead.

"Clewiston stands directly in the path of the future heavy automobile travel that will pass back and forth between the Florida east coast and the Florida west coast, just south of Lake Okeechobee, which forms a barrier against such traffic for a stretch of thirty miles to the north.

"A new town such as Clewiston has a wonderful opportunity to start on a definite line of endeavor, to set a goal in advance by a good city plan and appropriate architecture, and thus determine the main lines of its future development and character. From the very nature of its surroundings Clewiston is bound to be a more or less distinctive town. The big feature is, of course, its location on Lake Okeechobee, and the general city plan has made the most of this by setting aside the entire lake front within the town limits for public use and enjoyment.

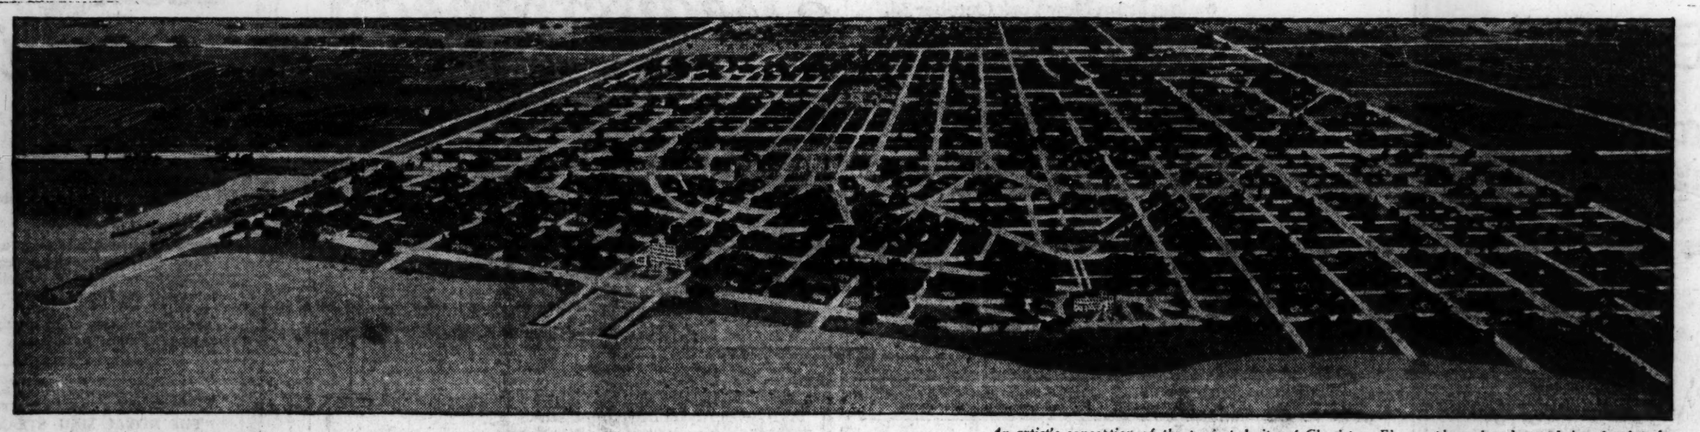
"New frontiers are being established in Florida. Sections that appear remote are no longer so. This migration to Florida is not now made up mainly of the wealthy and the aged, but is attracting young men and young women of skill and training, of enterprise and ambition, who are looking for new fields to conquer and for new sources of wealth."

The manager of Henry Ford's ranch says (the Ford Ranch is only a few miles to the west):

"I am acquainted with F. Dean Duff, Isaac T. Cook, Paul Brown, B. G. Dahlberg and others interested in the development of the territory surrounding the town of Clewiston. I was appointed one of the Commissioners to assess the benefits and damages of the Sugarland Drainage District which includes the muck lands along Lake Okeechobee and the town of Clewiston and am thoroughly familiar with the agricultural possibilities in that section after the installation of drainage and water control works.

"The Sugarland Drainage District adjoins the Henry Ford Ranch on the east and with completion of the works of the Sugarland Drainage District and the carrying out of the plans of those interested in that development a community is certain to grow up second only in importance in this section of the State to the developments planned here by Henry Ford and his associates.

"Wishing you every success, etc., etc."



An artist's conception of the projected city of Clewiston, Fla., as planned and now being developed.

Plan View of CLEWISTON

The Dawn of Industrial Florida

Something Different

Back of Clewiston are four basic community building forces combining to assure a steady growth and increasing wealth.

1. Agricultural wealth—super-production in all seasons of the fruits, vegetables and cereals of South Florida and in due season of subtropical products, oranges, lemons, nuts. And sugar-cane soil equal to the richest in the world.

2. Industrial activity—with raw materials right at the door, the native products of the surrounding soil. The sugar mill and the Celotex factory planned for Clewiston when finally completed alone should give employment to several thousands, creating a circulation of wealth, a basis for business and professional activity.

3. An ideal climate and natural healthy environment, so necessary to the prosperity and social upbuilding of any community.

4. Transportation facilities.

The combination of these four great elements offers a firm basis for the prediction that Clewiston will become one of the great cities of Florida.

Industries already planned for Clewiston

It is planned to build a 1,500-ton sugar mill as the first unit of a 7,500-ton mill (which will be larger than any in the world except one).

The first unit is expected to start operations in 1927. A Celotex plant is planned to be completed shortly after that. These two industries when completed are expected to employ between 2,000 and 3,000 men.

Since the annual cane sugar consumption in the United States is about 4,200,000 tons and only 750,000 tons are supplied from this country, there is unlimited room for growth.

Clewiston enjoys rail transportation with Atlantic Coast Line Railway and has water connections through canals and river to both ocean and gulf. It is now being connected with both coasts at Ft. Myers and Palm Beach by the new Cross State Highway, expected to be finished in a year.

Send for maps showing railways, highways and canals.

The City of "Certain Income"

A MODEL CITY · IN A MODEL CLIMATE
On the Beautiful Lake Okeechobee—midway between Palm Beach and Ft. Myers. On the new Cross State Highway being built between these points

Located on the bank of the beautiful Lake Okeechobee (the largest fresh-water lake in the United States except Lake Michigan) Clewiston will offer attractions that few other cities possess.

Boating and bathing . . . fishing and hunting . . . fresh . . . clean . . . healthful . . . beautiful . . . Florida Sunshine . . . Florida Moonlight.

Florida has the lowest death rate of any state.

"Why I would rather live in Clewiston"

Read what Mr. Dahlberg says about living in Clewiston. Remember, he could buy a lot anywhere in Florida and put any priced house on it.

"Aside from the fact that Clewiston has a most delightful climate, I am like the great majority of people, I enjoy fresh water.

"Moreover, I like boating—not in a floating palace, but in a boat. And when I go fishing, I don't like to pay somebody ten or twenty or a hundred dollarge a day for an outfit. I want to use my own, go where I like and do it man-fashion. No parlor chair fishing for me.

"There are many kinds of fish to be caught in Okeechobee, if you are a good enough fisherman.

"The golf course that will be laid out for Clewiston is expected to be one of the finest in the State.

"I don't go in much for hunting, but my friends do. And around Clewiston is a huntsman's paradise—deer, wild turkey, wild duck, and all that.

"Fine schools are planned for Clewiston. The layout of the city is beautiful. Nolen has provided for parks and a magnificent water-front. The factories and railroads are to be so located as not to disturb with noise or smoke. Clewiston will possess so many solid advantages that I know the right kind of people will be attracted."

Plan Now— You can build later

In a few months, the choice lots will be gone. The best are being chosen early.

So write for literature now and get all the facts. Then, to make sure, do what we did—go and see. Or write responsible people anywhere in Florida.

HOUSEWIVES!

How often have you longed for an opportunity to employ your spare time in a dignified calling? One in which your friends would rejoice and in which you would profit.

Combining with the desire to earn extra money that prestige which gains instant social recognition and which may well be compared to that accorded to the woman who has just received her decree in Law or Medicine.

We believe that the code of ethics promulgated and practiced by us forms the basis of what must become the accepted standard of the Real Estate fraternity, and further, that the woman of TODAY is destined to play an important part in this business.

While the large earning possibilities are lightly touched, we believe that our successes for more than thirty years will prevail upon you to allow us to weigh and carefully judge these for you.

A card today will bring you a full and detailed explanation.

SELLING THE LEADER IN YOUR FIELD.

The public recognizes one outstanding product in each field. Sales people handling this product are the highest paid—are everywhere courteously received. The prestige of their product makes work pleasant.

You see statements that salespeople CAN make $3,000 to $10,000 per year. OUR people DO. Pay checks for $750.00, $426.25, $845.00, $420.00, and similar amounts are frequently paid for a single week's work. Ask our sales people. Both in cash and personal satisfaction it pays best to sell the leading product in your field.

In the field of publications the best product is THE WORLD BOOK, the ten volume popular encyclopedia, publicly called "the best in the world" by the American Library Association. Its supremacy can nowhere be disputed. It is the ONLY reference book the home and school recommended in the book lists prepared jointly by the Nat'l. Education Assn. and the American Library Assn. for both graded schools and high schools. Their verdict is supreme in education.

Volume of sales and consequent high earnings for WORLD BOOK representatives result from the enormous buying influence of educators who everywhere recommend and approve the purchase of this set for homes, teachers, schools. "Repeat" orders come in a steady stream.

Now is positions with THE WORLD BOOK organization will be opened Sept. 15. The company's plans of expansion is so attractive that every person to whom a position has been offered has accepted. Any person who has learned to do our work this new way is unusually successful. Investigate and make application to W. F. QUARRIE & CO., 154 E. Erie, Chicago. Write or call in person.

DO IT TODAY.

THE HARBOR ORDINANCE [now signed by Mayor Dever] and Henry Ford's plans new projects. This made it possible for us to offer good paying positions to ladies of good personality.

INCREASE YOUR INCOME.

This is publicity work, made easy by our constructive co-operation. No school of instruction and no experience necessary. Your ability to follow simple instructions and your earnest effort will mean a good pay check for you every week. This is a genuine opportunity to make a permanent connection with an efficient organization.

Every Car Sacrificed

JORDAN, 1925, SEDAN, 5 PASS.; RECEIVED in its original Crane-Simplex finish; driven exactly 7,049 miles, and in guaranteed new car condition mechanically; 4 wheel hydraulic brakes; balloon tires, spring oilers, spotlight, motometer and lock, heater, etc. $750 down.

JORDAN, 5 PASS. SEDAN, 1924, ONE OF the best looking closed cars in the city at the lowest price a car of this model has ever been offered. Finished in Crane-Simplex with vermillion wheels. Mechanism is that of a new car and is 100% guaranteed; 4 wheel hydraulic brakes, 5 balloon tires, nearly new trunk on rear, spotlight, motometer, stoplight, spring oilers, and other necessary extras. $625 down.

JORDAN 4 DOOR BROUGHAM, 1923. Crane-Simplex finish, orange panel, orange wheels; 5 practically new tires; perfect upholstery, bumpers, automatic windshield cleaner, motometer, lock, etc. New car guarantee. A value too good to pass by. $480 down.

JORDAN BROUGHAM, 1923. 5 PASS. A body style most sought after today. Refinished "Burgundy Old Wine," vermilion wheels. Upholstery has never been sat on, trunk on rear, bumpers, 5 practically new cord tires. New car guarantee. $440 down.

ESSEX 5 PASS. SEDAN. Good finish, good tires, good mechanically. $160 down.

OAKLAND, 1924, COUPE. In unusually good mechanical condition; velour upholstery; 4 wheel mechanical brakes; spot light, motometer, lock; 5 very good tires; will sacrifice owing to the fact that finish of car is dull. $500 down.

JORDAN GREAT LINE EIGHT "PLAY BOY" WITH 2 PASS. RUMBLE SEAT. This is a current model Play Boy, the first of its type, we believe, ever offered in the used car market. It has been in service only a months and would pass for new. Will sell for cost to one of our owners who has left this city and will finance its sale. $825 down.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

INSURES FAMILY OF LOT BUYER AGAINST LOSS

Nixon Plan Gives Estate Land and Cash.

BY AL CHASE.

With the closing of a deal between George F. Nixon & Co., realtors, and the Aetna Life Insurance company, yesterday, the families of buyers of lots from the Nixon firm are to be guaranteed protection in case of death. In other words, if a buyer dies, his family will at once be given clear title to the lot free, with all payments made to date returned by the Nixon company to the buyer's family.

This will do away with one of the deterrants to buying property, for many people hesitate to sign a contract to purchase a lot, fearing death might leave the rest of the family with obligations which would be a burden to carry out.

Given Lot Free.

Under the Nixon plan, however, if a man buys a lot and has made several payments on it, his death will impose no hardship on his heirs, so far as the real estate is concerned, for they will at once be given the lot free and all the monthly payments made on it.

This is said to be the first time an insurance company has underwritten real estate sales contracts, according to Herbert Lorber, who represented the Chicago brokers for the Aetna Life, Rollins, Burdick & Hunter.

Render New Service.

"We feel that we've arrived at the most economical merchandising plan possible in real estate," said Mr. Nixon, "and our estate protection plan is to render a service to our lot buyers heretofore not possible.

"In event that the purchaser dies, the property will be deeded clear to his family, together with the return of all payments; we in turn will make loans on the clear property. This contract will affect all property bought from us on and after Aug. 25."

"Not a Premium—A Service."

"This is in reality an estate protection plan," said Mr. Lorber. "It's not a free insurance plan. It's a bonafide guarantee for the protection of estates of real estate purchasers under the installment plan. It's not a premium; it's a service.

"This is such a new departure in real estate transactions that I expect the insurance company will carry on the business under a different policy name than life insurance, since from the very nature of the policy, it's an estate protection plan. We already have formulated the policy or guarantee to be given to the lot buyer."

Brokers' Notes

Harry R. Daniel, former Chicagoan and for the last few years assistant to the president and director of the educational department of S. W. Straus & Co., with headquarters in New York, is spending the month of September at the local offices. He announced that Frank Thayer has been appointed "western educational director" we'll whisper confidentially that W. E. D. means "publicity man") for the Straus Chicago office, succeeding Guy W. Seem. Mr. Thayer was a member of the faculty of Northwestern university for four years and later with the American City bureau.

William H. Kelley, formerly a member of Kelly Brothers, has opened a new office at 6760 Stony Island avenue, in the Stony Island bank building.

CHICAGO CITY BANK GETS SITE FOR BUILDING

Frank C. Rathje has leased for the Chicago City Bank and Trust company the southeast corner of 63d and Green, 125x125, for ninety-nine years, at a rental reported to be $35,000 annually. David Wine was lessor.

On this site the bank intends in a year or so to erect an imposing edifice for its own use. No architect has yet been retained. Harry M. and Louis Englestein were brokers.

NEGOTIATE 5½% LOAN.

E. G. Krumrine & Co., report having closed a $375,000 ten year loan at 5½% on the property at the southwest corner of Jackson and Racine.

$800,000 South Chicago Y. M. C. A.

The $800,000 South Chicago Young Men's Christian association building, to be erected at the southeast corner of 91st and Houston, was designed by Berlin & Swern. It'll be of red brick on all sides and with stone trim on the two street façades. It will front 161 feet on 91st and 131 feet on Houston. More is told about this project in a nearby column.

PLAN 47 STORY SKYSCRAPER AT WELLS-MONROE

Plans are being drawn for what may be the third tallest loop building, a $3,000,000 towering structure, to be at least thirty-one and possibly forty-seven stories, at the southeast corner of Wells and Monroe.

It's to be built by Samuel, William J. and Morris A. Pancoe, and will be called the Pancoe building. Hall, Lawrence, Rippel & Ratcliff will be the architects and tentative plans call for a structure of Gothic design, with sweeping vertical lines [with none of the horizontal ones that Chicago architects so delight in using] and several set backs.

To Be Along New York Lines.

"We don't intend to have it the usual Chicago packing box office building" said Morris Pancoe, "with the old fashioned heavy cornices and horizontal lines wherever the architect can draw them in. We hope to have a building that will dominate the western part of the loop. If we can go forty-seven stories, with set backs, we'll have the second tallest building in the loop, being only surpassed by the Chicago Temple. If we only go thirty-one, we'll rank next to the Morrison in height and be third."

The trio of Pancoe brothers already own the L shaped eight story Pancoe building at Monroe and Wells. Yesterday they leased for ninety-nine years the property adjoining it on the south, at 105-09 South Wells, from the Susan B. Kerfoot estate at a term rental of $1,034,500. The price paid for the building was not disclosed.

May Start Next Year.

The Pancoe brothers now have a site fronting 100 feet on Wells and seventy on Monroe. Work on the new skyscraper will start as soon as leases permit. This may be the latter part of 1926.

The three Pancoe brothers also own the sixteen story Madison Square building and the stationery house known as Sidney-Morris company. The attorneys in yesterday's deal were Benjamin Bachrach, Frank G. Gardner, and Henry E. Mason.

The Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company will underwrite a first mortgage bond issue on the new Pancoe building.

WILL START AT ONCE ON SOUTH CHICAGO "Y"

Work will start as soon as possible on the long contemplated South Chicago Y. M. C. A., at the southeast corner of 91st and Houston. The four story building will cost in the neighborhood of $800,000 and will be completed July 1, 1926.

At the time of the campaign for funds last November for the construction of the building, the Illinois Steel company contributed $375,000 on the condition that an equal amount be raised in the community.

Architects Berlin & Swern have planned a building to contain three floors of dormitory rooms, or 225 in all.

The building will have two entrances, the one from 91st street will lead into the men's department. The boys will have their own entrance on Houston avenue.

The men's lobby will be paneled in wood with a large fireplace at one end. There'll be a cafeteria, a swimming pool, a main gymnasium and an auxiliary gym, ten regulation bowling alleys, a large billiard room, small lunch counter, many club rooms, private dining rooms, etc.

AMERICAN LINEN PLANS $700,000 4 STORY BUILDING

The American Linen Supply company has awarded contracts for its $700,000 four story fireproof building to be erected on the east side of Franklin, extending from Chestnut to Institute place.

The owners have been engaged in the rental of clean linen for commercial purposes in Chicago for twenty-five years. They are now at 140 West Austin, with branches throughout this country and Canada.

The new establishment will be the largest of its kind in the world, it is claimed. Fred A. Hale of Salt Lake City, and John J. Davey of Chicago, are the architects. Neller, Rich & Co., are engineers.

ROBERT McKNIGHT TO SPEAK.

Robert McKnight will address the Central Lions Club of Chicago, on "The Central Manufacturing District of Chicago" on Tuesday, at noon, at the Hamilton club.

Synagogue for Kenmore Avenue

Work is being resumed on the synagogue of Agudath Achim North Shore congregation at 5029 Kenmore avenue, one story of which was erected in 1922. The building will seat 1,500 when completed next year. Later on a community hall and Sunday school building is contemplated for the property adjoining on the north. L. Hubschman is president of the congregation and Joseph Schwartz is chairman of the building committee. Dubin & Eisenberg are architects and engineers.

THREE SUBURBS APPOINT TOWN PLAN BOARDS

Mundelein, Libertyville, Homewood.

Three more Chicago suburbs have joined the ranks of the communities that believe in orderly and intelligent development, and have placed the supervision of their growth in the hands of plan commissions. These are Mundelein (which, perhaps with the exception of Deerfield, is Chicago's smallest suburb to have a plan commission), Libertyville, and Homewood.

Each of the three is having an official village plan outlined by Jacob Crane Jr. as a guide for future growth along comprehensive lines.

Bar Old Fashioned Checkerboard.

Mundelein is to be developed into an attractive municipality, with paved winding roads and boulevards instead of the usual checkerboard layout most of our real estate men favor.

The Crane plan already has been approved by the plan commission, which in Mundelein is made up of the members of the village board. The Lake County Land association apparently is back of the project to have Mundelein grow up as a community should.

New Wrinkles in Libertyville.

Although Libertyville has had a plan commission only a few weeks, it has engaged Mr. Crane to develop a comprehensive village plan. The town also is drawing up a building code and also a plumbing code. It is proposed to have both builders and plumbers in Libertyville licensed, which is said to be a new wrinkle in village activities, so far as the Chicago district is concerned. Paul W. Pettingill is chairman of the Libertyville plan commission.

Orvill Bright is chairman of the Homewood plan commission. The village plan for Homewood has not yet been completed.

Buy Madison Park Site for Co-op. Apartment Building

Le Roy F. Harris and Henry Rothchild have bought the 75x125, improved with an old residence, at 1236 Madison Park, from Paul A. C. Anderson for a reported $35,000, and will erect a cooperative apartment building. Carroll, Scherdorf & Boenicke were brokers and Anderson & Anderson were attorneys

Will Replace Windsor-Clifton Hotel

Above is the sixteen story office building to be erected at the northwest corner of Wabash and Monroe from plans by D. H. Burnham & Co., as told about in this department last Friday. It will replace the old Windsor-Clifton hotel and will be erected by the Wabash-Monroe Building corporation, of which Ernest A. Jackson is head. L. A. McHale of Farnham, Kuhn & Co. was broker in negotiating the ninety-nine year lease on the site from the Mandel estate. There'll be a "five 'n' ten" Woolworth establishment on four floors. As announced several weeks ago in this department, the Woolworth store at State and Monroe is to move.

POSTMASTER LUEDER CHALLENGES IVERSEN TO REALTOR RODEO

A horse race in bathing suits along the shore of Lake Michigan between Arthur Lueder, postmaster of Chicago, and S. Charles Iversen, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, and possibly Mr. Croissant, Mr. Nixon and other subdivider horsemen, is the newest stunt to stir interest in the coming outing of realty men at Grand Beach, Mich., on Sept. 15.

S. CHARLES IVERSON. (Walinger Photo.)

The horse race is certain, says Mr. Lueder, who has challenged Mr. Iversen. But whether it'll be in bathing suits or golf clothes has not yet been determined.

"I'd suggest bathing suits, because most of 'em will probably fall off and most likely land in the lake and have to swim ashore; it'll save their golf togs," commented a realtor.

"Never mind about bathing suits," suggested another. "Tie 'em on their steeds and then they won't fall into the lake and maybe somebody'll win the race."

The Grand Beach management has promised to supply horses from its stables for any realtors who want to compete with Mr. Iversen and Mr. Lueder.

GLEN ELLYN TO HAVE MASONIC TEMPLE AND 1,200 SEAT CINEMA

Glen Ellyn is to have a $160,000 theater and Masonic temple on South Main street, just south of Duane street, according to the Glen Ellyn News.

A committee composed of Karl Leehr, Acers Rathbun, Herbert Martin, Stanley Cutler, Andrew N. Fox and George D. Miller, representing the Glen Ellyn Masonic Temple association, made the official announcement that the new temple-theater was going ahead at last.

Architect Elmer F. Behrns is drawing plans for a two-story building to contain a 1,200 seat theater, with completely equipped stage, a ball room accommodating 200 couples, a palm room, seven shops and five offices.

Glen Ellyn lodge No. 950, A. F. & A. M., will have a large lodge hall, dining room and kitchen, spacious parlor, check rooms, etc. The building, which will front 125 feet on Main street, will be in English Tudor style of architecture.

This apparently will settle the rumor of a theater to supplant Mr. Nadelhofer's livery stable on Crescent boulevard, for that talked of film house was contingent on Glen Ellyn voting for Sunday movies. The Masonic temple theater is to be built no matter how the residents vote on Sabbath film flickerings, and, judging from the opposition to Sunday pictures, Glen Ellyn will continue to bar them.

William A. Schaefer has started work on his garage and warehouse building at Duane and Lorraine, to cost $75,000.

Why Big Cities Become Big

One hundred years ago the city of Peoria was the great population center and trading center of Illinois. The city of Chicago wasn't even founded.

Then came the railroads—centering in Chicago—making Chicago accessible from everywhere.

Transportation!

The same sort of thing is happening now on Chicago's North Shore. A section hitherto hard to reach will, within a few months, enjoy the modern high speed transportation of the North Shore Line's New Extension.

Many choice "at the stations" home sites and business sites are still available at low prices in this new transportation area. Never has the established Nixon policy of offering transportation extension property meant so much to investors.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

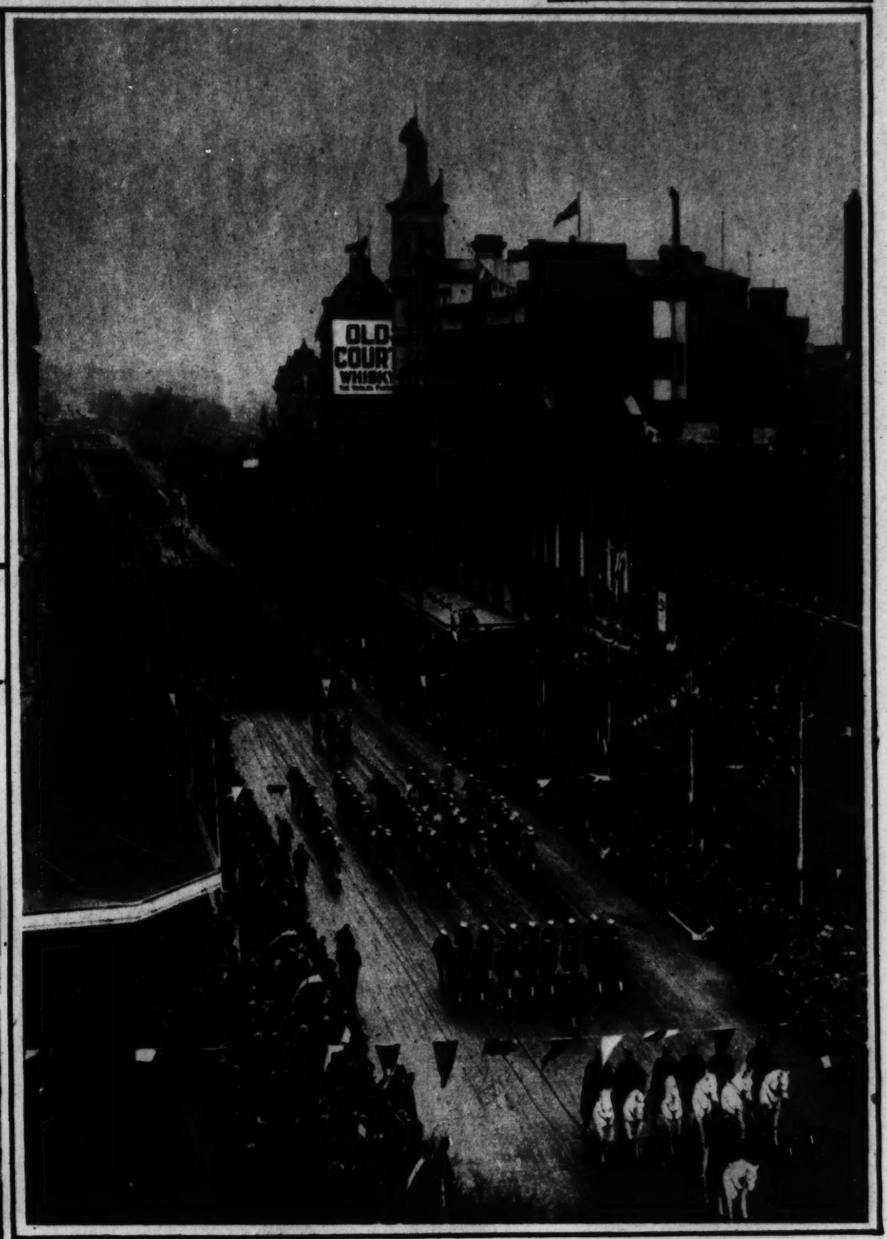
September 6, 1925

JUST BEFORE GERTRUDE EDERLE JUMPED OFF at Cape Gris-Nez, France, on her first heroic attempt to swim the English channel, her body was given a triple coat of grease as a protection against cold and exposure. It was not external causes, however, that accomplished the defeat of the 18 year old American girl; it was salt water she swallowed in great quantities while battling a choppy sea mid-channel, which she was unable to withstand.

(Photograph copyright by Pacific and Atlantic.)

NO STOP FOR LUNCH! Every hour of the 8 hours and 46 minutes during which Miss Ederle struggled with the treacherous channel waters she was fed by Jabez Wolfe, her trainer; but under the traditions of the ordeal, of course, she could not emerge from the water. A small flask of hot chocolate and a lump or two of sugar comprised the hourly ration.

(Photograph copyright by Pacific and Atlantic.)

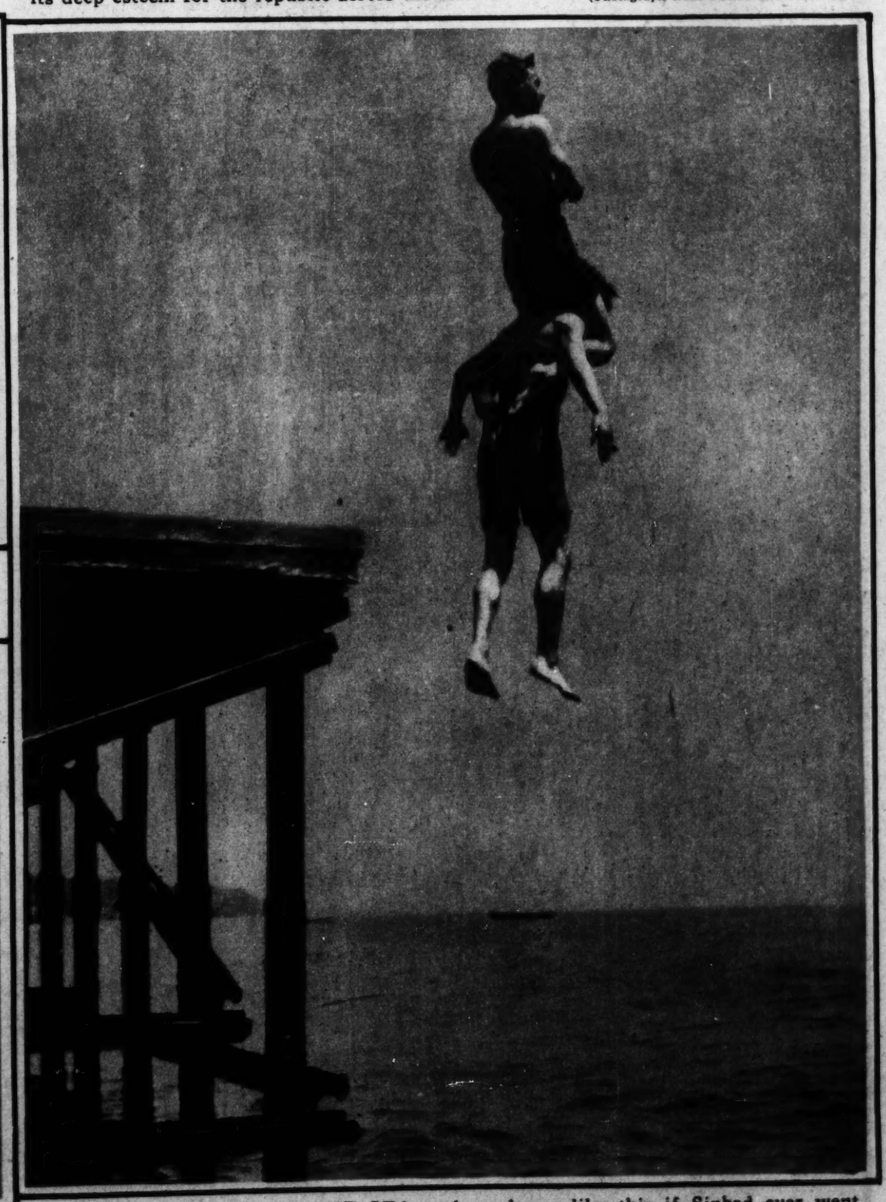


THE YANKEES CONQUER AUSTRALIA—The triumphal parade of American sailors and marines through Melbourne during the official visit of the fleet. The maze of fluttering pennons and the crowds that bank the street attest what dispatches reveal, that the southern continent welcomed its visitors with open arms to demonstrate its deep esteem for the republic across the sea.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

SIX AND A HALF MILES FROM DOVER the Olympic girl champion collapsed and was received by the waiting arms of Ishak Helmy, the Egyptian swimmer, shown here swimming alongside Miss Ederle ready for rescue as her strokes grew weak. Overcome by the salt water, at the last she turned on her back every few hundred yards and massaged her body in a superb effort to carry on.

(Photograph copyright by Pacific and Atlantic.)



THE OLD MAN OF THE SEA took a plunge like this if Sinbad ever went diving. It's at Varna, the Coney island of Bulgaria, and it's one of the ways these two youths think the ordinary thrills of diving can be made to look as exciting as a game of croquet.

(Photograph copyright by Keystone.)

SOBBING AS IF HER HEART WOULD BREAK, Miss Ederle was drawn into the rowboat that accompanied her at the end of her plucky swim. She found comfort there in the arms of Mlle. Sion, the French swimmer, whose understanding was perfect because she, too, had failed in the attempt to conquer the strait.

Why Women read The Tribune

FOR years The Tribune has sought to serve its women readers with sound and reliable feature departments of particular interest to them. Thousands of women regard The Tribune not only as a bulletin of world events and local news, but as a means of learning the latest fashion notes, the safest and best methods of beauty culture and the wisest course to pursue in training children. Every day its women's pages contain a myriad of intensely interesting articles which women read.

To assure its women readers the feminine viewpoint throughout these departments, The Tribune has secured the best authorities, all women, to conduct this work, and the thousands of letters received by them every month testify to its success.

Genevieve Forbes Herrick

IT took American newspaperdom a long time to learn the value of women on the reportorial staff. There was an old time axiom that the local room of a newspaper was no place for a woman.

All that was years ago. Today most newspapers of any consequence employ women reporters. The Tribune, always sensitive to the trend of the times, can count three women reporters on its staff.

Each of these women — Genevieve Forbes Herrick, Maureen McKernan, and Kathleen McLaughlin—work under the direction of the city editor, just as men reporters do, taking any assignment which he sees fit to give them in the course of the day's routine.

Today they may interview a visiting prince, tomorrow a notorious gunman, next week one of them will "cover" the season's most fashionable wedding. But whatever the assignment their stories are naturally written as seen with a woman's eyes, and with a woman's super-sensitiveness to truth.

Maureen McKernan

Mrs. Smith is as keenly interested in the happenings of the day as is her husband. There are countless Mrs. Smiths reading The Tribune every day. They get a particular enjoyment from the stories of these three Tribune women as well as from the numerous other Tribune departments conducted for women by women.

FOR years Doris Blake has been the confidant of hundreds of brown-eyed, blue-eyed, anxious and perplexed young people who, having become the victims of Cupid's marksmanship, appeal to Miss Blake's "Advice to the Lovelorn" department for guidance.

A few months ago, however, Doris Blake began writing daily editorials on various ethical and moral questions that appeared of sufficient importance to discuss publicly in her column. Prominent club women and social workers unanimously endorsed this new work. Thus championed she started a serious campaign, expounding in a clear, cool fashion, subjects that are so often the cause of marital and social trouble and concern. Miss Blake does not confine herself to problems of married life but keeps her column varied enough to be of interest to everyone. She writes with a refreshing and convincing style and with an uncanny knowledge of the petty problems and griefs that so often develop serious rifts in the lives of men and women.

These daily chats have become immensely popular with The Tribune's feminine audience and are eagerly sought for each day by thousands of women.

Corinne Lowe

NO other feature of the paper looms quite so large in the eyes of our women readers as the department devoted to fashions.

Realizing this, The Tribune has always had the services of a noted expert in this field. Corinne Lowe, who contributes a daily and Sunday article on fashions, is one of the very few nationally recognized authorities on what a woman should wear, when she should wear it and what she should wear with it. Miss Lowe makes her headquarters in New York, where she has daily contact with the leading arbiters of women's fashions in America. At regular intervals she goes on a scouting expedition to Paris, to make sure that Madame and Mademoiselle are not getting away from their American sisters in this all-essential matter of smart apparel.

Corinne Lowe's articles are first of all informative—and usually prophetically so. Yet they carry the added distinction of being interestingly and amusingly written. And of course they furnish one of the chief reasons why The Tribune is read so attentively by women!

Jane Eddington

JANE EDDINGTON'S Tribune Cook Book is a daily and Sunday feature in The Chicago Tribune that has a strong appeal among all our women readers.

The American housewife is constantly on the lookout for new and savory dishes. In late years she has learned much about dietetics and the proper preparation of food. Her menus are well balanced—and the health-giving properties of the delicacies that reach her table are all carefuly considered.

Jane Eddington has been responsible in large measure for this new era in the American kitchen. Every day for more than fifteen years she has suggested to her thousands of women readers how to plan a varied and a healthful menu.

Miss Eddington is unusually well fitted for her work. She is a keen student of dietetics. She knows all about calories, proteins, fats—and their relation to the human body. Several books on cooking have come from her facile pen. Thousands upon thousands of women—and men—write to Jane Eddington every year for advice on the culinary arts—and these are only a small percentage of the innumerable thousands who eagerly turn to her articles every day.

Jane Eddington is a strong favorite among women who want to know more about the all important art of cooking, and she always has something new to tell them. Her feature brings to women readers practical information from a practical cook.

UNCLE SAM'S PLAN FOR CHICAGO'S NEW OUTER DRIVE—The white line indicates the war department's suggestion for a road straight north from the Field Museum and connecting with Lake Shore drive about Huron street. This would mean cutting through the warehouse district north of the river. The Chicago Plan commission hoped to avoid the delay and expense this would mean by building a causeway to carry the South Park drive out across the inner harbor basin and to connect with Lake Shore drive at the base of the Municipal pier. The war office points out, however, that a drive along the breakwater in the inner harbor might interfere with future development of the harbor.

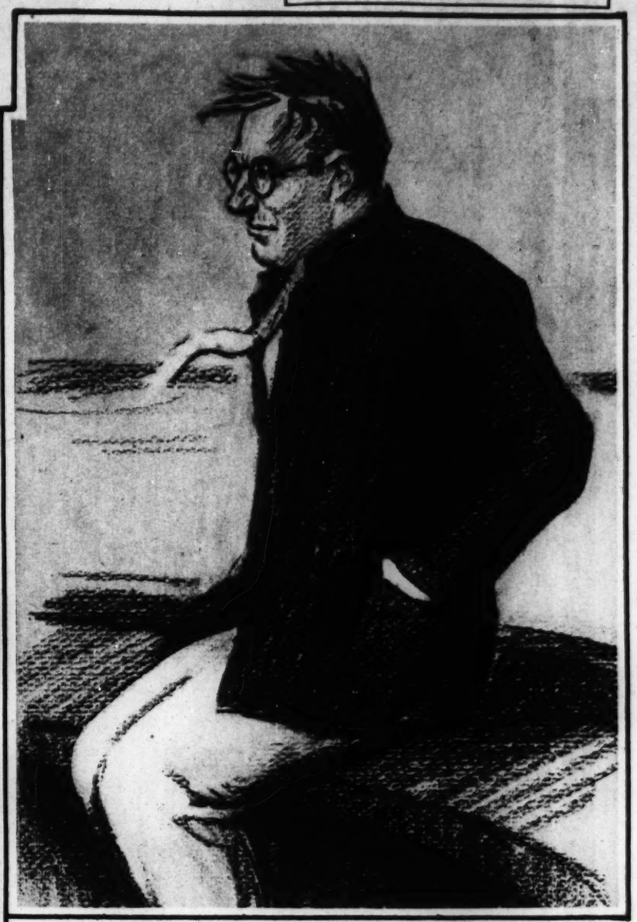
The So-Called Summer Sports

By W. E. HILL.

The tennis enthusiast is, she admits, perfectly crazy about tennis. Many who have played a set with her think so too. "Did you ever!" she screams and gurgles playfully, tripping over her rackets, "I can't imagine what is the matter with my racket, and my service!"

"Cows!" The girl campers are the unwilling recipients, as it were, of a visit from Lena, the neighboring cow. O, for a man to handle the situation.



The not so good sailor. Harry is anything but a nautical soul and his day in the friend's power boat is a long one. He has tried so hard to sound seafaring. "Now take this boat," he is saying, "this is a yawl, isn't it? Or it is a cutter—I mean a brig?"

The young lady golfer is trying out the stuff she learned from the professional. It doesn't go so good, now that she's on her own. That's not her ball she's using, but no one else knows, so why not?

The simple outdoor life would for most people come under the head of summer sport, but not for Josephine, the jazz girl. Josephine is not exactly back to nature, but is visiting three maiden aunts in the country, which is just about as jazzy. One of those "quaint" localities. "O, it's quaint all right," Josephine would no doubt inform the world at large. All the young people have migrated to the towns. The only man under thirty for miles around, is a mental defective. Josephine is swinging gently in the porch hammock and wishing that a big Rolls-Royce—or a Packard maybe—filled with cheering college boys would come by and kidnap her.

Meet Rodney, the fourth man at bridge. He has played twice before, but only with his immediate family. O, what the bridge partners wouldn't like to do to Rodney, over the week-end.

One of the joys of a private swimming pool is dressing at the house, and dripping all over the rugs and the floors on the way back.

The cautious motorist. Bedford is very careful of his little car—1919 model. There's nothing too good in the way of smooth roads for it. Twenty-five an hour is all he gets from it. "Because," he will tell you, "if you use a car well, it will last you a lifetime."

The porch talkers are busy at their favorite sport—the operation details. "Of course," says Mrs. Jones-Jones to Mrs. Smythe-Smythe, "in my sister's case there were complications in the form of perfectly terrible adhesions! The doctor said never had he come across such frightful adhesions!"

For the hiker, no summer sport can compare with the pastime of calling witty and cutting things after hard-hearted motorists. "So's your old man," hurled at a motorist who says his car is full, is a pretty trick retort, we'll say.

The Knit-tex Coat

SOLD BY GOOD CLOTHIERS IN EVERY TOWN

THE Knit-tex Coat is different from any top-coat you have ever worn. It is guaranteed for three years.

Light as a feather, warm as toast, soft as velvet, never wrinkles, never gets out of shape, and can be worn ten months in the year.

Knit-tex is knitted but you wouldn't know it. It looks like a fine imported fabric. The yoke and sleeve lining are of Skinner's satin.

In every city and town in the United States there is a clothing store that has this Knit-tex photograph in its windows. Look for it.

That store will show you Knit-tex in many beautiful new shades of light and medium grey, Oxford, brown, tan, blue, blue-grey, lavender-grey, fawn, mode, and heather mixtures.

If you are shown a knit coat without the Knit-tex label, beware! If the Knit-tex label is not in the coat, it is not made of genuine guaranteed Knit-tex Cloth.

A HEAD-ON CRASH IN THE ROCKIES near Granite, Colo., left this wreckage in its wake. Two trainmen were killed, fifteen passengers were seriously hurt, and seventy-five others suffered minor injuries. The engines rammed each other into a mass of tangled metal, and one of the coaches was catapulted down into a mountain creek.

IT'S A WHALE, no less, the first one captured in California waters in years. A fine specimen of the gray whale, too, some 75 feet long and weighing around thirty tons. It gave a crew of experienced whalers a nine hour fight before it was killed. Here we find the huge remains moored beside a barge at Long Beach, with one of its captors standing astride the exhibit. A ROYAL CHRISTENING FOR A YANKEE BABY at the American pro-Cathedral in Paris. The child is little Helen Marie Leeds, shown with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Leeds. Mr. Leeds is heir to the tinplate fortune accumulated by his father; Mrs. Leeds is the former Princess Xenia of Greece. The others are the crown princess of Roumania, the baby's godmother; Princess Andrew of Greece; Princess Irene of Greece, a sister of Mrs. Leeds and the proxy for the Dowager Empress Marie of Russia, the baby's second godmother; and Prince Andrew of Greece.

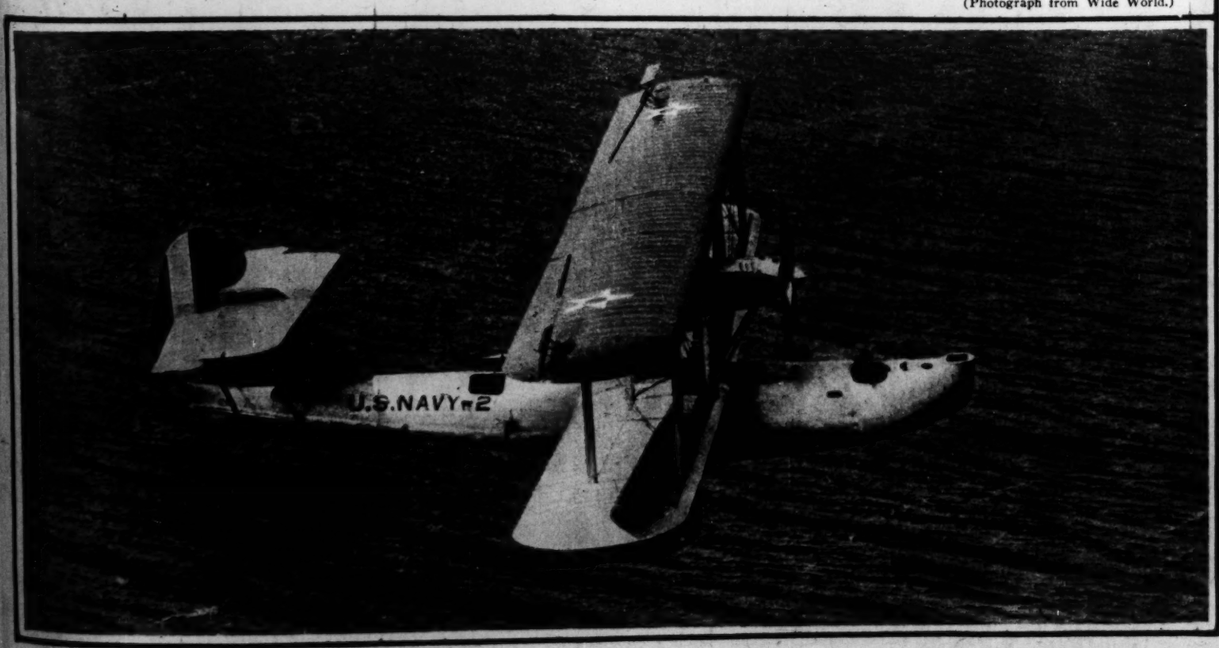
THE WHITE RAJAH of Sarawak holds a peace conference with native chieftains of India. The rajah is Charles Vyner Brooke, born in London, but now master of 40,000 square miles of wild lands in India and governor of some 500,000 souls. He succeeded his father in 1917. (Photograph from Wide World.)



ACROSS-THE-PACIFIC SEAPLANE, one of the three naval patrol boats chosen for the trying endurance flight from San Francisco to Honolulu. This plane, the PB-1, is rated a cruising range of 2,500 miles with its two great engines of more than 700 horse power each.

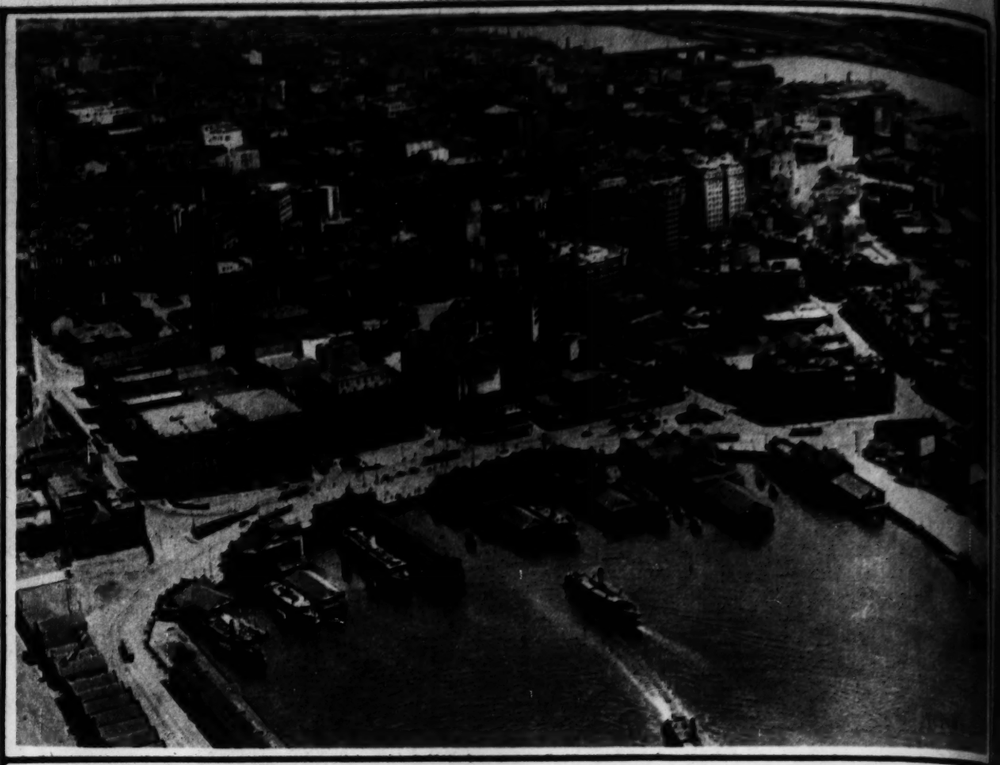
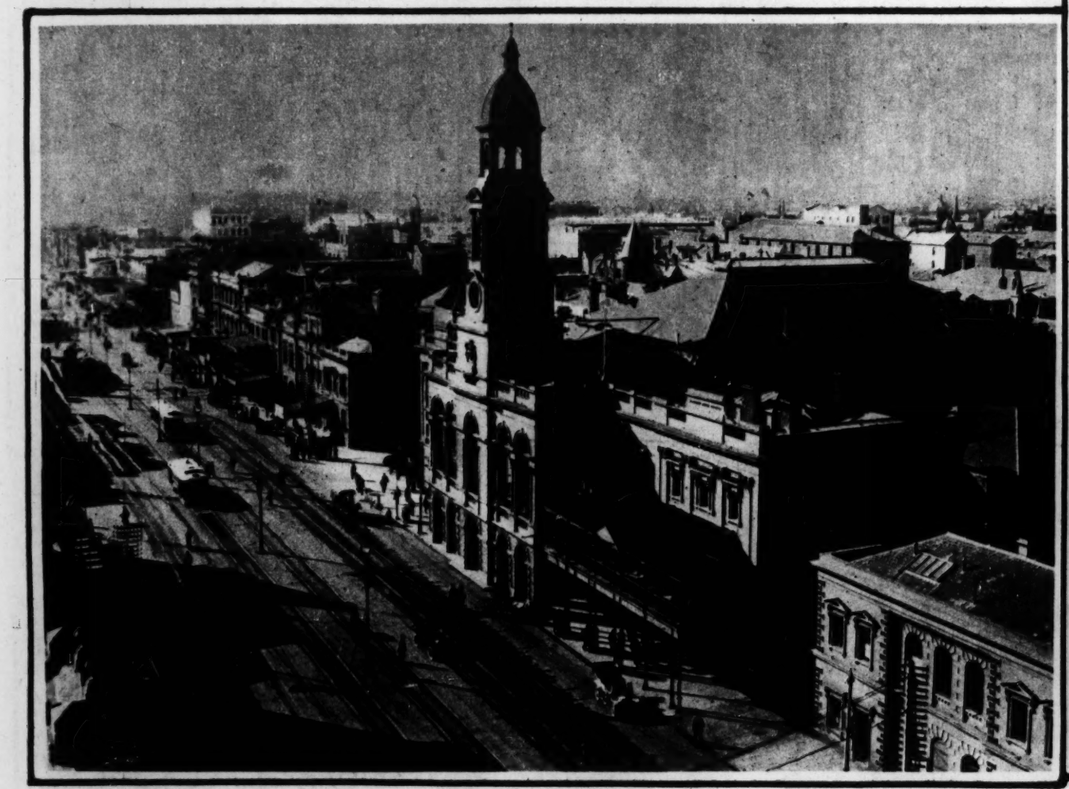
AUSTRALIA TODAY will do nicely as a title for this rotologue page. Here we have a bird's-eye view of Melbourne, the capital of Victoria, in southeastern Australia. As modern as most American cities is this thriving metropolis of the far east. It has its theaters and opera house, a great and growing university, a public library of thousands of volumes, a stock exchange, huge exhibition buildings, and scores of fine public buildings. Built on the Yarra Yarra river, with direct rail connections to nearby ocean ports, it is a distributing center of commerce for the whole country.

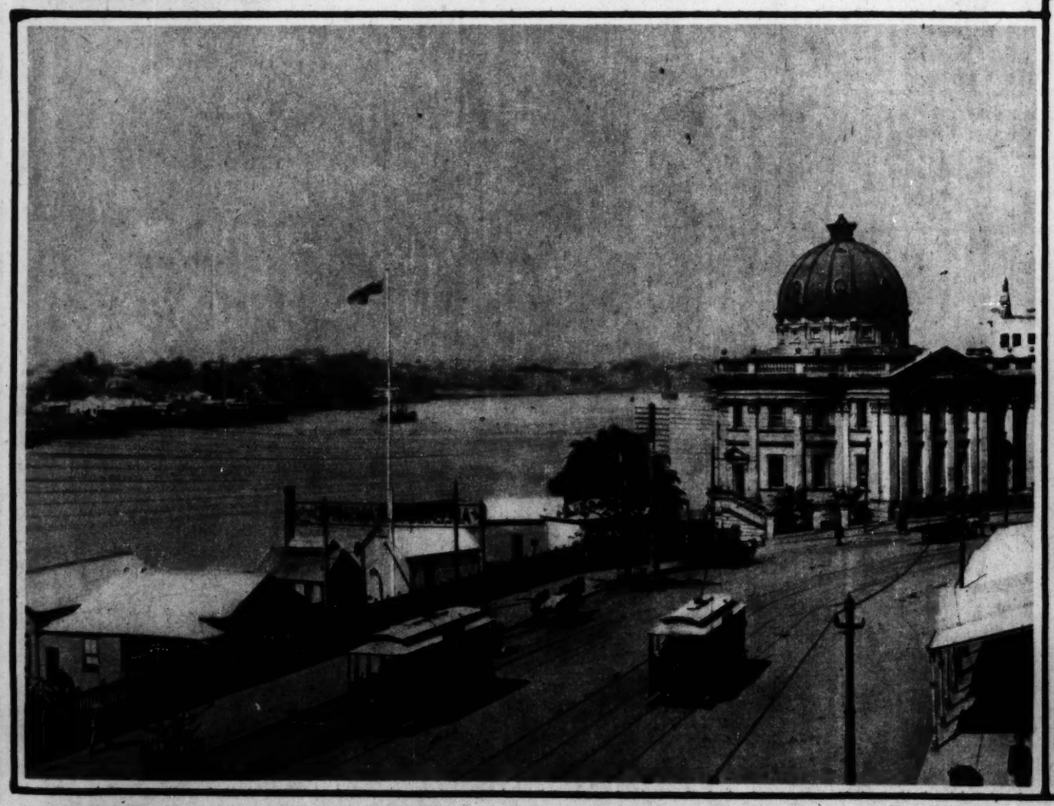


SYDNEY, with this circular quay alive with water commerce, is the chief naval station of Australia. Next to Melbourne it is Britain's most important commercial center in the southern seas. Sydney is the capital of New South Wales. It is Australia's oldest city, founded in 1788 by Captain Arthur Phillip as a penal colony. Its harbor is landlocked, with deep water to its rocky shores, and is defended by modern fortifications.

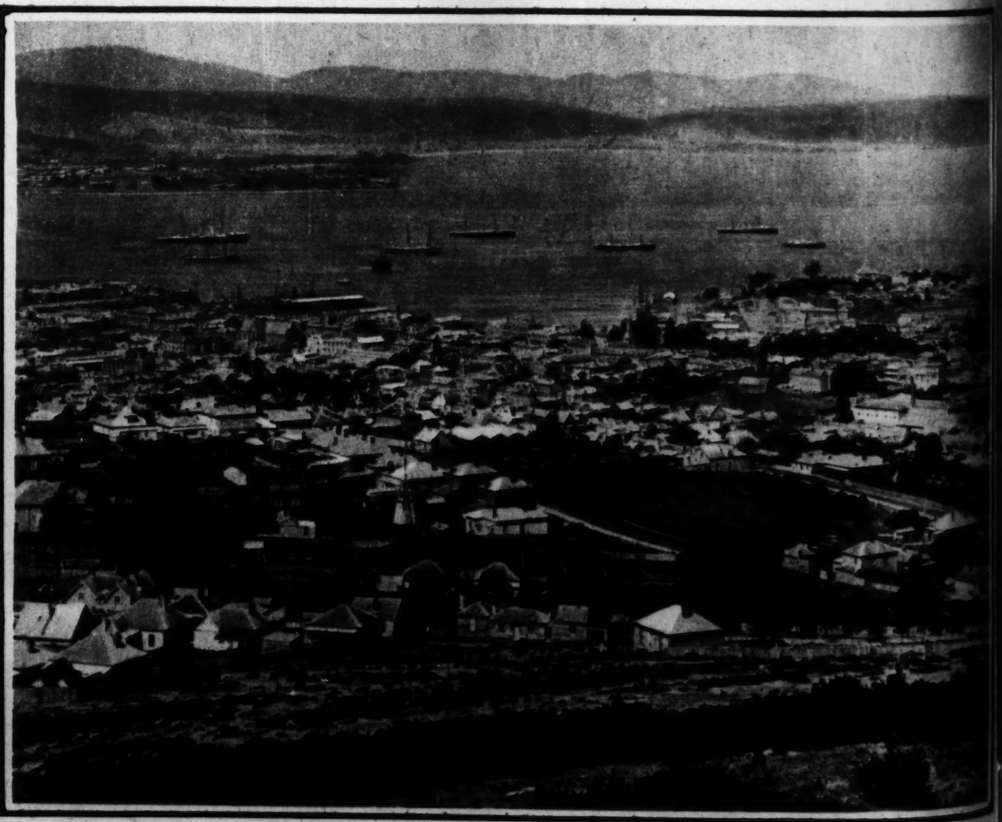


ADELAIDE, the capital of South Australia, stretches out on a level plain at the base of Mount Loftus. King William street, pictured here, is one of the busiest of Adelaide's thoroughfares. The city is the seat of Adelaide university. It boasts an excellent botanical garden, big government buildings and parliament houses, an impressive town hall. Founded in 1836, the city was named for Queen Adelaide, wife of William IV.

PERTH, whose St. George's terrace we see here, is the capital of western Australia. The gazetteers tell us it has a city hall, governor's palace, barracks, mechanic's institute, observatory, etc.; and the etc. includes an extensive reserve known as Perth park. It is the seat of both Catholic and Anglican bishops.



QUEENSLAND'S CUSTOM HOUSE on the Brisbane river. Queensland is a state of Australia, occupying much of the northeast corner of the continent and including islands adjacent in the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of Carpentaria. Part of its present limits composed a penal settlement until 1842. It has some 2250 miles of excellent seaboard, with many wonderful bays. They boast of their climate in Queensland—absence of hot winds, and extreme dryness of the atmosphere, with hot days followed by pleasantly cool nights.



TASMANIA, a British island off the southernmost point of Australia, is usually regarded as a part of Australia. Bass' Strait, about 150 miles wide, separates it from the mainland. It once was known as Van Diemen's Land. Tasmania is a country of wonderful forests, fairly sizeable mountain peaks, some soaring to 5000 feet or more, and climate—lots of climate. Hobart harbor at Hobart, the capital of Tasmania, is shown in our picture. The island is self-governed; a governor is appointed by the crown, its legislation is in control of two houses whose members are elected by the people.

DANISH ROYALTY GOES A-PICNICKING, with this interesting picture as the result. In front are Princess Margrethe of Bourbon; Prince George of Greece; Princess Viggo, the former Eleanor Green of New York; Dagmar, the former dowager empress of Russia; Duchess Thyra of Cumberland, and two children of the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg, who is a brother of the Danish queen. In the rear are Duchess Olga of Brunswick; Princess Margareta; Prince Valdemar, wearing his hat; Duchess Max of Baden; Prince Berthold of Baden; and the Grand Duchess and Grand Duke of Mecklenburg. THE STAY-AWAKE CLUB, young students of George Washington university, who shunned sleep for sixty hours so their reactions and so on could be studied by Prof. Fred A. Moss. In the back row are William Middleton, Alice Haines, Louise Ornwake, and Watson Monroe. In front are John Petrie, Thelma Hunt, Prof. Moss, Katherine Ornwake, and Robert Ward. 'Tis said the savant discovered that two young persons in love with each other could stand sixty hours of each other's company without boredom. Maybe you can pick out the couple from this group. A STUNNING BATHING SUIT, as the fashion writers say it, is made of honeybees with cap to match. It's especially stunning if several of 'em decide to start stinging all at once. That won't happen if you're not afraid of the insects, says Charles Bangham, an 18 year old bee wizard of Washington Court House, Ohio, who wears this creation. Most of us, though, would be afraid the bees would make a mistake and think we were scared. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

Your tooth-brush can go only so far— after that it is up to your dentifrice

IT IS physically impossible to brush every surface and crevice of your teeth where decay may begin. It is also impossible for any tooth-brush to protect your gums from irritation or infection. The real work of protection on the grinding surfaces of your teeth, and especially at that vital place, The Danger Line, is up to your dentifrice.

Where is the Danger Line?

Your gums thin out to a very fine, delicate edge where they come in contact with the teeth. If you look closely, you can see the tiny V-shaped crevices formed by this union of your gums and teeth. You will find these crevices on the outside of your teeth, in between your teeth and in back of your teeth. They form The Danger Line.

What happens there

Particles of food and germs collect in these tiny crevices of The Danger Line. Acids form which cause Acid Decay of the teeth and irritation of the gums. In time the gums break down. Such conditions are favorable to Pyorrhea and loss of teeth. Many serious diseases are often traceable to Acid Decay and infection at The Danger Line. People who lack energy, who seem constantly on the verge of ill-health, who are pale of skin and dull of eye, should attend to their teeth and gums.

How to protect The Danger Line

Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, is a safe, scientific means of neutralizing the acids in the mouth, which, unless neutralized, cause Acid Decay and often Pyorrhea.

To give your teeth and gums proper care and really lasting, effective protection, use Squibb's Dental Cream regularly at least twice a day. Tiny particles of this ideal protective dentifrice will reach all the pits and hidden crevices of your teeth which are inaccessible to any tooth-brush. There they will remain, neutralizing acids as they form, protecting the teeth from Acid Decay, lessening the peril of Pyorrhea, at the place where Pyorrhea begins—The Danger Line.

Remember then your tooth-brush can go only so far. And be sure that you select a dentifrice that will go the rest of the way to safe, effective protection. Ask any druggist for Squibb's Dental Cream.

$25,000.00 In 508 Cash Awards

Squibb Educational Contest

Each advertisement of E. R. Squibb & Sons has an educational purpose. It gives information which, if followed, will lead to better health. To help accomplish this purpose, we will distribute $25,000.00 in cash awards among 508 contestants who give the best answers to eleven questions.

Ten of these eleven questions appear in this column. The eleventh and last question will be announced on Saturday, October 24, 1925.

The Questions

Notice that none of the contest questions is difficult to answer, nor does the answering of them require professional or technical knowledge. You can get the information you need to answer these questions from Squibb advertisements—follow them regularly.

1. What is "The Danger Line" in the mouth? Why is it so called?
2. How can you best guard your teeth against Acid Decay and your gums against Pyorrhea and thus maintain your general health?
3. What is the important constituent of Squibb's Dental Cream? Why is it so important?
4. Why should a dental cream be free from grit or similar abrasives?
*5. Of what value are antiseptics, germ-destroying chemicals or astringents in a dental cream?
*6. Why should a dental cream be free from substances that would be harmful when continually used in the mouth?
7. Why is a correct dentifrice of the utmost importance in the care of children's mouths?
8. Why should you have in the family medicine cabinet only such products as are approved by your physician?
9. State one or more points of superiority in each of the following products: Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, Squibb's Castor Oil, Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil, Squibb's Epsom Salt, Squibb's Bicarbonate of Soda.
10. Why is it important to consider the "Priceless Ingredient" before you buy?

*Amended.

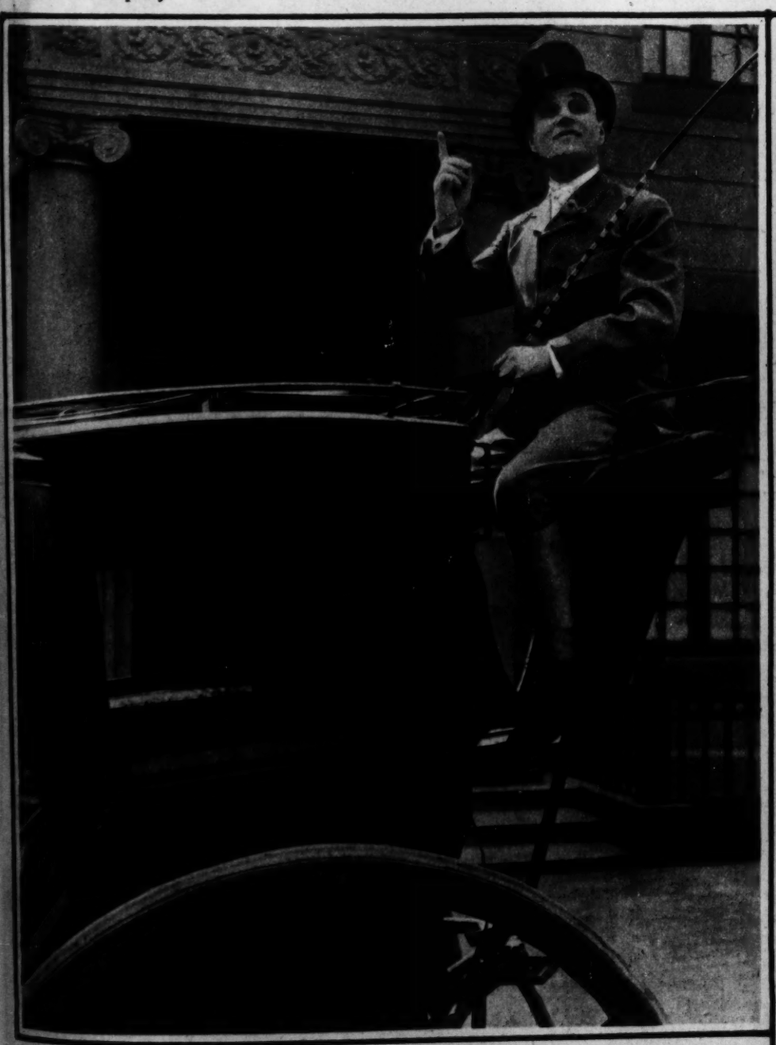
BARBARA LA MARR, after quite an absence from the screen, has again started work in Hollywood for First National. She will be seen soon in "Spanish Sunlight," in which she will co-star with Lewis Stone.

PAULINE STARKE is versatile if nothing else—and she's plenty else. You'll see her as the simple mountain girl in "Sun-up" and again in "Paris" as a ritzy heroine for whom Erte, the designer, was called upon to create costumes and settings. Miss Starke recently signed up with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stock company.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE looks a lot of ways in "Her Sister From Paris," and this is one of them. Fetching, ya? The so dark and handsome and ardent Ronald Colman will be her leading man in this film, which was written by Hans Kraly, who also wrote "Her Night of Romance"—and I reckon we all saw her in that.

"BABY PEGGY" MONTGOMERY is being somebody quite grand in this picture, and we don't know just who. Is it Baby Stuart? Or Mary, Queen of Scots, or Juliet? Or just its muvver's little girl playing lady?



SYDNEY CHAPLIN is seen here as a "spotter." (He's spotting a fare.) This "still" is from "The Man on the Box," which the popular comedian has just finished for Warner Brothers.

TOM MOORE and ZASU PITTS are the merry sunshines of this picture. The name of the little soon-to-be cloudburst we dinna ken. The scene is from "Pretty Ladies."

The refreshing coolness of mountain air is in this fine old ginger ale

AN ALLURING coolness! A keen and invigorating coolness! A coolness that refreshes!

Hot days may come—days when the summer sun burns down on the crowded city and summer heat is hard to bear—but relief is close at hand if you will but seek it—a sparkling, bubbling glass of "Canada Dry."

Here is no weak and wishy-washy drink made solely to tempt your taste, but a summer-time beverage that is genuinely good for you.

The reason is easy to understand: "Canada Dry" is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, and does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form. It is, in fact, so pure and wholesome that it has been served for years in the leading hospitals in Canada, and is now actually prescribed by physicians in this country. There could be no better proof of its goodness than that.

Tasting it—drinking it—knowing it—you will realize just how much this purity and quality can mean to you.

Its flavor will delight you, of course, for not in all the world is there a ginger ale with a flavor so supremely fine as this. Yet more important even than its flavor is the quick, brisk refreshment that is in it.

None of the artificial bite that you find in some other beverages! None of the too-sweet, syrupy flavor! None of the back-kick! None of the loginess, as some people call it! No—none of that!

Instead—a beverage that refreshes as it cools—that tones up your stomach—that helps you to keep keen and fresh and smiling to the end of the hottest day.

That is the reason it is so different from the ordinary ginger ale that it might almost be called by another name! That is the reason it has been famous for so many years in Canada! That is the reason it has been the sensation of New York and the whole United States ever since it was first introduced into this country!

Try it soon! A cool, delicious treat awaits you at your favorite club, hotel or restaurant—at home—at soda fountains everywhere.

Golf . . . tennis . . . a trip to the seashore . . . a long-planned journey by motor to the cool green of some familiar woods . . . Chicago will play on Labor Day.

Whatever you do on this holiday—wherever you go—remember "Canada Dry." This fine old ginger ale with the wonderful flavor will put a bit of coolness into what is invariably a hot and humid day—it is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, and is ever so much better for you than the stray drinks which you usually pick up along the way.

Remember, too, that because of its purity and quality, "Canada Dry" is not only a delightful drink by itself, but it mixes superbly with other beverages.

"Dad, are we so poor?" she asked.

The Small Tragedy of Mr. Tidd

by E. Phillips Oppenheim

Blue Ribbon Fiction

This Is the First Story of a Series, the "Chronicles of Melhampton"—Delightful Tales of English Life by One of England's Most Popular Authors.

THE devil, if he had taken a stroll through the streets of the old fashioned town of Melhampton, would never have selected Mr. Henry Tidd as a likely disciple. There was not the slightest suggestion of an evil life or of a criminal turn of mind in the physiognomy or general deportment of the genial and popular bank manager. His features, if somewhat insignificant, were of an inoffensive type. His eyes, partially concealed behind gold rimmed spectacles, were weak but kindly, his mouth sensitive and gentle, his manner urbane, only slightly touched with that slur of officialdom which his position had developed.

In all respects he walked as custom demanded, and in the manner of his predecessors before him. He was vicar's church warden, and took a leading part in the various schemes for the restoration of a fine old parish church. He was secretary of the Melhampton Lawn Tennis club and on the committee of the cricket club. He had personally convened a meeting amongst the smaller gentry and his kindred professional men to consider the advisability of starting a golf club, and had himself initiated negotiations with a neighboring land owner for the lease of some land. On the vexed question of the inclusion of the tradespeople of the town in the list of prospective members, he had shown himself thoroughly sound, pointing out that in these days a man was to be reckoned for what he was, and insisting that he personally would at any time be glad to play a round of golf or join in any manly sport, say, with Mr. James Scroggins, the local butcher, whose dealings with the bank, as it happened, were considerably larger than those of the entire professional element of the place.

He possessed a bicycle on which he occasionally rode into the country. He had been for years one of the quartet who played auction bridge once a week, generally at the doctor's house, on which occasion he donned a dinner coat and presented the appearance of having dined. On market days and on one other day in the week he invariably visited before luncheon time the bar parlor of the Melhampton Arms, where he unbent sufficiently to shake hands with Mrs. Dowdswell, the widowed landlady, whose balance fully justified such a proceeding, and to drink one glass of sherry.

In no respect did he fail to uphold the dignity and honor of his position as manager of the local branch of the great banking firm of Netley. His life was apparently an open book to the street lounger, the gossip, and the tradesman of Melhampton. Yet Mr. Henry Tidd in due course became a criminal.

IT had all come about in a commonplace way. Amongst Mr. Tidd's customers, or rather the customers of the bank, was a certain Percy Shields, a veterinary surgeon with a small but fairly prosperous connection, from which he derived an income very little larger than the bank manager's own salary. About a year previous to these happenings, however, things began to go differently for Mr. Shields. He first of all drew a check—the largest he had ever drawn—in favor of a certain firm of stock brokers, a proceeding which Mr. Tidd noticed with grave concern. From that time on, however, the veterinary surgeon's position steadily improved. Three times he came cheerfully into the bank, and depleted a swollen bank balance in favor of a five hundred pound war bond, thereby moving Mr. Tidd to the deepest envy. He himself, alas! was unable to save a penny, although his family consisted only of one adored daughter, on whose education the small hoardings of his lifetime had been spent. Beyond his salary he was almost penniless, a poorer man by far even than those smaller tradespeople who addressed him so respectfully and looked up to him as the representative of the great banking house of Netley. He suffered from the usual curse of the smaller professional classes—he was forced to keep up an appearance which precluded any chance of saving.

Sometimes in the silent hours of the night the sweat had broken out on Mr. Tidd's forehead at the thought of illness. His life insurance premium was dealt with each year after months of almost pitiful scraping. The clothes in which he presented so impressive an appearance were ironed and pressed and brushed with his own hands in the secrecy of his apartment. No wonder that the voice of Percy Shields on that memorable August afternoon, nearly twelve months ago, was the voice of the tempter.

"Ever do anything on the stock exchange yourself, Mr. Tidd?" the veterinary surgeon inquired casually, as he filled in the papers entitling him to the possession of a third five hundred pound war loan.

"Never," was the prompt and official reply. "My position here would render such a proceeding inadvisable."

"Seems a pity," Shields observed, fingering the stiff parchment document lovingly. "A man with a head for figures like yours ought to do well. One needs to add a little to one's income these hard times."

Mr. Tidd kept a stiff upper lip. His smile indicated a full amount of sympathy for those whose inclinations ran that way, but refused more than a general toleration of his client's point of view. Nevertheless, possibly for the sake of showing his friendly interest, he asked a question.

"You seem to have been fortunate, I am glad to notice, Mr. Shields. If it is not an indiscreet question, were your dealings confined to any particular share?"

"Amalgamated Linoleums," was the prompt response. "Finest industrial concern going. They've doubled their capital in the last five years. I've carried 'em now for twelve months, and, except on one or two occasions, I've drawn every settlement day.

It's Thursday, Mr. Tidd, and five minutes to one. Will you do me the honor of drinking a glass of sherry with me?"

MR. TIDD acquiesced, but the wine did him little good. At luncheon that day—they called it luncheon at the bank house, but it was in reality the one meal of the day—his daughter Sylvia rallied him on his low spirits.

"Dad, I don't believe your glass of sherry with Mr. Shields agreed with you—or did you have two?" she laughed. "I believe you are bilious. Never mind, old dear, the tennis this afternoon will put you all right."

Mr. Tidd coughed.

"I have not quite made up my mind whether I shall play tennis this afternoon," he confessed, after a moment's hesitation.

Sylvia stared across at him, with her beautiful eyes wide open and her pretty lips parted. She knew how much, in his quiet way, her father enjoyed his half day's recreation.

"Not play tennis, dad?" she exclaimed. "But why on earth not?"

Mr. Tidd was almost embarrassed. Even in his limited family circle he maintained enough of his official dignity to render the explanation difficult.

"The fact of it is," he admitted, trying to speak lightly, "my flannel trousers have been washed a good many times, and on this last occasion they seem to have shrunk more than usual. I tried them on this morning and I am not quite sure that any violent exercise in them would be—er—advisable."

Sylvia was a sensible girl, and she saw through the officialdom. She heard, too, the slight quiver in her father's tone. She left her place, came over, and flung her arms around his neck. She went straight to the heart of the matter.

"Dad, are we so poor?" she asked.

Mr. Tidd, purely from habit, glanced around the room to make sure they were alone. Then he emerged from behind the disguise of his gold rimmed spectacles, his carefully acquired manners—a mixture of suave condescension and the genial dignity of an assured position—he cast aside his eternal prescience that in his person was represented the great House of Netley, and he spoke words of naked truth.

"My dear," he told her bitterly, "we are amongst the martyrs of the earth. We are genteel paupers, shivering all the time on the verge of insolvency. My salary is two hundred and sixty pounds a year, and this house, which maintains the dignity of the bank, is absurdly large for us. We have to keep a maid, employ a gardener once a week, pay for coal and gas, our food and clothes, and keep up a decent appearance in the town. It is very difficult. I am obliged to pose as almost an abstainer, because I cannot offer my friends a glass of wine in my own house. I gave up smoking years ago, although it was a great solace to me. I dare not attempt to entertain, so I have to avoid accepting hospitality as far as possible. I take the utmost care of my clothes, but I have had nothing new for many years, and it is hard to present a respectable appearance for all occasions. My dinner coat, for instance, has now failed me, and I have been compelled, on the plea of sleeplessness, to introduce Mr. Shields to make up the doctor's weekly rubber in my place. The fear of the dentist or of the doctor has, I confess, been a constant anxiety to me."

Sylvia, fresh from an expensive boarding school, was horrified.

"But my school bills, dad!"

"They are all paid, dear," he assured her, "paid with the savings of fifteen years. It was your mother's wish that the money should be spent in that way."

Sylvia dashed the tears from her eyes.

"Well, that's that!" she exclaimed cheerfully. "You shall just see now how I can economize. I shan't want any clothes for years. And, dad, what about your gray flannel trousers? Mr. Pleydell was wearing a pair just like them last week, and I'm sure, with your blue serge coat, and that nice tie, you'll look topping. Come on, I'll dress you."

MR. TIDD played tennis in his gray trousers—with suitable accomplishments—and betrayed no sign of inward perturbation. He cracked a joke with Shields, whose recent investments entitled him to such a distinction, discussed war loans with Miss Holywell, who had a small sum lying on deposit, which she could never make up her mind how to invest, and preserved his dignity to the full with Mr. Pleydell, the retired civil service official, whose balance was perilously near the border line. And he played tennis precisely and extremely well.

Nevertheless, that was the day upon which the mischief was sown. Mr. Tidd dreamed all night of Amalgamated Linoleums, and in the morning, over their frugal breakfast, Sylvia put the finishing touches to a half formed resolution.

"Dad," she confided, "I have an idea. I wonder we didn't think of it before."

"What is it, my dear?" he inquired indulgently.

"Every one is saying," she continued, "that Mr. Shields has made quite a great deal of money, buying and selling shares. It sounds so simple. He buys them when they are low; as soon as they go up he sells them, and, of course, he makes the difference. Now, you are ever so much cleverer than Mr. Shields, dad. Why don't you do something of the sort?"

Mr. Tidd sighed, but there was a peculiar gleam in his eyes.

"It is not considered altogether the correct thing, my dear," he explained, "for a bank manager to deal in stocks and shares."

"Then if the bank don't like you to do that, they ought to pay you more," she declared.

Mr. Tidd smiled a little cryptically, but when he entered the bank five minutes before his accustomed hour, he opened the Times and turned to the financial column. The date of the paper was the twelfth of August. Now, on the twenty-first of June, more than ten months afterwards, Mr. Tidd was a criminal. The facts were few but painful. Locked in his drawer were stockbrokers' receipts, showing that Mr. Tidd had paid up adverse balances amounting to nine hundred and forty-five pounds fifteen shillings, and the funds of the bank committed to his keeping were short exactly that amount. On the thirtieth, all balances would be struck. After that date, concealment would bo impossible, for on the second day of July Mr. Nevinson, the traveling inspector, would be around, and——. But Mr. Tidd's imagination failed to carry him farther than that. Farther, that is to say, than the inauguration of disaster. That he saw, as he sat looking over the wire blind into the street, with hideous preciseness.

the sauntering girl. Sylvia, a tantalizingly beautiful vision in white skirt and pink jumper, leaped lightly onto the pavement, and glanced disapprovingly at the young man.

The latter jammed down his brake with such force as to skid right around in the street, from which position, at right angles to the pavement, he raised his cap and evidently attempted some form of apology. Sylvia, behaving entirely in the spirit of her upbringing, bowed a little stiffly and, without glancing behind, vanished through a wooden gate let into the gray stone wall, on which was painted in white letters,

MELHAMPTON LAWN TENNIS CLUB.

This, if the young man had been an ordinary sort of young man, should have ended the matter. As it happened, however, Mr. Jeremiah H. Preedy, having been brought up with the idea that his slightest whim was only conceived to be gratified, and feeling a distinct inclination to see the young lady again, showed not the slightest signs of behaving like an ordinary mortal. After a few moments' contemplation of the closed gate, he backed his car to the side of the pavement, descended and entered the nearest shop, which happened to be a tobacconist's. From this he emerged in about five minutes' time, smoking a cigaret, but still without any immediate indications of continuing his journey. He strolled along the pavement and examined the mystic letters on the door through which Sylvia had vanished. Then, gazing around once more, as though in search of further inspiration, he was suddenly made aware, by means of the lettering upon the window and also the imposing brass plate, of the existence of a branch of Netley's bank. He hastily dived into the breast pocket of his coat, consulted a thin book, and crossed the street. A moment later he pushed open the swing door and approached the bank counter, having, as Mr. Tidd was pleased to see, thrown away his cigaret. Mr. Tidd arose from the nightmare of his reflections, and presented himself on the other side of the counter. There was nothing whatever in his gentle inquiring demeanor to suggest the anguish racked criminal.

"I guess this is a branch of Netley's bank?" the newcomer remarked pleasantly.

"It is," Mr. Tidd acquiesced.

"I'd like some money, if we can fix it up," the young man continued, drawing the thin morocco book from his pocket. "I've a letter of credit here which seems payable at any of your branches. Jeremiah H. Preedy, my name is."

Mr. Tidd examined the document in his best official manner. He succeeded in concealing his surprise when he saw that in clear and unmistakable phraseology it eagerly invoked all correspondents of the great house of Netley to provide Mr. Jeremiah H. Preedy of Fifth avenue, New York, with such financial accommodation as he might require up to the sum of five thousand pounds.

"Have you any proof," Mr. Tidd inquired guardedly, "that you are the person referred to in this document?"

"I should say so," the young man replied. "There's my driver's license outside in the pocket of the car, issued yesterday morning at Plymouth, and here's a handful of mail addressed to me as you can see," he added, producing some letters.

Mr. Tidd examined the superscription of the envelopes, turned back to the letter of credit, and nodded slowly.

"This appears to be in order," he pronounced. "How much money would you like?"

MR. JEREMIAH H. PREEDY leaned against the counter in friendly fashion. He was over six feet tall and of most engaging appearance.

"Well, I don't know," he confessed, a little doubtfully. "I'm just kind of wandering round in the car. Only landed at Plymouth yesterday morning. We had a bully trip from New York."

"Indeed?" Mr. Tidd remarked, somewhat vaguely.

"I'm doing what I always planned to do," the young man confided, making himself a little more comfortable, "having a look at some of these quieter corners of England. This is an old fashioned place, isn't it?"

"It is a town of some antiquity," Mr. Tidd informed him. "There are Roman remains in the neighborhood which are referred to in all guide books of Devon."

"Is that so!" the young man exclaimed with marked interest. "How far out might they be?"

"Scarcely more than a mile," was the encouraging reply. "There is also an excellent trout stream."

"Any sort of way of getting a little exercise?" Mr. Jeremiah H. Preedy inquired, casting a longing glance across the way.

Mr. Tidd referred once more to the name upon the letter of credit, which was a great one in American finance.

"There is a tennis club," he said, "which exists chiefly for the use of the residents. We are none of us brilliant performers. If, however, you should decide to stay in the neighborhood for a day or two, it would give me much pleasure, as secretary, to offer you its hospitality."

"That's bully," the young man declared heartily. "I suppose there's an inn of some sort?"

"The Melhampton Arms is just across the way, a little lower down on the left," Mr. Tidd replied. "Travelers visiting the neighborhood speak very well of it."

"I'll go right down and get a room," the visitor announced. "What about the tennis, sir?"

Mr. Tidd glanced at the clock.

"It is one of the afternoons upon which I usually play a few sets myself after closing hours," he said. "If you care to call here for me in three-quarters of an hour, I will take you there myself."

"Great!" the young man assented, preparing to depart.

"Concerning this little financial matter," Mr. Tidd reminded him, tapping the letter of credit.

"Sure! I'd like to have some money," was the prompt avowal. "What about a hundred pounds?"

Mr. Tidd counted out a hundred pounds in fives and tens, and pushed them across the counter. Mr. Jeremiah H. Preedy scrawled his name in the place appointed, thrust the money into his pocketbook, which already, as the bank manager could not fail to notice, contained a considerable number of notes, and took his breezy departure. Mr. Tidd watched him start up his car, turn around, and drive under the covered archway of the Melhampton Arms. Then he looked at the little morocco bound book which his visitor had left upon the counter. He opened it. The young man had scrawled his name opposite the first blank space—and that was all. He had not even troubled to fill in the amount. Mr. Tidd locked the book away in his private drawer, closed the front door of the bank, and hurried upstairs to change into his tennis clothes. He was surprised to find that, although the afternoon was cool, his forehead was damp with perspiration.

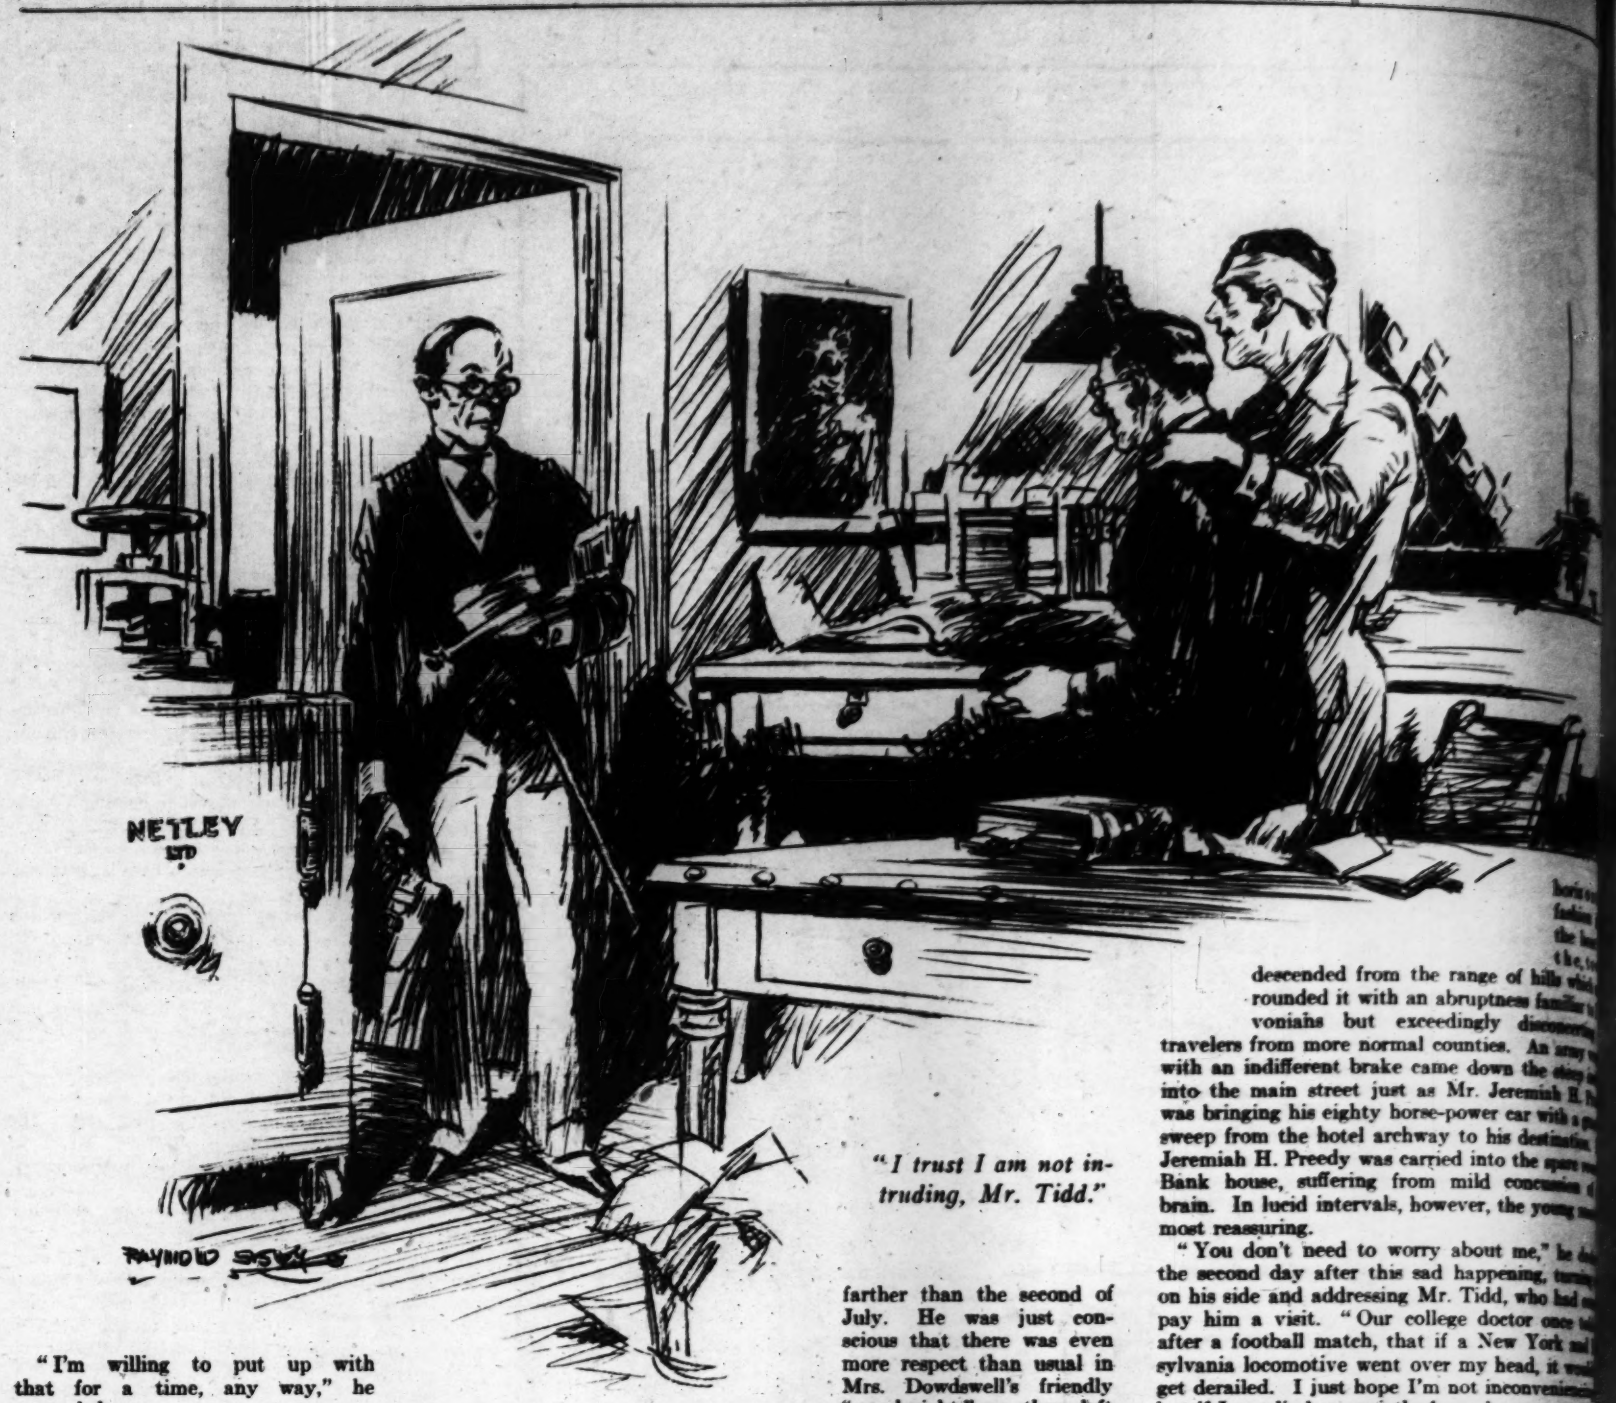
MR. JEREMIAH H. PREEDY of New York scored a great social success in the little Devonshire town that afternoon. From the vicar's mother, who came in a bath chair, to the doctor's youngest child, who was allowed to field the balls, every one voted him delightful. His tennis, although he carefully adapted his game, so far as he could, to the capacity of the other players, was a revelation to them all, and in the end he was forced to admit that he was a prospective contestant at Wimbledon and Prince's. He played cheerfully, however, with the most indifferent performers, and he undertook in the most unselfish manner to improve Sylvia's game by fifty per cent if she would practice for an hour or two every morning with him.

"Every morning?" she repeated, looking at him with wide open eyes. "How long are you going to stay here, then?"

"That depends," he answered, dropping his voice. "I'm in no particular hurry to get anywhere. I meant to take a month's vacation, and it seems to me this is about as attractive a place as I am likely to find."

She laughed incredulously.

"Why, it's one of the dullest little towns in Devonshire," she declared.



"I trust I am not intruding, Mr. Tidd."

"I'm willing to put up with that for a time, any way," he assured her.

"But what made you stay here at all?" she persisted.

"I was just motoring through," he explained innocently, "and the place seemed attractive."

She laughed up at him.

"But how did you get to know dad?"

"I saw a bank," he replied, "and I went in to get some money. By-the-bye," he went on, turning to Mr. Tidd, who had just strolled up to them, "I'd like terribly to spend some of that money, if I could. I wonder whether you and your daughter, sir, would care to come down and dine with me at the hotel tonight? It would be doing me a real kindness if you would. I've personal letters to the head of your firm—Lord Netley," he added craftily. "I guess my dad looked after the old boy pretty well when he was over last."

Mr. Tidd knew then without a doubt that this young man actually belonged to the world famed firm of Preedy, and he realized, with a little aching of the heart, the immense satisfaction with which, in his daily report to headquarters, he could have casually referred to his entertainment by so distinguished a correspondent of the firm. These things, however, meant but little now. He accepted the invitation graciously, nevertheless, and as they bade one another "au revoir" he forced himself to discard a terribly haunting thought.

"By-the-bye, Mr. Preedy," he said, "you left your letter of credit on the bank counter. I will bring it down when we come."

"Don't do that," the young man begged. "Just lock it up for me till I go, will you? I'm such a careless chap, I'll only lose it. I shall have the pleasure of seeing you later, Miss Tidd."

THE resources of the Melhampton Arms had never been more lavishly drawn upon, but a chill sat in the bank manager's heart which no champagne had power to remove. He drank probably more wine than he had ever drunk before in his life, but without at any time becoming subject to its cheering influence. As a matter of fact, however, although his host never failed in his respectful attentions, Mr. Tidd was very much the third party at the feast. The freemasonry of youth asserted itself with effortless triumph. Strangers to one another's country, habits, and without common acquaintances, the two young people, before the evening was over, had established an intimacy which might have been of years' standing. Mr. Tidd was vaguely puzzled, but then he was a person removed from the actual throb of life. It was the evening of the twenty-first of June, and life for him extended no farther than the second of July. He was just conscious that there was even more respect than usual in Mrs. Dowdswell's friendly "good-night" as they left the inn, and he was conscious, too, of Sylvia's warm happiness as she took her leave of him for the night. Afterward, he had to lie for hours on his plain wooden bedstead, shrinking from the ghosts that crowded to his side. They were all ugly. Ugliest of all was Mr. Nevinson, opening and shutting a ledger before his victim's face.

The young man had, without doubt, good manners. After the tennis practice the next morning, he presented himself most apologetically before the bank counter and begged for permission to take Miss Sylvia for a short motor ride. Mr. Tidd consented on consideration that she was back by one o'clock. The young man promised, and departed in search of his car.

At the moment of the actual catastrophe, Mr. Tidd was engaged with a small client who was endeavoring to arrange an overdraft of ten pounds. Sylvia's shrieks, however, and the sound of a commotion in the street brought him hastily out to the front steps of the bank. What had happened was soon made clear. Melhampton was laid out, as many other Devonshire towns, on the up and down principle; that is to say that the two or three main roads, instead of converging in decent descended from the range of hills which rounded it with an abruptness familiar to voniahs but exceedingly disconcerting travelers from more normal counties. An army with an indifferent brake came down the steep into the main street just as Mr. Jeremiah H. P. was bringing his eighty horse-power car with a g sweep from the hotel archway to his destination. Jeremiah H. Preedy was carried into the spare r Bank house, suffering from mild concussion brain. In lucid intervals, however, the young m most reassuring.

"You don't need to worry about me," he d the second day after this sad happening, turn on his side and addressing Mr. Tidd, who had pay him a visit. "Our college doctor once t after a football match, that if a New York and sylvania locomotive went over my head, it w get derailed. I just hope I'm not inconvenien but if I can lie here quietly for a day or two, a Sylvia can read to me now and then, when she minute or two to spare, I'll be all right in n Gee, but it was a smash, though! Is there m left of my old bus?"

"Your automobile is in the hands of the be pairer," Mr. Tidd replied. "He assures me th damage is but trifling. We shall consider it a g to have you remain with us until you are fu covered."

MR. TIDD took his departure, and the invalid t to Sylvia.

"Say, Miss Sylvia," he confided, "your dad's talker! Why, the manager of our central bran New York hasn't got the style and manner he Kind of wasted down in this little town, isn't he?"

Sylvia flushed with pleasure.

"Dad hasn't had any luck," she sighed. "All same, I think in a way he's quite happy."

"You wouldn't care about settling down here a rest of your life yourself, would you?" the young asked anxiously. "What I mean to say is, you're kind of wedded to the place?"

"The doctor says you are not to talk," was the mure reply.

The accident to Mr. Jeremiah H. Preedy happ on June the twenty-second. On June the twenty- he sat up in his room. On July the first he to stroll, leaning on Sylvia's arm, and on July the at a quarter past nine, at Mr. Tidd's earnest so tion, he descended into the bank parlor for an i view. "Mr. Tidd," the young man began, as he entered parlor, "you say you want to have a few words w me, but I guess I've got something to say to you th had better come first."

The flat of Mr. Tidd's hand struck the table in fr of him gently but firmly. Then for the first time young man noticed that his strange little host h changed during the last ten days, more even than the presumed invalid. Mr. Tidd was looking worn shrunken. The genial pomposity of his manner h vanished. He was like a man who had spoken w death.

"What I have to say to you, Mr. Preedy, must said without delay. With your larger transatlantic tions, you will find it a little difficult to unders yet please listen carefully and do not interrupt."

Mr. Tidd told his drab story, and he told it as his drab story, and he told it as only ntinued on page eight.)

She wearied of going about and wearied of the meaningless jargon of her friends.

HOW THE STORY STARTED:

WHEN Linda Haverhill was 16 her father died, leaving nothing but a handful of worthless stock certificates. Senator Converse, a friend of her father, struck by her beauty, agreed to dispose of the stock, telling her never to worry about money. For several years she lived with a rich cousin, and then, after a whirlwind courtship, married Courtney Roth. Linda found he was a penniless adventurer. He initiated her into the game of living by one's wits. They traveled around the world and Roth died in Switzerland after a quarrel during which he struck her.

Returning to America, Linda met young Brian Anstey while both were snowbound on a train in Nebraska. Under pretense that she had been robbed, she borrowed a small sum from him. Later she met Anstey again in a New York restaurant while she was dining with Senator Converse. She permitted Anstey to see her next day, and repaid him with money given her by Converse under the old pretense that it came from her worthless stocks.

And Then:

INSTALLMENT III.

Tangled Dreams.

LINDA could not tear her eyes from the fascinating hat. It was the loveliest hat on the avenue, and she knew how it would look on her. She heard what Brian said vaguely.

"I must have it," she cried gaily, and went into the shop. He followed at once, but she was already in one of the little gray booths before a mirror, and a slim, undulating creature was bringing the hat, smaller even at close view than it had been behind plate glass.

It was on Linda's dark head. She wore a short fur coat, and her face tipped the edge of the high flat mole collar like a dark rose. Her color had come back, and the look of weariness that had been on her face when Brian met her was gone. The hat made her bloom.

"I love it," she said, looking up at Brian, and then to the saleswoman, "I think I will wear it today and you may send the other."

There was an embarrassing moment—a pause. The delay was imperceptible, but it was there. The saleswoman sent a secret, inquisitive glance toward the tall, good looking young man who had come in with Mrs. Roth, and Brian, conscious of this, wondered why she stood there holding Linda's discarded hat rather contemptuously away from her.

Linda arose. She looked the woman straight in the eyes, and her own were proud and guileless. "You may send the other hat to my address—the St. Sevier," she said gently, and began to walk away.

The saleswoman followed her, frightened but determined. "But, Mrs. Roth—perhaps you had better see madam."

"There is nothing else," said Linda tranquilly, and left the shop.

She was exquisite under her new crown of pale jade, but Brian was looking at her face, pale again, with lips a little breathless. Something had been wrong in the shop, but he could not grasp the exact meaning of the little scene. It was ridiculous, but it was almost as if the woman had not wanted to sell the hat to Linda.

Linda was glad to get away from the shop. She had been afraid for a moment, but luckily the saleswoman had been a stupid person. Her account was large, but she would send them a check for something as soon as her own money came from Stevens. By this time she was almost aggrieved at the broker, as if he had been keeping her income from her purposely.

"You look so solemn," she cried, meeting Brian's troubled eyes, "I don't believe you like my new hat after all. Why didn't you tell me it was unbecoming?"

This was so artificial that they both laughed, and the unpleasant moment was forgotten.

"I wonder why I feel so irresponsible when I am with you?" Linda asked. Though she was so tall and slight, their eyes were not nearly on a level and she had to look up at him. This gave her a peculiarly appealing expression.

"If that is so, I will keep you away from the shops that sell diamonds," he answered. He was happy in spite of his gravity. A queer rushing happiness that made everything seem chaotic. The people on the avenue, the shops, the countless automobiles were nothing but shadows to him. His vision was filled with Linda, a strange woman he seemed to have known always and far better than any one else in the world. Yet he realized he knew nothing about her.

"Who was the charming girl you danced with last night?" she questioned. There was a tiny note of jealousy in her voice. They had been dancing together when she left the restaurant with the senator.

Brian hesitated. "An old friend of mine, Daisy Fentress."

LINDA had heard of the Fentresses. So had everybody else. They were rich enough to have their names in the paper every day and that is something—to be rich without being notorious is an achievement, and the Fentresses were impeccable. She knew that Simon Fentress, who had most of the money, was a secret power in Washington; Converse had often spoken of him with envy, for his own wealth was a little thing in comparison. The memory of the young girl's face, blonde, inexperienced, with everything to give, sent a little shiver of pain to her heart.

"The heiress?" she said dully. "Yes, I know."

"She doesn't like to be called an heiress," explained Brian. "and she's a wonderful old pal. I'd like you to meet her some time."

Linda made a wry face unseen by him. "Girls bore me," she said indifferently.

"Daisy wouldn't," he blundered. "She's an innocent child—you'd be amused by her old fashioned notions. She's very much against——"

Linda recovered herself. He had said something about a decision.

"You wanted my opinion about something," she said softly. "I'm afraid it will be terribly worldly, but I am like that, you know." Her eyes challenged him to discover anything old fashioned about her.

His face lighted. "Did you remember that I said that? Are you sure I won't bore you talking about myself?"

"I shan't be bored."

"Well, then, if you care enough to bother." His clear, eager eyes sought and found hers, holding them in spite of a hundred stranger eyes that might have been watching.

She did care enough. She cared enough to listen to anything he had to say. Her eyes told more than she dreamed.

"I've been offered a post," said Brian, telling his story, "diplomatic—and I'm on the fence whether to take it or let it go past along with other things. It's a thing I've wanted for years, and now that it's here a dozen reasons have sprung up why not——"

"Not a nice appointment?" she sympathized. It was just a trivial opinion, after all, that he wanted.

"Splendid—for me. It's not that. But—I told you I wasn't rich, didn't I? I'd have nothing but my pay, and I've begun to wonder if I could make a go of it."

She gave a silvery laugh, so spontaneous that he looked his surprise.

"I beg your pardon," he said stiffly. "I shouldn't have begun this. How could you possibly understand?" His glance traveling over her rich furs, the expensive little hat, her gown reflecting its extravagant maker in every line, removed her from the stigma of economy. How could she understand what it meant to be poor? And Linda laughed again, understanding far more than he would ever know.

"Go on. Tell me about it," she encouraged, to hide the tremor beneath her gayety.

Their isolation grew as he talked. What had these hurrying people, intent upon their own silly affairs, to do with them? It was growing dusk, a dusk that vanished as it came, before the flood of brilliancy that flowed like a river upon the street. Shops that had been but shops an hour ago were splendid now, and their wares were more splendid still. Faces silhouetted by the flattering light became beautiful and young and spiritual. Electricity is kind to lipsticks and rabbit skin. The street became an enchanted street with a man and woman walking in enchantment, feeling it all while they saw nothing.

"I ALWAYS liked the service," said Brian. "When I was a boy I had crazy ideas about glory and princesses and hand kissing—that sort of thing. All bunk, of course. But I still wanted it when I got old enough to have some sense. Wanted it and got it. But somehow I didn't get it the way I wanted it. Hor-ribly hard to make any one understand." His eyes searching for hers again.

"What does it matter so you got what you wanted?" her clear voice, a little hard, came back to him.

He returned an indulgent smile. "Child!" it seemed to say.

"The way I wanted was not the way it came to me. I have a family"—he slighted this as some men always slight the fact that they belong to a clan—"not rich folk, awfully hard up, to be frank; but it's the sort of family that can do miracles if they want—make the lion lie down or sit up and beg. That sounds awfully egotistical, but vulgarians might say that they know where the body is buried and maybe," he grinned reminiscently, "the vulgarians would be right. My dad and Simon Fentress fished in the mill pond together when they were kids, so you can imagine what Fentress did when dad slipped it that I wanted an appointment." He made a wry face, and turned to her for sympathy.

"They managed it for you," she hazarded.

He nodded. "They did with a vengance. And it simply took the blush off the rose. You see, I wanted to do the thing myself. I had already gone to Senator Converse. He promised to put it through."

Linda was puzzled. "But what is the difference? It was only pulling wires, no matter how it was done."

They were talking at cross purposes. Brian tried to make himself plain.

"Don't you see? Fentress tossed it to me like a plaything! Influence! It has a bad taste and, of course, I'm an ass. Everybody does it—everybody uses everybody else if they can, and are jolly well glad to, but it wasn't my boyhood dream by a long shot." He laughed shamefacedly and added a bromide that took some of the seriousness out of the discussion. "I don't know why I am telling you all this."

"Perhaps because you never before met a woman who understood," she returned instantly.

When their laugh was over, they walked on in silence for a half block, and then Linda surprisingly reopened the subject.

"I wonder why Senator Converse's influence would be different from Mr. Fentress'," she said thoughtfully. She really wanted to know; it was amazing to find that Brian, young and clear minded and a little romantic, regarded the senator with anything but aversion.

"It is different," he said, and they went on slowly, "I don't believe I can make you understand, but I will try. Put into words it sounds fantastic or what I loathe—sentimental. There, it's out!" He became shamefaced again as men are when they are forced to reveal their inmost thought that have to do with vainglory. "I wanted to earn my spurs myself. I wanted to make them notice me because of my own brains, not the brains or money of somebody else, but I found that didn't weigh a penny's worth beside the fact that Simon Fentress favored me and my grandfather controlled a large sized vote in his community. If somebody else had been my father's son it would have been the same, don't you see? Not myself—but what I stood for. I had to take my medicine or leave it."

"And if Senator Converse had backed you," said Linda in a low voice.

"He wouldn't, if he hadn't believed in me. I was on my own with him, and that made all the difference. His mind was not controlled by anything but his own judgment."

"Ah. He was not influenced by your connections then?"

"I don't believe he knew I had any," said Brian simply.

"You admire him?" she asked, thinking of what Converse had said last night. She could hardly keep the scorn from her voice.

"Heaps," said Brian, and she had one of those illuminative glimpses of what men may be to one another and what they may be to a woman at the same time.

THE great facade of a hotel was suddenly before them. A liveried flunky stood before the revolving door. His blank gaze was fastened upon the distance, but it was inescapable that he knew Linda and expected her to enter.

"I live here," she reminded her companion, pausing.

"Won't you walk a little farther? I haven't said half I wanted to. What a fearful bore I've been." She let him draw her on.

"I want you to understand of all people. I know that what I've said sounds like a prig or—a—boor, which is nearly as bad, but if it's going to be like that, I wonder if I really want it. I haven't any money and I'll need a lot. They'll expect me to live up to Simon Fentress." He laughed with a tinge of bitterness.

She spoke impatiently, "O, but if you loved it—if it was your dream. So few of us get our dreams even in a tangled way!"

He looked at her hopefully. It seemed that she had miraculously voiced his half framed thoughts.

"A chap could do a lot of good over there if he was really in earnest," he said wistfully. "It's all such a muddle, and maybe it doesn't matter much how I happen to go——"

"That is true," said Linda eagerly, as if justification were pleasant to her, also. "The result is the thing, after all. If you get results." She was unconsciously quoting Courtney Roth whom everyone had forgotten. Suddenly she remembered him. It was beginning to mist in a fine, soft way. She was tired from the long walk, and they turned back obedient to a pressure from her hand on his arm. He began to reproach himself at once.

"You're tired. You're awfully white. I ought to be shot!" As they neared the hotel again he said diffidently, "I meant to ask you hours ago, but I got talking about myself like a duffer. Will you dine with me? Say that you will!"

But Linda smiled "no." She was always dining. He could not know, of course, that her free evenings were days ahead. They selected one toward the end of the week. Brian was in New York for an elastic period.

"While the Fentresses are here?" Linda suggested with sudden enlightenment. And when he admitted that as a matter of course, she asked. "Why is Miss Fentress against the appointment?"

She did not know how cold her voice sounded.

"Daisy? O, I think she's rather keen on my keeping on with my profession. I'm a lawyer—a sort of one, you know. Daisy hates foreign countries and all their parade. She thinks they aren't real. She's pure American."

Linda threw back her head, and laughed aloud. The gesture released the furs at her neck and a coil of the pearls she wore slipped through and lay against the dark soft collar. Her laughter was startling, a little wild.

"Good-by," she told him, and left him rather abruptly in the shadow of the dampened doorman.

Her step lagged a little, but she stiffened as she entered the hotel. The elevator was directly before her and she could have gained it with a few steps. She turned, however, and walked toward the grilled enclosure where a gentleman, a lesser gentleman with other dimmer figures, was installed in that curious, haughty silence that is peculiar to high priced hotels.

Linda's walk was one of the rarest qualities she possessed. She was so tall and slender that she seemed always about to bend and break under the demand of effort. Her wraps were always slipping from her shoulders but never did. Her eyes, half veiled, appeared to see nothing, but she had seen distinctly the looks that followed and greeted her. The bellboys on their bench were watching her furtively; the second gentleman at the desk leaned on his pointed elbow to listen to her, and watch. All of them saw the new expensive hat and the pearls slipping from her rich fur.

"My letters, please." Linda's voice was sweet and very low. She spoke as little as possible to such persons as these. The letters were in her hand, and she was turning away before she said "Thank you" in a negligent tone as though that grilled in group had no meaning for her. They looked after her helplessly. She seemed rich and prosperous. The clerk looked doubtfully at a letter that had been separated from the rest; finally he tucked it away in a private pigeonhole. It would not do to make a mistake in this case.

But Linda knew nothing of this. She passed on to the elevator, leisurely examining the letters in her hand.

Swords East!

by Achmed Abdullah

Blue Ribbon Fiction

THE story of a young American girl who goes to Constantinople seeking gaiety and adventure, and finds both in abundance. A story that holds all the glamour of the Far East. Here are spies and diplomats and soldiers of fortune and richly gowned women, hobnobbing with American millionaires and staid merchants from England. Here, on the eve of the Young Turk revolution, begins the first Blue Ribbon serial story that Achmed Abdullah has done for The Tribune, a colorful, swiftly moving tale that will hold you fascinated to the last line.

Watch for the opening chapter in the roto magazine section Sunday, September 20th!

LINDA no longer occupied Cousin Amy's house when the family were away. The fiasco of her ... was a half told secret, discreetly ignored by her ... tives whose number seemed to have dwindled ... ceptibly. It is one thing to chaperon and ... a young girl, very beautiful and pathetically ... but quite another to be responsible for a widow, ... ever young and beautiful, whose affairs, to say the ... are in a muddle and deeply mysterious.

Cousin Amy Ralston told some of the others ... she always felt a cold chill down her back when ... heard Linda's voice in the hall, so it happened that ... degrees her own voice became so cold, so brief, ... Linda, not wishing to give pain, refrained almost ... from communication with her sensitive relations.

She had plenty of friends. Any woman, ... pretty, dressing more than well and seen at ... everywhere, is bound to have friends and ... Only to Linda the people who took her about and ... tertained her seemed oddly less like friends than ... versaries. It was a curious feeling that had ... upon her lately. She was always on guard, ... standing off a little while she smiled and talked ... It was as if a hundred pairs of eyes were seeking ... a crack in her armor which she was determined ... should not find.

For a long time she had had a splendid time. ... was not in the strict sense of the word a woman ... society. Rather, she took what she wanted of ... and let the rest, the bores, the dull parties, the ... mittees, alone. The people she was seen with ... usually charming though some were a little ... about themselves. There were always plenty of ... dazed by the ease, the grace of Linda and her ... who were quite ready to pay for the party.

It had puzzled them all that she had not ... again. There must have been plenty of men to ... her—rich, desirable men who could give her the ... ting she deserved. But Linda was faintly amused ... this wonder. Talk of marriage always brought ... antly before her the vision of the aftermath of ... twenty-four hour honeymoon, for it had lasted ... longer than that, she knew.

But after she met Brian Anstey she began to ... of marriage again.

Not consciously, though. Marriage as a ... ceremony did not enter her mind. She would ... checked the idea in its birth, if her conscious self ... not been drugged by the artful subconscious ... knows so well how to take its victims unaware. ... could have argued herself out of love with a ... young man if love had not stolen upon her and ... her eyes with beauty and silenced her lips and ... her with dreams. She never thought of marriage ... she began to chafe at the life she led.

The handsome rooms she occupied, strewn ... costly trifles, prisoned her restlessness. She went ... going about and wearied of her gowns and the ... ingless jargon of her friends. She began to think ... quiet, cool, simple spots; to visualize what she ... never known. She found herself remembering ... step of that pilgrimage made with Brian Anstey ... that snowy dusk, and the little houses with their ... and red fires. She would arouse herself from ... memories, try to elude them, try to hate them, ... it was no use. Time and time again they returned ... each time with the humble plea of peace.

SHE dressed herself carefully for that first ... with Brian. It would be simple, because he ... not spend much money entertaining her. She ... stantly remembered that he was poor.

She chose the plainest frock in her wardrobe, and ... the misfortune to look more lovely than ever ... its plainness. Her beauty shone starlike; she had ... quite lost that faint exaggeration of every point ... women always found a flaw. At the last moment ... flung the double strand of pearls—Courtney Roth's ... sardonic present—around her neck. She was ... formed at once to splendor, but when she saw ... she tore them roughly off and tossed them into the ... case. She wanted nothing like that to have a place ... in their hour.

She knew from the first that Brian adored her, ... so sweet was the knowledge of this unaccustomed ... that she yielded deliberately, closing her eyes to ... sequences. She thought she could draw back in time.

One night there was a party with the Fentresses ... and she watched the pretty blonde girl grow pale ... flush under a word or look from Brian, who was ... entirely unconscious of it all.

"She loves him," thought Linda. "Poor little thing. ... She has everything, she has done everything to please ... and I who have done nothing——"

She felt suddenly humbled and ashamed. She ought ... to go away and leave these two alone. They would ... come together as naturally as two birds alone in the ... sky.

"Pretty, aren't they?" said Simon Fentress at her ... ear. He was watching Brian and Daisy with a ... sardonic smile that he afterward turned upon Linda.

"Youth is always charming," she said.

How those beady black eyes looked into her.

"Now you are young, too, only a couple of years ... older than Daisy, and yet you are not youthful. You've ... been taught things my girl will never know."

"Because she has money," Linda finished as frankly as he.

"Not entirely. It isn't in the child to know. She likes muslin frocks." His eyes traveled over her long, graceful figure. "How shortsighted nature is! If you had been born my daughter——" his kindling face bold with the light of adventure said what a splendid life they would have had! What worlds would have been conquered!

"You think I hate muslin gowns?" said Linda with her faint smile.

"Unless they are made in Paris."

"You think I could not endure poverty?" she persisted.

He looked at her a long time. "It would be a great waste, my dear," he said gently, as if he was sorry for her.

SENATOR CONVERSE did not remain in ignorance of all this. He fell at first into the natural error of imagining that Linda was attracted by the glamor of the Fentress millions, but this impression did not survive watching her dance with Brian Anstey one night.

"So, it is the boy," he said, showing his yellowed teeth. "You've taken to playing about with little lads. A bad sign in a woman! You're not old enough for that."

"He admires you!" Linda cried scornfully.

"He does, eh? Well, then, he'd better let you alone." There was something half threatening, half playful in his voice that left a scratch upon her soul. Now and then he had let her feel the tightening of a bond that did not actually exist, and she always resisted like a desperate fly caught in a web.

"You cannot choose my friends!" she cried furiously.

"But I shall have a word to say about your lovers," he smiled, delighted by her impotent anger.

But she decided that Brian Anstey must be sent out of the way. One day he had a talk with Simon, and found the financier strangely reluctant to fall in with his plan.

"The boy has been keen about a career," said Fentress, "but I don't know—I don't know. Politics has ruined many a man and he'll be a fine institution some day if something—money, or vanity, or women don't put an oar in and spoil what is well begun."

"You've changed your tune considerably," Converse said rudely. He could afford to be rude to almost any one.

"Well, perhaps I have. But second thoughts are sometimes a lot better than the first. My daughter thinks——"

His daughter! Converse nearly laughed aloud. What a fellow this Anstey was! One woman holding him back and another sending him on. He was bitterly envious of the other's youth and at the same time contemptuous. Why should women care for a figurine pushed about here and there at the will of others?

"There are dangerous women at home as well," he said significantly.

He told Linda of this conversation. "Why, the fellow's a damned sawdust doll," he cried. "He hasn't enough backbone to choose for himself."

But she, knowing what she knew, smiled.

What a game of blindman's buff life can be, she thought. Cross purposes! Brian Anstey was so far from weak that he was ready to give up his ambitions because they came to him from Simon Fentress' hands; Fentress, who was his friend! Yet he would blindly accept the same gift from Converse, who tossed his name about like a child's bubble and would set his heel upon it when it pleased him!

She tried to warn Brian subtly against Converse's seeming friendship, but she discovered at once an unlooked for opposition.

"You are all woman in your judgment," he told her. "He is rather unlovely, I'll admit, if you consider externals, but as a man, he's big! Think of the things he's done. To be sponsored by him is a guarantee of one's sincerity."

Linda lowered her eyes. Were men always blind to one another? she wondered. Could they never see with a woman's eyes? She caught her breath with a sensation of dread, remembering back to the time when she had first known Converse. Had it been she who led the way, tantalizing him with glimpses of desire that would never come to fruition?

She was appalled by the fleeting vision of what she saw. Love was unveiling her eyes. "Am I like that?" she asked herself with sharp contempt.

THE appointment was a settled thing. Brian was going to Madrid. Brian had stepped over the heads of men who had spent years in the service. It was a beautiful appointment, far enough away from the seats of the mighty to veil his inexperience; close enough for him to benefit by the mistakes and failures of others.

Daisy Fentress, the one objector, was becoming reconciled.

"Father says that if Brian makes no mistakes, no false moves, he will be made in a few years," the young girl said wistfully.

Her secret was there in her eyes for all to read. She was an humble little hero worshiper in spite of her millions and her undoubted charm. She would have been quite content to be a doormat for the man she loved, if he had wanted to walk upon her.

"If he makes no false moves," she repeated as if the words had some baleful charm.

Linda stirred restlessly.

"What possible mistake could he make? The stage is all set for him."

"But I shall have a word to say about your lovers," he smiled.

Daisy chanted, "Father says there are so many pitfalls for a young statesman—extravagance, the wrong friends, the wrong woman."

Their eyes met. Daisy's were as innocent as her name. She had meant nothing.

Something melted in Linda's heart. A flood of sorrow that she could never offer the gifts that this young girl possessed without knowing that they were hers. From the years one event leaped out at her which semed to remove her for all time from the aura of youth and happy innocence, the blow across her face from Courtney Roth's hand seared as if it had been struck yesterday.

"Let us believe, if we can, that the woman he loves will be the right woman," she said gently.

FROM Washington Brian wrote in a way that revealed his heart with almost cruel clarity. Linda could find no doubt there; only the humility and reverence with which some men approach the women they love. This attitude touched her profoundly. Tenderness was new to her.

But what was to come of it all? When that question persistently arose to torment her she tried to put it aside with all the easy excuses that are the habit of the procrastinator. Brian would go away. Circumstances would separate them; they would both forget. But in these reflections there was no solace; instead, far from forgetting, she found the need for him growing day by day.

There were other troubles. Money.

The delayed check arrived from the broker with a stiff notation of the deduction that was credited to Senator Converse. Her cheeks burned when she saw that, and recalled her humiliation. For a moment she felt a stinging desire to look the truth in the face—to be honest with herself. She was not deceived with this elaborate pretense, but unless she accepted it nothing remained but chaos.

The check was comparatively small, but it came at a moment which exaggerated its importance. As if warned by telepathy, poor Linda's creditors seemed to have chosen that morning for a united foray. She was facing a pile of bills and letters, some of them even threatening in a deadly polite sort of way, when the dove of peace dropped the blue slip bearing the signature of Stevens into her lap.

The money vanished.

How did it happen? Linda, who thought she had learned the lesson of prudence, discovered her purse almost empty once more. Some new pride within her rebelled against subterfuge with these people who had trusted her, and she paid it freely out to dressmakers and milliners while it lasted. They were placated, and urged her to buy again, but she would not, although spring peeped temptingly through the new leaves of the gray old trees in the park. The shops were full of lovely things, but she bought nothing. The hat she had chosen on that walk with Brian had been the last purchase.

Time crept by, and brought March. She was still in the city—alone, so far as her circle of friends was concerned, for the frightful weather had driven every one away. But she did not miss them. She was marking time until Brian would be gone.

Then, she believed, she would be safe. It would be possible then to come to some conclusion—to look things in the face; return to her old way of living and thinking, or to find that other channel her soul was dimly striven for.

But not while Brian was there with his pedestals. That would make it much too hard; better to be silent; far better to let him think of her cold, indifferent, while she was near.

Converse wrote her a brief note from Washington, where he had gone into session.

"Why not run down here for a few weeks? There's lots going on and you might amuse yourself playing chaperone to your friend Antsey and little Miss Fentress."

SHE was astonished at the surge of feeling those few sentences aroused in her. She had coupled Brian and Daisy in her own thoughts, but this was different. This was seeing them through the world's eyes. This made possibility of conjecture.

Together they had everything! Youth, wealth, ambition. Their future was limitless. Suddenly she felt old and on the shelf. What was she doing, immured in her solitude, under gray skies when the others were finding life gay and happy together? She had been cheated of her girlhood, and now womanhood had as little to offer. But if the senator's letter plunged her into deeper depression, on the other hand it aroused her from lassitude and made action imperative.

She went to see Stevens, and laid a long Manila envelop on the flat desk before him.

"I want to leave New York," she said. "These are the last. Will you see what you can do for me?"

The broker, a dry, flat man, drew the corners of the crackly parchment papers from the flap of the envelop, and glanced at them. Light and Power . . . Traction . . . Little Maud Oil . . . He smiled imperceptibly.

"Well, we have placed a great deal of this stuff . . . Perhaps . . ."

"You said this was good and I have kept it until the last," she interrupted impatiently. She was biting her lip . . . an amazing sign of nervousness in her.

Mr. Stevens raised his yellowish brows.

"Only a month ago . . . we forwarded our check."

"What of that? The securities had been in your hands since October!"

"Very well. I will do what I can." He turned away. Brokers have a uniform antipathy to irritable clients.

Linda, who had always swept in and out of that office as a queen, lingered hesitant at the door.

"There is an obligation which is troubling me. My bill at the St. Sevier has been running a long time. They must have a payment from this money." She spoke thoughtfully, as if the stock was already sold and she had only to disburse its equivalent.

Mr. Stevens was shocked. This was an error in tactics for which he was unprepared. He had nothing whatever to do with the liabilities or embarrassments of his clients.

"The bookkeeper will forward the check to your address, Mrs. Roth," he said frigidly.

And so Linda assured the manager of her hotel that he would hear from her within the week. She was giving up her rooms for good—leaving New York. Politely asked for an address, she answered vaguely, "Washington."

She had been in that city many times, but now her heart beat as madly as any sixteen year old who gets her first peep at the world through the historic if utterly dull and plebeian hordes that migrate to and from the political center at every season.

She had sent no word of her coming to the two men who would be interested in seeing her, but twenty minutes after her bags were brought up she telephoned Converse to come to her. His response was so pleased and triumphant that she was smiling faintly when she turned from the telephone.

When they met an hour later he still wore the manner of victory, but this disappeared at her first words.

"I have given everything into Stevens' hands," she said. "Soon the last bit of paper I possess will be gone, and then—you will be troubled with my poor little affairs no longer." She tried to speak lightly, disguising the meaning of her words with mockery.

His face altered at once but not with disappointment; rather it was with a closing down of pleasantry, a tightening of every muscle in that visage which beneath its purple mask of flesh remained crafty and sinister.

THE SMALL TRAGEDY OF MR. TIDD - - - - - - By E. Phillips Oppenheim

a man who had passed through the anguish of hell could have told it. Before him the young man sat paralyzed with the horror of the slowly unfolded drama. He himself lived through the agony of those cold days and sleepless nights. He had been told not to interrupt. Interruption would have been impossible. His tongue seemed dry and there was a lump in his throat.

"Now I come," Mr. Tidd wound up, and his tone seemed to have a hard rasp in it, "to the day when you arrived, drew a hundred pounds without filling in the amount, and, believing me, as every one else does, to be an honest man, left your letter of credit on my counter. I tried to give it back to you that night. You begged me to take care of it. I have taken care of it. I have filled in the amount you drew from me for a thousand pounds instead of a hundred. I have straightened my books so that the inspector, who will be here in about ten minutes from now, will find nothing wrong. I am a thief, you understand. If you lean out of the window, you will see a little cloud of dust at the top of the hill there. That is Mr. Nevinson, my inspector, coming. There is your letter of credit. You will see how cleverly I have dealt with it. You have only to make your complaint to the inspector. I shall deny nothing."

Then Mr. Jeremiah H. Preedy found his tongue. Before Mr. Tidd knew exactly what was happening, he felt his right hand grasped in a huge palm, and the young man's other around his shoulders. The latter's words were as forceful as his actions.

"If you call yourself a thief again," he shouted, "I'll stuff the words down your throat. Don't you realize you've got the bulliest, most wonderful daughter that ever breathed? Why, there never was such a girl in the world! And there never was such a father, pinching and saving up for fifteen years to pay for her schooling! Why, man, sit up and take notice. You don't owe any one a cent. Open a credit account for yourself with that five thousand, if you need it, and draw what you want, right away. I know what salary you've been getting. You wait till I get hold of my friend Bill Netley! Sylvia's going to marry me, do you hear? Money isn't worth a snap of the fingers beside a girl like that! And don't you think I'm trying to talk money to you, but just get this into your head. There isn't going to be another moment of your life when you need think about what you're spending. I guess I'm talking nonsense, but I want to get this matter square. You're all right, sir. Just shake hands and tell me I may have Sylvia. Say, who's this?"

UNHEARD and unnoticed, the car had arrived, and Mr. Nevinson had made his stately way into the inner office. He looked at the unfamiliar little scene disapprovingly.

"I trust I am not intruding, Mr. Tidd?" he said formally. "You will forgive me if I leave my hat and coat here before commencing my work?"

Mr. Jeremiah Preedy faced the newcomer deferentially.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Tidd," he said. "I was a little carried away. Won't you introduce me to this gentleman?"

"This," the bank manager announced, rising to his feet, "is Mr. Jeremiah H. Preedy of New York—Mr. Nevinson, our chief inspector for this district."

"Any relation of Preedy, the banker?" Mr. Nevinson inquired, holding out his hand.

"Well, I'm Jacob Preedy's son," was the pleasant reply, "and a partner in the business. I've got letters of introduction to your folk in town, and I rather think Lord Netley was expecting me to spend this week-end with him. I've been laid up here, though, by a slight motor accident, and Mr. Tidd has been good enough to look after me."

"I am proud to meet you, sir," Mr. Nevinson declared, with the air of one who has intruded upon royalty. "It is a great privilege to meet any one connected with your firm."

The young man smiled his acknowledgments.

"See here," he said, "you and I understand one another, Mr. Tidd, I think. If you'll excuse me, I'll get over to the tennis courts with Sylvia for an hour. When you two have got through juggling with those figures I'd like to have you both come and take luncheon with me at the Melhampton Arms."

"It will be a great honor," Mr. Nevinson assented, in an awed tone.

Mr. Tidd said nothing, but it was perhaps just as well that his spectacles were a little cloudy.

At ten minutes past one the district inspector closed the ledger. He smiled amiably across at the branch manager.

"I find your books quite in order, Mr. Tidd," he pronounced, "quite as I expected. I may add that I think the time has arrived when I must append to my note of general approval a certain recommendation which I imagine will produce results not altogether displeasing to you. I will now fetch my coat and hat. We must not keep young Mr. Preedy waiting. It is a great privilege to meet a member of that illustrious firm."

The beneficent words rang in Mr. Tidd's ears. He picked up his own hat with trembling fingers. He looked over the wire blind and he saw the fading away of his nightmares. By Mr. Nevinson's side he walked primly down the street, very much like a man in a dream. He nodded in friendly fashion to Percy Shields; he bowed with dignity to the squire's lady, who was motoring through; he took condescending but gracious notice of Mr. Pleydell, whose account with the bank was standing a little better. But when he walked into the coffee room at the Melhampton Arms and found Sylvia holding out a glass toward him which Mr. Jeremiah Preedy, who seemed miraculously to have become Jere, was filling with amber colored liquid from a silver receptacle, he felt a sudden spasm of gratitude.

"Drink it down, dad," Sylvia enjoined him, looking curiously into his face. "We've been half an hour making it and it tastes like nectar."

Mr. Tidd drank it down and the world began

NEVER in Mr. Tidd's wildest imaginings—and there had been times in his younger days when he had permitted his thoughts to stray outside the confines of Melhampton—had he dreamed of occupying such a position as was thrust upon him during the next few weeks. He was entertained by and exchanged conversation apparently on equal terms with the head of the great firm of Netley, a peer of the realm, a man whose movements Mr. Tidd had followed reverently in the newspapers, but with whom he had never dared to imagine himself in personal converse. In friendly conversation with his prospective son-in-law, he was actually offered a position in their head bank at York and a salary of four thousand pounds a year.

Perhaps the most wonderful thing of all, however, was his appearance at St. George's, Hanover For many years he had cultivated the walk with after having tested the charity of the Melhampton gregation, he had made his dignified progress aisle to the altar of the parish church. He had tered himself that that walk contained all the tials of distinction, reverence, and personality. clothes concerning which he had no qualm, and Sylvia upon his arm, he felt, however, that he left all previous records behind him. It was a of intoxication, the culmination of weeks of It was not even marred by the first words of dation upon his deportment which he received—a on the back from his son-in-law, ten minutes after ceremony was concluded, and one of those pungent sentences by means of which the occasionally betrayed his transatlantic birth.

"Say, the old man did look the goods, didn't Sylvia!"

It was crude praise, perhaps, but heartfelt, much so as the parting words which his whispered in his ear a few minutes before his with Sylvia for the continent, whence they return direct to New York.

"Father-in-law," he said, "you're a brick. I'll after Sylvia all right, don't you worry, and we'll over again in the spring for that tour through shire. I'm sorry you can't make up your mind to up stakes and come over to New York, but as as you've made up your mind to spend the rest of days at Melhampton, just put this envelope in pocket. It's a present from Sylvia and me."

The wonderful day ended in a tangle of misty pleasant recollections, but before he went to bed Tidd unfastened the envelope and found himself proud possessor of five thousand pounds' worth Bearer war bonds.

ALMOST the first client to present himself in bank on the morning of the manager's return Mr. Percy Shields. Notwithstanding the great in Mr. Tidd's circumstances, his manner remained fable, even gracious.

"I am very glad to see you this morning, Shields," he said, after the first amenities had exchanged. "We are recommencing our bridge this evening. The doctor and the others are with me at half-past seven. A little celebration—of my daughter's wedding and my return. It will me great pleasure if you will join us."

"I shall be delighted," was the murmured

"And now what can I do for you in the way of ness?" Mr. Tidd inquired, in his best professional

Mr. Shields made a grimace.

"Things haven't been going quite as they with my last little gamble," he confessed. "I you to sell one of my war bonds for me and put amount to my credit."

Mr. Tidd frowned slightly. It was his business frown when a client lost money instead of making He produced the necessary papers, however, handed the pen across the counter.

"You know my opinion, Mr. Shields," he said ly. "In the long run, a man does best to stick to calling. Speculation does not pay."

"I believe you are right," the veterinary acknowledged humbly.

Caravans and Cannibals

By MARY HASTINGS BRADLEY

REMEMBER how you thrilled to the stories of darkest Africa as told by Stanley, by Roosevelt, and a half dozen other explorers of "the dark continent"?

Mary Hastings Bradley, world-famous explorer and author, has written for The Tribune the day by day story of her most recent expedition into the Belgian Congo and the hidden country of the cannibal Bahuni, where no more than a handful of white men have ever set foot.

The first chapter of Caravans and Cannibals, a new Blue Ribbon feature, will appear in the roto magazine section next Sunday, Sept. 13th. Watch for it!
